A recent paper from Spokane, Wash., gives a glowing account of the big meeting there of the Knights templar on Christmas. Among the speeches, was one by our friend Harry Rush, and we can imagine how Harry blushed when he rose to address these eminent masons from all over the new state. However, he made a good speech, just as all Auburn boys can.

Auditor C. C. Walter will have an important sale of stock and farming tools next week, on Thursday, Jan. 19. There is a valuable lot of fine horses, cattle, etc., including some full blood, and part blood Jerseys. There is also a big lot of farming implements such as binders, mowers, wagons, etc., and about 25 tons of hay. Remembery it is Jan. 19.

The Junior class of our High School has assumed the great responsibility of engaging the OVIDE MUSIN company, to give an entertainment here Wednesday evening, Feb. 1, and they should be encouraged by every citizen interested in our public schools. The securing of such a remarkable company is no small undertaking for the class, and shows an enterprise on the part of the young people worthy the admiration and patronage of every citizen.

When you are looking for bargains don't forget that your money's worth and more is obtained when you buy Brant's Balsam, acknowledged the best cough remedy to be had. Mr. Saml. S Putt the business manager of the Keeley Institute to be located here is from Akron, O. He is a "cured" man by the Keeley treatment and an enthusiastic Keeleyite. He is a popular, energetic young man in his own home and has a reputation for mechanical ability that is second to none. Mr. Putt will make his home here and at once become a full fledged Auburnite. His wife will soon join her husband and for a permanent residence.

Clerk Moody had a funny experience with a bat last week. In some way the animal got into the clerk's office, and not caring to turn him out to freeze in such cold weather, Mr. Moody allowed him to stay in. He flew about in the room that day, but caused no trouble. The next morning he was not in sight, and Mr. Moody took a look in every corner, knowing he could not have got out of the room. At last, looking under the stairway, it was found he had got into a can of paint the workmen had left in there while making repairs. In his struggle with the sticky stuff he had flopped out on the floor, and left spots of paint all about. The poor fellow was nearly exhausted, and finding he was not able to get rid of the paint, he was at last turned out, a considerable the worse for his visit to the county clerk's office.

World's Fair Notice.

I am building a fine residence on the shore of Lake Michigan one mile south of the world's fair grounds. These rooms will be nicely furnished and rented during the world's fair season. The Keeley Cure for the Tobacco Habit.

The tobacco habit today is sapping the foundation of American manhood and too much cannot be said against this body-demoralizing abomination of the present day. More men are poisoned by tobacco each year than by whisky.

It will effectually break up an inveterate tobacco habit without injury to the patient. Its results will be at once manifested in a uniform appetite, restful sleep and active, mental force.

These remedies of Dr. Leslie E. Keeley are sold only in pairs (a pair is two bottles of 8 oz. each), at $5 per pair, and can be taken at home.

Instructions sent with the remedy.

Enclose remittances (money order or check) with your orders. The Remedy will be carefully shipped by Express if so desired. Address:

THE KEELEY INSTITUTE,

IT WILL COME TO AUBURN.

Our City Wins the Prize, as Against Fort Wayne and Many Attractive Neighboring Towns.

THE INSTITUTE TO BE OPENED—MR. PUTT AND CAPTAIN MATTOX TALK OF THEIR PLANS—A GRAND WORK TO BE DONE, AND OUR PEOPLE CAN HELP IT—THE ENTERPRISING CITIZENS WHO CAPTURED THE PLUM.

Capt. A. H. Mattox and Mr. Samuel S. Putt, the gentlemen who have charge of locating The Keeley Institute in this part of Indiana, have decided to establish the Institute in Auburn.

These gentlemen have visited many of the towns adjacent to Fort Wayne, with a view to finding just what they wanted for their project, and have thoroughly canvassed Fort Wayne as to its desirability. It is greatly to the credit of our city that in her more than any other place in northeastern Indiana just the qualifications for this most worthy enterprise were found.

Said Messrs. Putt and Mattox yesterday: "We have taken a good deal of time to decide this matter, as we could not afford to make a mistake. We have visited many of the towns in this part of the State, and have looked over Fort Wayne carefully. We had about decided to locate in Fort Wayne, when our attention was called to Auburn. We visited your little city, and were most favorably impressed at once. A number of your citizens learnt of our visit to Auburn, and with an enterprise that speaks well for them and the interest they take in their own town, they called on us at the Avline Hotel in Fort Wayne, and gave us assurance of the sympathy, encouragement and aid of the people of Auburn, if we would locate there. Your valuable railroad facilities, having three of the big railroads of the country connecting Auburn with the rest of the world; your wide, clean streets; your splendid cement pavements; your handsome and abundant shade trees; your beautiful churches; your good hotels and electric lights; your bright and busy stores, and above all the cordiality of your citizens whom we have met, all had much to do with influencing us to decide in favor of Auburn.

"We have come to stay. Our enterprise is for decency, good citizenship, temperance and happy homes. We want to be of you and to join you in all good things for Auburn. We will open our Institute just as soon as possible, by the 12th of January if we can, and not later than the 16th. We will advertise Auburn all over the United States, and if our enterprise is successful we will bring several hundred strangers to Auburn every year, and that means a good many thousand dollars will yearly be put in circulation here that you do not get now. We expect to begin slow, do not look for a 'boom', but our business will steadily increase as our patients go away cured and send their friends who need treatment.

"We cordially invite the citizens of Auburn to visit the Institute, and hope they will all take an interest in it and the good work we expect to do. Our patients will be governed by rigid rules, and will be required to deport themselves like gentlemen. If they do not, we will dismiss them and send them out of town on the first train. We do not believe we have made a mistake in coming to Auburn, and hope the results will prove we are right. Every man, woman and child in Auburn can help us by being polite and kind to the patients, and the class of men who will come here for treatment will surprise you. We will have lawyers, judges, bankers, merchants, mechanics, farmers, professional men, doctors, clerks, in fact, men from all fields in life.

"We will not board any patients at the Institute. They can select a boarding house for themselves, and we would like to have all persons who will keep boarders call at the Institute as soon as we are open to inform us as to how many boarders they can accommodate, give their terms and get information as to how they shall care for the boarders."

The gentlemen upon the citizens' committee who have interested themselves in getting the Keeley Institute to locate in Auburn, and who have worked hard for it, making several visits to Fort Wayne at their own expense and at loss of time are: Messrs. W. D. Rickel, Trout, Hollister, Shaffer, Barns and Sprott.

They deserve the thanks of our people for their enterprise. We cordially welcome Mr. Putt and Capt. Mattox and their enterprise to Auburn, and feel safe in saying they will receive encouragement and a kind reception from every man, woman and child in our town.

The work of the Keeley Institute, like that of the church, is for the salvation and redemption of men, and the reformation in the past few years of 100,000 drinking men and women by Dr. Keeley and his wonderful discovery in the science of medicine is one of the phenomena of the phenomenal age in which we live. God speed the grand work of the Keeley Institutes, and may the Keeley Institute of Auburn be especially successful.

It is Genuine.

As some of our people were inclined to doubt the genuineness of the Keeley Institute now located here, J. C. Henry wrote to the original Institute at Dwight Ill., where Dr. Keeley himself has his headquarters, and has received the following reply:

DWIGHT, ILL., JANUARY 9, 1893.

J. C. HENRY, Esq., Farmers' Bank,
AUBURN, Ind.

DEAR SIR:— Have your favor of 7th, and in reply would say that Capt. A. H. Mattox, of Cincinnati, is the Representative Manager and Treasurer of The Keeley Institute, Madisonville, Ohio, as shown inside first page of enclosed pamphlet. He has been perfecting arrangements for the past few weeks with a view to establishing The Keeley Institute at Fort Wayne, or in that vicinity, conducting such arrangements through the Keeley Institute, Plainfield, Ind., who are our agents for that State. Whatever representations Capt. Mattox may make to your people, or arrangements he may perfect with them, will no doubt be properly consummated through The Keeley Institute, Plainfield, Ind. We can say in this connection that the Remedies used will be Dr. Keeley's Genuine Double Chloride of Gold Remedies, and when the Keeley Institute is established these Remedies and Supplies will be furnished from Dwight, Ill., the same as we are supplying the ninety authorized Keeley Institutes in the United States. We notice by the Fort Wayne papers that Auburn has been selected as a location, and we hope your people will give The Keeley Institute such recognition and support as will make its permanency with you pleasant and profitable. Very truly yours,
THE LESLIE E. KEELEY CO.

NEW JERSEY has a negro who, if the local chroniclers are to be believed, has not swallowed a morsel of food, liquid or solid, for sixty-five days, but has steadily gained in weight. The case, concerning which doctors seem puzzled, is altogether simple. The local chroniclers are not to be believed.

SENATOR PROCTOR, of Vermont, objects to his new house in Washington being referred to as a "palace." "The rose by any other name would smell as sweet," and whether Mr. Proctor refers to his $200,000 residence as a house or a villa there can be no question about the palatial hospitality for which it will be famous.

OHIO juries do not believe in large fees for doctors. At a recent trial in Cincinnati of a suit brought to recover a doctor's bill the jury cut the claim down from $10,000 to $700. Considering that the bill was for 597 visits the verdict cannot be regarded as a heavy one; but a good many will agree with the jury that the bill was excessive.

A LOT of bad boys in New York lassoed a street-car conductor the other day and jerked him from his car. This incident, which was published in an unobtrusive way in one or two of the New York papers, would have been honored with a scare head and editorial comment if it had been telegraphed as a news item from Chicago.

HUNTERS in Idaho are sending out marvelous reports of captures. They have not yet mentioned the taking of a do-do or a sea serpent. Those unfamiliar with the prowess of the Idaho hunter might ascribe this to the fact that the do-do is extinct and the sea serpent rare so far inland, but to others the omission appears to be clearly due to an oversight.

SOMETHING was recently published in Punch that had every outward appearance of being a joke. While people were marveling over a circumstance so violently defiant of precedent, Punch explained that the jest had been due to a deplorable typographical error, and that its repetition would be guarded against with the utmost care. So the stain on the reputation of the somber and ponderous journal may be considered effaced.

AN Iowa man has been selling diplomas of high degree for the reasonable sum of $30, placing them within easy reach of the illiterate and lowly. So great has his business become that the corn crop of the State was being husked by Masters of Art, and swill carried to the pigs by Bachelors of Science. Having accomplished this much for education, the Iowan was arrested, and his whole stock in trade, inclusive of his own thrifty person, is in the hands of a receiver.

THE microscope recently revealed to a Rhode Island expert that certain bloodstains were of human origin, and certain hairs found in conjunction with the stains were from the whiskers of a man. Detectives scurried hither and thither. They traced all clews faithfully, and ascertained that they centered in the limp carcass of a yellow dog, slain with a brick. The strides of science are often marvelous, none the less so perhaps because not always in the right direction.

REPORTS of a recent prize-fight describe the fighters as brawny gladiators, and state that when they got real gory the smell of warm blood drove the spectators wild with enthusiasm. It would appear from these facts that all a burly ruffian has to do to become a brawny gladiator—a much more dignified being—is to enter the ring and have his veins tapped. As to the warm blood at which civilization sniffed in delighted frenzy, more of it and of better quality can be scented in any slaughter-house.

A GENTLEMAN whose superiority of stomach brings into sharp and painfull prominence the lack of superiority characterizing his organs of thought, has undertaken to fast for fifty days. At the start he weighed 130 pounds, and he has been losing flesh at the rate of two and one-half pounds per day. Even an amateur arithmetician can figure out that at the end of less than fifty days a light and airy corpse will have been dedicated to the cause of science. But to what extent science will profit is not a problem that any amateur can grapple with confidence.

THE idea that by constructing war vessels for the lakes Canada or Great Britain reveals an intention to attack the United States is a wide stretch of the imagination. To be sure, the construction or launching of such vessels on the lakes is a violation of treaty stipulations. It is exactly what Canada or England would do if war were designed; but the inverse of this proposition is not true—to wit, that the war vessels disclose a war purpose. The security of the United States does not lie in her own armament or in the disarmament of her neighbors. Her peaceful intentions and her desire to yield to all just demands, her refusal to become embroiled in European questions, are her best guaranty of peace. Add to this her geographical isolation, her resources, intelligence, patriotism, and growth, and the idea of a voluntary assailant becomes an absurdity. If Canada, however, is violating treaty rights she ought to be reminded of it. If her violation should lead up to an abrogation of the treaty it is not likely that evil would result. The United States Government does not particularly need war vessels on the lakes, but the right to float them there would do no harm.

Remarkable Hypnotism.

I went to Vienna some years ago to study and saw some wonderful things done by the professor who lectured on hypnotism. One of the most remarkable examples of hyphotic effect, and one of which but little is known, is the connection of ideas between the hypnotic state and the normal condition.

For instance, I saw a young German girl hypnotized. Toward the close of the experiment the professor told the girl that in half an hour he wanted her to strike the tallest man in the room with a glass rod, and that she must get the watch of Dr. ——, one of the assistants, without fail. In a few moments the girl was restored to her normal state and asked us a number of questions about what she had said and done. Then we began to chat on other matters. Just thirty minutes after the command of the professor the girl became restless and walked quickly to a table on which lay a glass rod. She then came and struck me with it sharply several times.

"Why do you do that, fraulein?" I asked.

"Oh, I don't know. I don't know," she answered in a much distressed tone, "but I have to do it; something tells me to do it."

She then went to Dr. —— and asked for his watch. At first he refused to give it to her, and she became frantic in her pleadings, saying she must have it at once, and she seized him and tried to take it from him. That is but one of the many instances I have seen where commands given out to a hypnotized person were carried out later when they were in normal condition. Once this same girl did what she was told a week after the experiment, that being the time fixed by the professor.

WHAT LOW TARIFF DID

GAVE THE COUNTRY UNRIVALLED PROSPERITY.

Great Revenues Produced by the Low Ad Valorem Tariffs of 1846 and 1857—Why Farmers Are Dissatisfied—The Potato Tax—Wages in Germany.

Specific and Ad Valorem Duties.

Apparently, indirect taxation is fastened to this country for some time to come. An income tax may be levied by our next Congress to enable us to meet our enormous expenditures without increasing any duties, but the bulk of our revenue will continue to come from duties on imports. It is therefore well to consider whether our next tariff bill should be based upon specific or ad valorem duties.

In most of our high and protective tariff bills specific duties have predominated. This is particularly true of the McKinley bill. In the proposed Mills bill, and in most low and non-protective tariff bills, ad valorem duties were the rule. In the Walker bill, in force from 1846 to 1857, and in the so-called "free-trade bill" in force from 1857 to 1861, all duties were ad valorem.

Protectionists and makers of high-tariff bills naturally turn to specific duties as an easy way of increasing duties on the sly. Thus nearly all of the numerous "jobs" in the McKinley bill were perpetrated by means of specific duties. Nobody except a few interested persons supposed that when the ad valorem duty of 25 per cent. on pearl buttons was increased by a specific duty of 2½ cents per line, the increase would amount to much; yet the increase amounted to from 200 to 2,000 per cent., making the actual duty in some cases as high as 400 per cent. In this same tricky way duties on cutlery, gloves, music wire, goat hair and many other articles were greatly increased.

But protectionists also favor specific duties, because they are certain means of preventing the natural decline of prices and of giving increased protection. Thus a duty of 5 cents per yard on unbleached cotton cloth gave a protection of 50 per cent. when this cloth was selling at 10 cents in 1864. Because of improved machinery, this cloth, in 1890, could be sold for 4½ cents, and the protection had increased to over 100 per cent. This same process has been going on with sugar, steel rails, structural steel, and in fact with most dutiable articles in the McKinley bill. "The title of the bill should be so changed" (said the Hon. John A. Kasson, in 1866, of a tariff bill), "as to read, 'A bill to prevent the diffused blessings of Providence from being enjoyed by the people of the United States.'" If he had said, "A bill to prevent the diffused blessings of Providence and of improved methods of manufacture from reaching the people and to turn all over to combines, corporations and trusts" he would have accurately described the McKinley bill, with its specific duties to prevent consumers from getting much benefit from falling prices abroad, and at the same time giving increased protection to our hundreds of trusts to prevent the natural decline from home consumption.

For these very reasons, makers of the next tariff bill should avoid specific duties. There are other serious objections. Specific duties always discriminate against the poor, who are compelled to use the cheap articles, and in favor of the rich, who purchase expensive articles. Thus a duty of 44 cents per pound and 50 per cent. ad valorem on West of England broadcloth, that sells for $3.60 per yard, gives a protection of only 63 per cent. The same rate of duty on diagonal cheviot that sells for 76 cents per yard, yields a protection of 140 per cent. It is safe to say that for every dollar spent by the millionaire or by the day laborer the latter pays five times as much tariff taxes as the former.

Ad valorem duties are open to none of the above objections. If levied equally on cheap and costly goods, they tax the rich and the poor at the same rate—though, of course, the poor must spend a larger proportion of their earnings for tariff-taxed goods than the rich. Ad valorem duties permit consumers to get the full benefit of declining prices and they will not subserve the purpose of those who wish to put up tariff "jobs" on the people. The one grave objection to ad valorem duties is that they lead to undervaluation, especially when the duties are high or when the goods are extremely valuable. Thus the duty of about 70 per cent. on most kind of gloves is a strong temptation to importers to undervalue their goods. It is said by good authorities that the undervaluations in this line will average 15 or 20 per cent. The dishonest glove importer then has an advantage of about 10 per cent. over the honest one in our markets. The temptation to undervaluation decreases rapidly as duties decline, and on most goods practically disappears when duties do not exceed 20 per cent., because an undervaluation of 10 per cent. then give an advantage of only 2 per cent. in our markets—not enough to compensate importers for the risk of being caught.

As a means of obtaining revenue, ad valorem duties are as effective as specific. With duties of from 5 to 30 per cent.—except on tobacco and liquors—in the Walker tariff of 1846, the amount of duties collected increased from $28,000,000, in 1847, to $63,000,000 in 1857. The revenues then exceeded the expenditures so much that the rates were lowered about 25 per cent. The great increase in revenue from 1847 to 1857, under this comparatively low tariff, came from increased imports due to great prosperity. Imports rose from $116,000,000 to $333,000,000; exports from $150,000,000 to $279,000,000; the price of wheat rose from an average of $1.02 from 1845 to 1847, to $1.51½ from 1843 to 1856—a price never equalled before or since; prices of corn, cotton, butter, wool and other farm products also increased about 33 per cent.; farm values increased about 50 per cent. The "free trade" tariff act of 1857 showed the same general effects.

These are some of the accompaniments of the low tariffs of 1846 and 1857. We hope our new tariff-makers will not neglect to study these lessons of history. Let them not forget that the only time the tariff question was ever settled to the satisfaction of all parties, so that neither party mentioned a tariff, was during our "Free Trade" ad valorem tariff period. If an impending war had not necessitated the raising of a great revenue, neither party would have dared to advocate higher duties. The farmers and the hard-working people can stand more of such "Free Trade" tariffs.—Byron W. Holt.

Why Farmers Are Dissatisfied.

Editor New York World:

As you call for opinions in the World, I will write a few lines. First, an extra session of Congress is demanded by the vote recorded last November. The Democratic party should take no step backward. To replace the duty on sugar is a step backward.

Sugar stands third in value of the food products consumed by the laboring people. They consume more in the average family than the wealthy, and consequently pay more of the tax. Far better remove all the duty; then the best sugar would be used without refining.

The proposed plan to tax incomes is perhaps the best and most just that has been proposed. As to farmers and mechanics not favoring it, not one in ten thousand of them has an income of $5,000 after paying working expenses.

Farming lands have been decreasing in value for the past twenty years. The best hop-growing lands in this county (Otsego) will not sell for more than one-half what they were worth from 1855 to 1860. The situation is the same through all the Eastern States. Furthermore, we should give away no more public lands. Make a price of $3 to $5 per per acre, which would produce an income and make the immigrant pay something for the privilege of a home in this land of liberty. Restrict immigration. Competition is too great in agriculture. I have mentioned Otsego County because I own land there on which I have worked and lived over fifty years, and I know whereof I write. I would probably be at work on it now were I able to work from twelve to eighteen hours a day, as most of the farmers now have to do who make farming a success. I cannot see how a farmer can be a Republican. All tariff taxes and business laws favor the manufacturer and dealer.—G. O. S.

The Potato Tax.

The potato crop of the country is much below the average this year, and the price of this important article of food is likely to be so high as to put it beyond the reach of multitudes of consumers. Statisticians, who are familiar with the market, have estimated that the home supply of potatoes will have been exhausted long before the time for the planting of the new crop. In this emergency it would be necessary to import large quantities of potatoes, and to pay upon them a McKinley tax of 25 cents on every bushel.

This tax could be of no benefit to the American farmers in any circumstances. When the potato crop has been abundant there has been a large quantity for export, and the tariff could have affected the price but little if at all. When there has been a failure the domestic crop has been consumed and sold at home before the foreign supply could come in; and a large portion of the farmers have been obliged to buy the highly taxed potatoes, not merely for food, but to plant for next year's crop. In short, when the farmers have had an abundance of potatoes to sell none have been imported; and when potatoes have been imported the farmers have had none to sell.

If a bill should be introduced in the House some Monday morning to repeal the burdensome tax on potatoes, under a suspension of the rules, it would doubtless be passed by a large majority; and the Senate would hardly fail to concur.—Philadelphia Record.

Wages in Germany.

The report of United States Consul Warner, at Cologne, Germany, recently received at the Department of State, contains some interesting statistics on the wages paid in various trades in that country last year.

The telegraphed summary says:

"The statistics collected embrace replies from 906 cities and 924 unions. The figures show that the wages have increased in only seven cities, in 229 they have declined, and in 670 they have remained stationary, while food products have been dearer. Only 211 cities of the whole number visited showed full employment, while in thirty places almost complete stoppage of work existed. In Germany the head of the household alone cannot earn sufficient to support his family."

This is the condition of affairs in a European country having a high protective tariff, copied from that of the United States by the great Bismarck, who thougt to reproduce in that old, thickly populated, army ridden, monarchical country the prosperity enjoyed in this newer and freer land, with its boundless opportunities and wonderful natural resources.

When Protectionists talked of "pauper wages" and hard conditions of life abroad, during the late canvass, they fought shy of protected Germany and quoted free-trade England, where the wages are higher than anywhere else in Europe.—New York World.

The Income Tax.

The income-tax plan seems also to commend itself. It is the opinion of the leading men that a bill to impose a progressively increasing tax on incomes above $10,000 would be passed by an overwhelming majority if presented in the House. How much revenue it would yield is problematical. That would depend somewhat upon the extent to which consciences have become more alert since the war-time income tax was abolished. That sometimes produced revenue and sometimes perjury. But that was in a time of general demoralization, and it is believed that a properly drawn income-tax law would yield an important revenue without unduly tempting to fraud and perjury.

Such a tax commends itself as ideally fair and reasonable. It places the heaviest burdens where they are most easily borne. It taxes superfluity instead of want, wealth rather than poverty, accumulation rather than industrial endeavor.—New York World.

The Tea Party.

Dressed in quaint frock of flowered green,
With a silk sash white and wide
Round her waist in neat bow tied,
Sits little fair-haired Josephine,
Of this feast the queen.
Before her on the table
Stand tapers, waxen, three,
By which her guests are able
To calculate and see
That their hostess' age is three;
Three to-day, those candles say,
In a very clear and candid way,
Is Miss Josephine,
Of to-day's feast the queen.

Her fingers, small, pink, slight,
Hold a cup of china, blue and white,
Which quite calmly she'll tilt up
In the saucer from the cup
To pour and cool her tea,
Never caring, no, not she—
But then, she is only three—
That that is not the way
One drinks one's tea
In company to-day.

Still, a great-great-grand-dame of Josephine,
Who, too, sometimes wore a frock of flowered green,
And of many a fine feast was the queen—
Though, sure, her name was not Josephine,
But simple and plain Penelope—
So was used to drink her tea.
One can almost fancy her to see
As she sits and slowly sips,
Holding up the saucer to red lips,
The fragrant, strong Bohea,
Listening in calm and courteous way
To what that beau, in suit of silver gray,
He who leans with such a grand and stately air
O'er the back of her carved chair,
May dare to say.

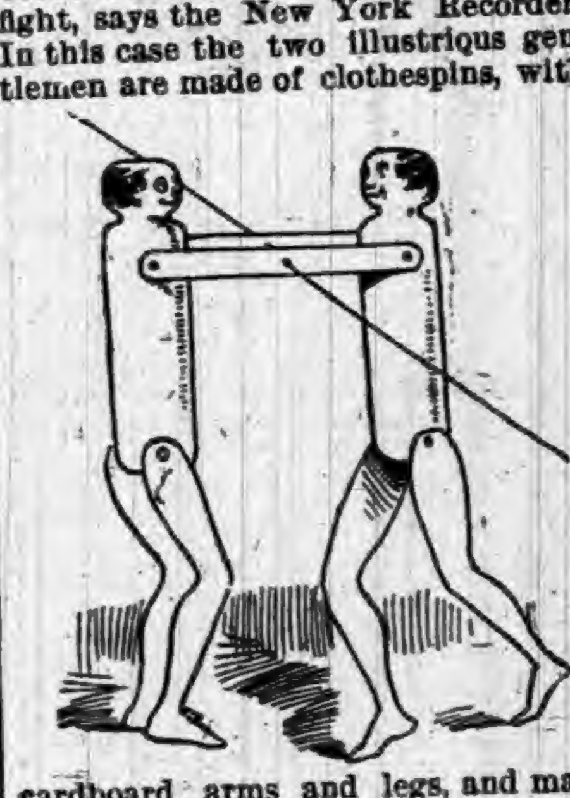
Prize Figthers.

Any enterprising boy may have a Corbett and Sullivan miniature prize fight, says the New York Recorder. In this case the two illustrious gentlemen are made of clothespins, with cardboard arms and legs, and manipulated with a string, as suggested by the illustration. They perform curious and amusing antics, such as their illustrious prototypes never dreamed of.



To manufacture these gentlemen, cut the clothespin half in two, and after cutting out the cardboard legs and arms after the pattern in the picture, fasten the members loosely to the wooden bodies with pins. The arms connect the combatants, and a string through the middle of the arms complete the marionettes. Pull the string gently and watch the result.

A fakir sold this ingenious toy on the street last week. He had a crowd of admiring juvenile spectators about him constantly. He voiced the acrobatic performances in eloquent tones calculated to attract attention in this wise:

"De Sullivan and Corbett prize fighters, only fi' c'ts each. You can have more fun out of this toy in ten minutes den you can out of any odder toy in a week. They never gits tired fighting, and they never gits knocked out." Here he illustrates: "Now the great Corbett and Sullivan will shake hands. Now, den—time and wind up." Here a vigorous manipulation of the string produces an active encounter.

Use of Copper.

It has been suggested copper might fittingly be used in place of iron or steel for the building of ships. The prevention of the adherence of barnacles to a ship's bottom would result in a considerable saving in cleaning, fuel and time, while the copper plates, after years of service, would sell for high prices.

W. Baker & Co.'s Breakfast Cocoa is a very comforting drink as the weather grows colder. One of its special merits, giving it a great advantage over tea and coffee, is its heat-giving quality; it fortifies delicate constitutions against the cold, supplying an easily appropriated fuel for those internal fires upon the adequate support of which, health and happiness depend. W. Baker & Co.'s Breakfast Cocoa may therefore be especially commended as a morning drink, and many people who are liable to sleeplessness have found that a cup of it taken hot on going to bed brings a sound and refreshing sleep. It is absolutely pure, and it is soluble. Unlike the Dutch process, no alkalies or other chemicals are used in its manufacture.

HOW DEMOCRACY WON.

MANNER OF CONDUCTING THE LATE CAMPAIGN.

The Western Branch of the Democratic National Committee and How It Did Its Work—A Recital from Which Politicians May Gather Hints.

A Campaign of Education.

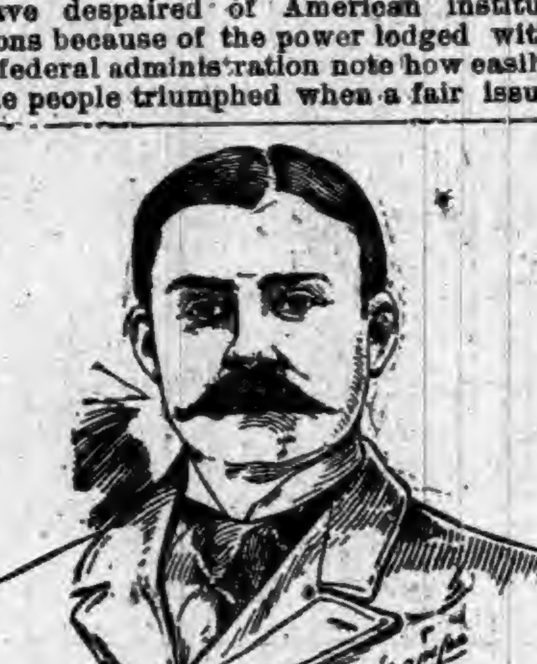
When a great political victory has been gained immediately the victors seek some individual upon whom to lavish their praise for the result. Thus, when the late political revolution left only scattered relics of a once formidable—and a once honored—party, there were those who believed the event due to the strategy of single minds who had organized victory for the people. But as the glow of enthusiasm settles into the calmer study of the campaign, its results and possibilities, thoughtful minds look deeper and discover that praise is due rather for the organization of the people for victory than for the organizing of victory for the people.

The political revolution in Illinois is worthy of study by all who would take part in American politics. A generation had passed away since the people of Illinois had elected a Democratic governor. Illinois Democrats had so long been accustomed to nominate candidates for State officers only to meet defeat that they had come to look upon the quadrennial struggle as one of the efforts to be made to preserve their organization. Other Western States had, in off years, rebuked the dominant party by electing Democrats to office, but the fierce heat of a Presidential election had always fused the old elements and given the electoral vote to the party of monopoly.

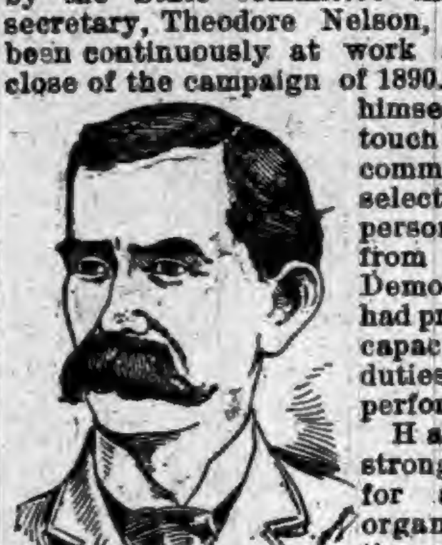
Into the campaign of 1892 the Democrats brought a new factor. They appreciated the impossibility of conducting the contest in the west from a headquarters on the Atlantic coast. To aid the State organizations of the west a branch of the National Democratic Committee was established in Chicago. The work of that branch was to co-operate with the local committees and bring to the polls the largest possible Democratic army. Let those who have believed that the result in Illinois was due alone to the work of one man or one committee during the short campaign of nine weeks note the progress of the contest as it developed at the western headquarters. Let those who have despaired of American institutions because of the power lodged with a federal administration note how easily the people triumphed when a fair issue had been presented and a campaign marked out in which they were to be trusted. But let no one imagine that the purpose of this record is to detract one iota from the praise lavished upon the active head of the western committee. It is to belittle his work to say that he carried Illinois. It is his due to record the fact that he helped show the people of Illinois how to overthrow the entrenched Republican party. The name of Ben T. Cable has been upon many tongues. Those best appreciate his services to the nation who understand the nature of the campaign he marked out and carried to a successful conclusion.



BEN T. CABLE.

Head of the Committee.

Ben T. Cable is still a new hand in the Democratic army. Not yet forty years of age, he has achieved what is called political succes, rather through his keen insight into popular thought than by the arts of the merely practical politician. He entered Congress as the successful candidate from a Republican stronghold after a campaign in which there had been a signal lack of bombast and red fire. Studying the result of his effort in a Congressional district, he believed it could be extended over the State and into other States. He believed the people were tired of excessive taxation, and that, on the issue presented by the Chicago convention, they would rally to the support of the Democratic party. He appreciated the nature of the contest and the necessity of utilizing every possible factor for its accomplishment. There remained but two months for work when his committee had organized and chosen their headquarters. So far as the contest in Illinois was concerned, he had the advantage of work already done by the State committee through its secretary, Theodore Nelson, who had been continuously at work since the close of the campaign of 1890. Placing himself in close touch with that committee, he selected his personal staff from among Democrats who had proved their capacity for the duties to be performed.



W. J. MIZE.

Having a strong nucleus for a perfect organization in the various county committees and their appointees in townships and school districts, Mr. Cable determined to extend this into every precinct in the State. Nearly half a million voters were to be reached. The task was herculean, and a veritable Hercules of organization was chosen in the person of the secretary of the committee, Mr. W. J. Mize, formerly for many years secretary of the Illinois State Democratic Committee. Mr. Mize demonstrated as the campaign progressed his full sympathy with the plan of work marked out. He is not given to fuss or feathers. He cares little for the old-fashioned methods of campaigning. Taking the lists of county chairmen furnished by the secretary of the State Committee, his first work was to send to each a personal letter asking for the names of the local committeemen, and assuring each that the committee had determined to make a vigorous effort to carry the State. The responses came with encouraging promptness, and those who lagged were reminded by urgent appeals for haste. Then other letters were drafted and sent to the school district and precinct committeemen calling for active canvass of their localities. Soon a communication was sent to the school district and precinct committeemen asking for the names of Democrats of the various professions and industries.

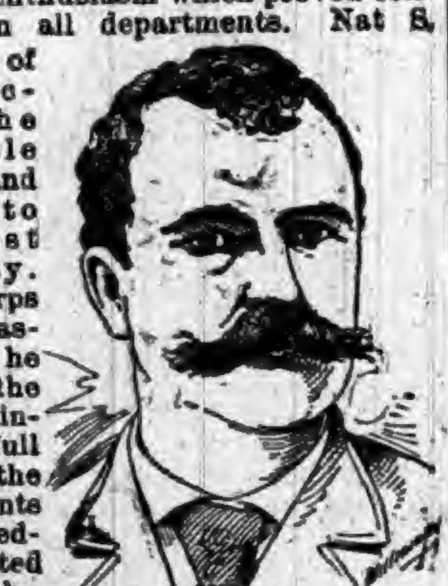
Then there flowed to the Secretary's desk piles of letters opening a new field for correspondence. The old workers were urged to give their time to the cause. New recruits were advised to consult at once with the chairmen of their local committee and place themselves at their disposal for actual campaigning. Men who had been prominent as speakers were asked to correspond with the headquarters for assignment. Those of less note were urged to devote themselves to work in school-house meetings.

This active correspondence was continued until the last days of the campaign. The responses were such as to impress upon the committee the propriety of conveying to the workers throughout the State the gratifying intelligence coming to headquarters too late for further use of the mails. Therefore, on Monday, the day before election, over fifteen hundred telegrams were sent to correspondents in the State. The event justified the course, as from all directions have come assurances that the workers were thus inspired to renewed efforts.

The above outlines the work of organization. From it resulted enormous demands for campaign literature. This demand came from men who showed their intelligence and zeal by explaining just what they needed in their localities. Some asked for arguments to demonstrate to farmers the methods by which they had been robbed under plea of protection. Others wished to have further proof for workingmen in factories that the enhancement of the cost of the material upon which their labor was expended must necessarily decrease the possible return to labor and capital employed in production.

The Literary Bureau.

At the head of the literary bureau Mr. Cable placed a volunteer who brought with him a degree of earnestness and enthusiasm which proved contagious in all departments. Nat S. Brigham, of Utah, accepted the responsible position, and filled it to the fullest possibility. With a corps of able assistants, he planned the work, maintained a full supply of the documents most needed, reprinted from the newspapers such short and pithy arguments as he deemed most useful in the campaign, and to the last day of the contest made the document-room look like a section of a metropolitan postoffice.

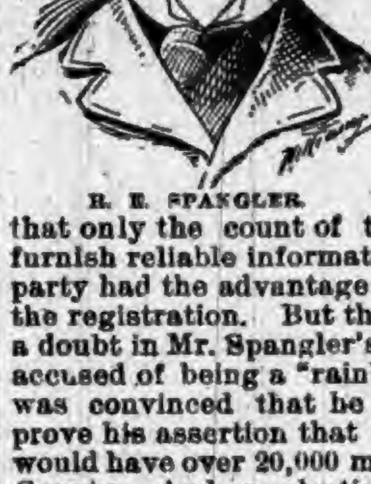


N. H. BRIGHAM.

And there was still another department over which Mr. Cable had the good fortune to place one perfectly fitted to the arduous task. It was known that large numbers of Democrats and of persons inclined to support the principles of the party were still unnaturalized. They had come to look upon a political contest in Illinois as hopeless and neglected taking out their final papers. To reach these persons, even in Cook county alone, involved unceasing effort, and could only be well performed by one as faithful, honest and reliable as he was intelligent and untiring. For this most important position Mr. Cable selected a Democrat tried in other positions and never found wanting. Mr. Reuben E. Spangler had come to Chicago from McDonough County, and here had taken up the work for his party with the enthusiasm which had characterized his efforts in a less populous community. It was his duty to note the work of the local committeemen and to see that ways and means were provided for bringing out every voter to be naturalized and registered.

Figures That Were Verified.

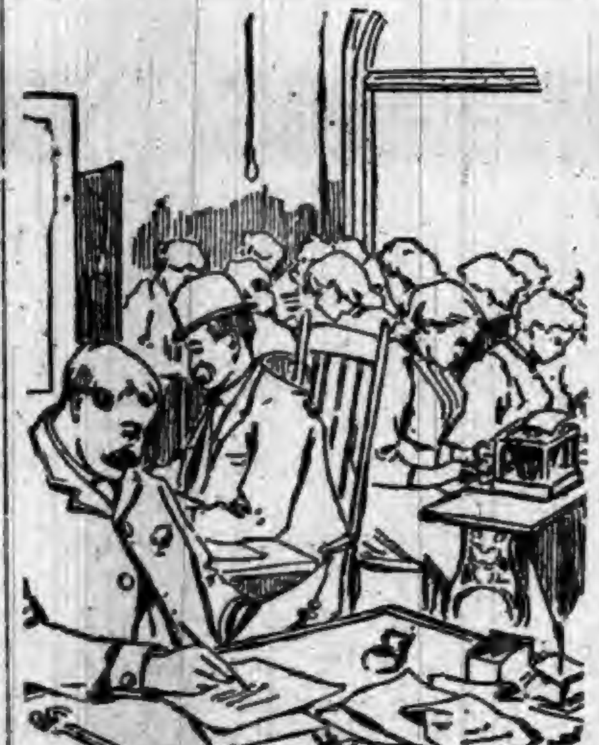
Though a comparatively young man and a new-comer to Chicago, Mr. Spangler impressed himself upon the campaign and made an enviable record in his department. There were those who believed the enormous registration in Cook County betokened Republican gains. There were others who asserted that only the count of the votes could furnish reliable information as to which party had the advantage on the face of the registration. But there was never a doubt in Mr. Spangler's mind. Though accused of being a "rainbow-chaser" he was convinced that he had figures to prove his assertion that the Democrats would have over 20,000 majority in Cook County. And on election night, as the returns began to come in from the city precincts, "Spangler's figures" were verified. He had been only too conservative in his estimate of the always large doubtful vote.



R. E. SPANGLER.

There were sights worth seeing during the closing weeks and days of the campaign. In the Secretary's room thirty typewriters rattled continuously under the deft fingers of young women who seemed to thus compensate for their lack of power at the ballot-box. They were addressing the circular letters to tens of thousands of Democrats in the State. Piles of the letters were constantly being brought to their desks and other piles removed for stamping and mailing.

In this recital men of all parties may gather some hints as to what will be the best methods of conducting future campaigns. Here is marked the decadence of "flambeaux clubs" and brass-band politics. The country is now interested in the solution of economic questions. Let it be recorded that, by his early recognition of this fact and his courage in acting upon his conviction, Ben Cable has earned a large share of the gratitude bestowed by sensible folk long since disgusted with Chinese methods in American politics.



HOW THE WORK WAS DONE.

Homer says the Greek bow was used by placing one end on the ground, to secure steadiness of aim.

A Squatter Family.

A traveler on horseback, attracted by a large number of children huddled around the door of an Arkansaw cabin, stopped and asked of a woman who suddenly appeared:

"Is this a school-house?"

"Did you take it for sich?"

"Yes, considering the number of children."

"But is it a school?"

"No, it ain't."

"Are all these children yours?"

"I reckin they are."

"How do you make a living for all of them?"

"I don't. I turns 'em out an' lets 'em scratch."

"What do they get to eat?"

"Bugs an' sich."

"Come, my good woman, you are trying to joke me. I am a stranger in this country and I really asked for information. I have often heard of squatters. Do you belong to that family?"

"I reckin I do, fur I squat sometimes an' comb my har when the chillen' air asleep."

"Where's your husband?"

"In town."

"In business there?"

"Yes, I reckin."

"How long has it been since you saw him?"

"About a year."

"Why doesn't he come to see you?"

"Well, you see, them deputy martins came along one day an' seed him bilin' some corn in a kittle, an' 'lowed he was makin' whisky, so they tuck him along. Look out thar!"

The stranger dodged, but not quite soon enough. A boy fell from a tree under which the stranger had stopped and struck him on the shoulder.

"Didn't know he was there," said the traveler, regarding with astonishment the youngster, who arose to his feet and began to throw dust at the horse.

"I don't reckin you did," the woman replied, "but lemme tell you, the woods is full of 'em, an' they're liable to drap on you at any minit, an' as it ain't safe to stay in the timber, you'd better take the big road an' mosey. Good day. You Ike, put that lizzard down. Eph, that ar tarripin'll bite you if you put your finger in his mouth. Drap that scorpion, John. Nick, don't chaw that vine, fur it'll pizen ye.

Hunting a Wolf on Snow Shoes.

Here is an occurrence that took place in the highest part of Norway: A Finn, who was herder to a large number of reindeer, had lost some of his master's deer by the attacks of a big wolf, which one day caught one belonging to himself. The deer taken by the wolf was the best one belonging to this man—his pride and joy, so he swore that the wolf should pay for it with his life, and, knowing that it would soon come back for another meal, he kept on the watch with a gun, accompanied by another deer-herder, both in their usual skin dresses and on snow-skates.

The wolf duly came and the hunt commenced, at first over a plain, where the animal gained a little ground, then up hill a little, so that it had still greater advantages; but as the descent commenced the Finn gained, his companion being not quite so quick. Unfortunately, the descent was not long enough for the shepherd to get near enough to shoot, and a long plain lay before them, so he threw his skin cloak away, and was thus able to increase his speed; but, as he still felt that the wolf had a chance of escaping, he also dropped his rifle, knowing that his companion would pick it up.

This enabled him to get nearer to the thief, and, as the ground again began to be on the descent, he was sure of his prey. In the middle of the falling ground he overtook the wolf, and, while passing it, lifted his staff and gave it such a heavy stroke on the back that the animal at once fell exhausted, and was dispatched with his dagger. The story is quite true, and shows what skill in snow-skate running is possessed by the Finns, and how little they fear a single wolf.

Gloves.

An old proverb once declared "that for a glove to be good and well made, three kingdoms must contibute to it—Spain to dress the leather, France to cut it, and England to sew it." French gloves have now far and away the highest reputation. In consequence multitudes of gloves are sold as French which were never near France. Kid-rearing for the glove market is a most important business. The kids are the objects of the greatest solicitude, going far beyond the care of children in this highly-civilized country, being fed wholly on milk during their short life. Lest coarser food should give a corresponding quality to their skins, and lest their precious skins should be scratched or abraded by rubbing against hedges or rocks, they are carefully confined under coops.

The First Law of Nature.

This self-preservation is acknowledged to be, and people who adopt against the encroaches of disease a genuine medicinal safeguard, accredited by experience and the sanction of physicians, afford a happy illustration of the wisdom of the saying, in the health they restore and continue to enjoy. Among maladies, against the growth of which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters affords efficient protection, diseases of the kidneys and bladder are fraught with the utmost peril and exhibit great obstinacy when opposed by ordinary means. The Bitters can and will subdue them. No testimony is stronger than this. Used at the outset and persistently, the best results may be expected. This medicine also eradicates liver complaint, constipation, dyspepsia, malaria, rheumatism and nervousness.

Good Glue.

A glue that will, it is said, resist the action of both hot and cold water, can be made by dissolving separately in ether free from alcohol, three ounces of gum shellac and one ounce of caoutchouc (India rubber), applying a gentle heat. When thoroughly dissolved, mix the two solutions, and keep in a well-stoppered bottle. Pieces of wood, leather, or other substances joined with this glue will part at any other point than at the joint thus made.

Nothing Unusual.

Reporter (breathlessly)—I hear there has been another railroad accident?

Catarrh Can't Be Cured

With LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you have to take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is no quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years, and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best blood purifiers, acting directly on the mucous surfaces. The perfect combination of the two ingredients is what produces such wonderful results in curing catarrh. Send for testimonials, free.

A Close Call for His Life.

The funniest incident and the closest shave for life I ever saw were combined at a corner-stone laying in Newark. The corner-stone was a very large one. It was swinging in the grasp of a powerful crane above the hole left for it to fit in. Down in this hole an Irishman was fussing about with a bed of mortar. Suddenly a portion of the tackle slipped and down came the stone with a run. It lit on the Irishman's back, and everybody expected to see him flattened out thin as paper when the stone was lifted a minute later. No sooner was the stone clear of the hole though than the man sprang up like a jack in the box. He was covered with mortar from head to foot, and was coughing, sneezing, and spitting to get it out of his nose and mouth. As soon as he could speak he addressed the men managing the crane. "Here now! Here now!" he yelled. "Oi can stand a joke as well as any mon, but any of yees can have me job afther thot," and he put on his coat and went away, persuaded the highly respectable assemblage had put up a job on him.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Is It An Unlucky Coin?

The superstition about the number 13 being unlucky is put to multiplied test in the new twenty-five cent pieces. On one side of the coin there is no less than ten repetitions of the number 13. There are thirteen stars, thirteen letters in the scroll held in the eagle's beak, thirteen marginal feathers in each wing, thirteen tall feathers, thirteen parallel lines in the shield, thirteen horizontal bars, thirteen arrow heads in one claw, thirteen leaves on the branch in the other claw, and thirteen letters in the words "quarter dollar." There hasn't seemed to be anything unlucky in the thirteen original States nor in the thirteen stripes on the flag, and now it remains to be seen if the man who gets his pockets full of these new quarter dollars will be unlucky.—New York Sun.

His Definition.

A captain who was one of the School-Board in a New England seaport town was visiting the school one afternoon, and heard the class read from Webster's address at Plymouth.

"Who was Webster?" asked the Captain.

"A statesman," said one boy. "An orator," said another.

"But what is a statesman?" asked the Captain.

"That's not just exactly right," said the Captain, smiling. "Now I go around making speeches once in a while, but I'm not a statesman at all."

What Suggested the Waterphone.

Photography of the heavens has revealed stars invisible to the naked eye or through the telescope, and now Mr. Edison is thinking of a phonograph to catch sounds unheard by the human ear. Once captured by the wax cylinders of the phonograph these sounds will be returned to the listener intensified to a degree sufficient to make them easily audible. In the matter of inventions it is a curious fact that Professor Bell's latest divice of importance, the "watherphone," for locating leaks in water-pipes, was suggested to him by observing a plumber's apprentice endeavoring to find a leak by means of a small steel rod which he held in his mouth and touched against the pipe.—New York World.

Ornamental Trees.

The home should be rendered attractive by its surroundings, and there are very few who do not see beauty in shade and ornamental trees about farm buildings. We consider any tree properly set and cared for ornamental; the pleasure to the eye, however, may be very much affected by the manner of setting. Trees and shrubs may be grouped so as to produce a very pleasing effect, while if set in systematic rows the appearance would be very stiff and awkward. Excellent ideas regarding arrangement of trees may be gained by an observation of any upon lawns that are attractive and which present a pleasing arrangement.

Limits of Natural Visions.

The limit of natural vision varies with elevation, condition of the atmosphere, intensity of illumination, and other modifying elements. On a clear day an object one foot above a level plain may be seen at a distance of 1.31 miles; one 10 feet in height, 4.15 miles; one 20 feet high, 5.86 miles; one 100 feet high, 13.1 miles; one a mile high (as the top of a mountain), 95.23 miles. This allows 7 inches, or, to be more exact, 6.99 inches, to the mile for the curvature of the earth, and assumes that the size and illumination of the object are sufficient to produce an image.

Food Made Me Sick

"First I had pains in my back and chest, then faint feeling at the stomach, and when I would eat, the first taste would make me deathly sick. Of course, I ran down rapidly, and lost 25 pounds. My wife and family were much alarmed, and I expected my stay on earth would be short. But a friend advised me to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and soon my appetite came back, I ate heartily without distress, gained two pounds a week. I took 6 bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and never felt better in my life. To-day I am cured and I give to Hood's Sarsaparilla the whole praise of it." C. C. Aber, grocer, Canisteo, N. Y.

Protected by Law.

A Spanish woman's mantilla is held sacred by law and cannot be seized for debt. There are three kinds of mantillas which, de rigieur, form the toilet of the Spanish lady. The first is composed of white blonde, used only on state occasions, birthdays, bull fights, and Easter Monday; the second is black blonde, trimmed with deep lace; and the third, for ordinary wear, is made of black silk trimmed with velvet.

Professional Finders.

There is a new industry in New York City.

A class of women known as "Professional Finders" patrol the large stores, keeping a constant look out for articles, money and the like, that have been dropped by careless shoppers.

After working all day they meet in the evening and divide their plunder.

The class is much larger than would at first appear.

CORRESPONDENCE

WATERLOO.

The L. M. C. held their regular session Tuesday evening at Mrs. Rena Smith's.

Mrs. Grant Fisk is improving her husband's absence by visiting here and at Butler.

The W. C. T. U. will give a supper Friday evening, at the home of Mrs. Gill, for the benefit of the organization.

We are having, not only a taste, but a big bite of an old fashioned winter; deep snow, and the leaden clouds look as if full of it, and the cold grows more intense each day.

A party of the older students of the of the High School improved the sleighing Friday by going to Angola Some of the number desired to take advantage of the opportunity to view the heavens through the telescope, there.

Rev. Mr. Suman commenced a series of meetings Sunday evening in the M. E. church These meetings should be well attended, because one cannot listen to such sermons as the pastor now filling that pulpit gives his hearers, without being benefitied by them.

At the last club dance Friday evening, thirty couple were in attendance, several from out of town. Mrs. Grant Fisk was spoken of as being very handsomely dressed, with a large corsage bouquet of hot house roses; also a lady from Butler, whose name we did not learn.

Last Saturday evening a sleighing party consisting of ten couple went to Jay Kennedy's where they spent the evening, had an oyster supper, and a good time generally. the only drawback being caused by Jack Frost being rather too sharp going and returning.

Dr and Mrs. Carpenter went the last day of the old year to California, Mich., to spend New Years with Mrs C's parents. From there they drove over to Coldwater making a brief visit with Mr. and Mrs Sullers, and returning home the early part of the week. Mrs. Sullers and Mrs. Carpenter are sisters.

BUTLER.

William Champion, who some time ago lost an arm on the railroad, is at home seriously ill.

Mrs. Hannah Dickerhoof, sister of J. Campbell, and Manda Conkle, of Defiance county, Ohio, Sundayed with him.

The church bells rang out their chimes again last Sunday and our people again gathered up the broken thread of their usual Sabbath duties, and our churches were about as well filled as usual.

Aunt Hannah Ocker, so well known to all the older residents of Butler, is confined to her home by serious illness Her extreme age and lonely surroundings go a long ways towards rendering her chances of recovery more uncertain.

J. M. Lingenfelter has retired from the superintendency of the M. E. Sunday School, after having served ten years in that capacity to the utmost satisfaction of all concerned He has been succeeded by Mrs. F. M. Porter, who comes to the office well prepared for its arduous duties.

The funeral services of George Kehrer at the Lutheran church last Thursday, conducted by Rev. Lovett, of Wolcottville, were very largely attended, and largely too by his friends from the country, even though the day was the most severe of any this winter. His remains were intered at Edgerton, Ohio.

The sleigh bell's merry music filled the air to overflowing last Sabbath with its tintinnabulation. Everybody that could get a turnout of any kind were enjoying the good sleighing, from the four in hand drag filled with a happy score of laughing people, to the one horse improvised sled, crowded the smooth thoroughfare. We have not seen a day of so much enjoyment for many years.

Jacob Click and wife, after plodding along together good naturedly for twenty-six years, found the society of each other suddenly growing intolerable, and last Saturday, during his temporary absense a moving van drove to their door and hastily loaded all her belongings and carried them to another house, where she, her mother, Mrs. Shafer, and her son have taken up their abode, leaving poor Jacob to build his own fires these cold mornings.

Earsie Magers of Churubusco, was the guest of Minnie and Pearl Grube last week.

John Harris has had a very fine trade on oysters and any one buying oysters should call on him.

Geo. Wilson of Columbus, O., is now at this place operator on the B & O. and seems to be enjoying himself greatly.

The supper given by Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Grube Saturday eve Dec 31, was well attended and all report a good time The young people numbered in all 40.

A sleighing party was given by John Mason Wednesday evening and there were 17 from this place. There were three loads of them. They all went to his uncle's near Avilla.

J. W. Clark, while at Detroit, purchased a fine safe for his new office.

Dr. Burgess returned last Saturday after a weeks' visit with his best girl and parents.

Editor Strayer seems to be very much elated because he was not chosen for Superintendent of the Sunday School.

By the stir we seen around Frank Seiler's Insurance and Loan Office last Saturday he must have had a land office day.

There were two side tracks laid through West Ashley last week. Their new elevator will be ready for grain in a few days.

The streets of Ashley had a busy appearance during the last week with teams and sleds hauling material for building next spring.

R. H. McInturf bought a business lot on State street for $600. This same lot sixty days ago was bought for $400. Does this show boom up or down?

The postmaster at West Ashley says now that he had intended to resign anyway had Harrison been elected. Rats! such talk maketh Democracy tired.

The Groscop and Lieberenz Brick Making Plant will be located here in the spring. They expect to put in a steam driver and have a capacity of 20,000 brick a day.

The section men at this place were called to Delaware Bend Sunday afternoon to help clear up a wreck at that place. There were 20 cars in the ditch.

Quite a curiosity in the shape of a wagon has been on exhibition here since last Monday. The wagon is fashioned somewhat after the old style stage coach and is made entirely of hickory. Not a bolt or piece of iron enters into its make-up. The only iron about it is wire nails, which are used to hold the different parts together. The body is enclosed and roofed, with a door in each end, and eight persons can ride quite comfortably inside, and the driver outside. It is said that the builder worked on it five years, and is willing to wager that it can be driven to California without danger of collapse. That man must be a good old Democrat, else he would never have worked that long on one hickory wagon.

We heard an ex soldier telling a pretty good yarn on one of his comrades the other day, and as Uncle Stephe is very fond of jokes we will tell it as nearly as we can as it was told to us, and if we should get off the track a little Uncle Stephe, we know, will forgive us. Our informant tells us that while in front of Chattanoga one day he was leisurely walking down through camp when he saw some one some distance ahead down on his knees in front of a peculiar looking box, as he supposed at the time. Something about the appearance of his comrade looked peculiar, and he concluded to draw near and investigate. Upon investigation he found that his brother soldier was (as old gamblers say) bucking the tiger, in other words, our informant found his friend on his knees before a chuck-a-luck board, working the thing for all it was worth. Our informant watched him put up his two dollar bills till they were all gone, then he borrowed o' our informant two more two-dollar bills (our informant had lots of them) which he proceeded to cast upon the waters to be gathered many days hence, and they went the way of the others—into the bank. Then our friend, seeing how bad his comrade felt, offered to loan him ten cents. This he refused, but got up and went away with tears in his eyes. It seems he had been playing on the six, but had been unlucky. Our friend concluded to try his luck on the same number, and put down his saw-buck, and when the dealer raised the box up came the double six, and our friend pocketed his double saw-buck and went on his way rejoicing. It is said that for all time and even at the present time this same man every once in a while is on the hunt of some one to kick him for not accepting the proffered ten cents and again on his bended knees and with tears in his eyes call upon his lucky star and pray that he might have sweet revenge on that old chuck-a-luck board.

Obituary.

Sarah Cehney Jones was born in Ashland county, Ohio, Dec. 30, 1842 and died at her home in Auburn, Jan. 5, 1893 at the age of 50 years and 5 days. She was united in marriage to Franklin Jones in December, 1889. A few weeks before her death, she had an attack of grip, from which she suffered more or less, though it occasioned no alarm till within a few days, when she suddenly grew worse. Her death is a sad blow to her husband as well as to many friends, for she was a lady who made many friends, her friendly nature, endearing her to all with whom she came in contact. She leaves no immediate relatives, though there are many relatives a degree or two removed, residing in the county.

The funeral services were by Rev. A. S. Wooton and held at the M E. church, Sunday, Jan. 8, at 2 p. m, the interment being in the Evergreen cemetery.

Also $1 for one dog, $2 for each female dog, and $2 for each additional dog. The Road and Special Road Tax are included in first installment. The Poll and Dog Tax are divided equally between the two installments.

Taxes of 1892 are due the first day of January, 1893, and may be paid in full or in two installments. The first installment must be paid on or before the third Monday in April, 1893, the second installment on or before the first Monday in November, 1893 If the first installment is not paid when due both installments become delinquent. Ten per cent shall be added and I shall at once proceed, as the law requires, to collect the same, together with the costs that may accrue, by distress and sale of personal property.

The Treasurer will not be responsible for the penalty and charges on delinquent taxes resulting from any omission of the person paying, to state definitely on what property, in whose name, and in what township or corporation it was assessed.

Persons owing delinquent taxes should pay them at once, The law is of such a character that there is no option left to the Treasurer but to enforce the collection of the delinquent taxes, however much he may regret to collect the same by sale of property.

"The owner of the property on the first day of April each year shall be liable foe the taxes of that year. The purchaser of property on the first day of April shall br considered the owner on that day."

Examine your receipts before leaving the office and see that all your property is included.

No county order will be paid to any person owing delinquent taxes.

The annual sale of lands and lots for delinquent taxes will occur on the second Monday in February, 1893.

Come early and avoid the rush of the last few days. We have 6,000 receipts to make and all cannot be made in the last few days.

The books will positively be closed on the evening of the 3rd Monday in April and no one will be allowed to pay after that date without penalty.

Parties sendidg by others, or by letter, to pay tax, should not fail to send description of their lands and lots.

No receipts will be made out for any party until they are ready to pay.

Assignees, Guardians, Administrators and other who pay taxes on property in trust, and persons whose taxes are complicated, such as individual estates, etc, are earnestly requested to settle such taxes before the last few days, as it requires considerable time to make the divisions and seperate receipts therefor As the treasurer cannot know the location of each person's property, taxpayers should designate the property on which they wish to pay taxes, and see that all property is specified on their receipts. If they have land in more than one township or town, or desire to pay taxes on lands not in their name, call the treasurer's attention to the matter.

REUBEN SAWVEL, Treasurer.

SIX SPASMS A DAY.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

GENTLEMEN: I never lose an opportunity to recommend Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine to any one afflicted with nervous complaints with the assurance that it will not disappoint them. When our boy was eighteen months old he was attacked with violent spasms. Sometimes he would have five or six spasms in a single day. WE TRIED MANY PHYSICIANS WITHOUT BENEFIT; finally our druggist recommended Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. We tried a bottle, and could see that he WAS BENEFITED FROM THE FIRST DOSE. We used three bottles, and I am happy to say the child was ENTIRELY CURED. We used no other remedy, and his cure is complete. He is now three years old and perfectly healthy. You are at liberty to use my name in SOUNDING THE PRAISE OF THIS WONDERFUL REMEDY.

MESSRS. DULLAM BROS.—Gentlemen: For over 4 years I have been afflicted with an eruption of the skin, which became very troublesome and I could get no relief. I was also troubled very badly with constipation, which nothing I tried gave any permanent relief until I took Dullam's Great German blood, liver, stomach and kidney remedy and since taking I have been entirely cured. For a tonic, blood purifier and general health restorer I can heartily recommend it. $1 a bottle.

MR. J. L. WEAVER.

LIVURA M'F'G. Co.,

DEAR SIRS:—"Last winter I had La Grippe in its worst form, leaving me in a terrible condition, my Brain was confused, my Heart weak, and my legs refused to hold me up, and the muscles were so sore that it was painful to lie down. I had continual Headache, and everything I ate distressed me. I could not work, sleep, or eat, and my right side became numb. Several doctors told me I had Incipient Paralysis, and that I could get no better. I grew so weak that I could not leave the house. Hearing of PITCHER'S LIVURA I got a bottle and it helped me from the first. I took 4 bottles in all, and am PERFECTLY WELL in every way, and now work all day. I know that PITCHER'S LIVURA CURED ME."

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

There were in the town in 1867, three libraries containing 900 volumes. The township library had 450, county library 100, and the McClure Institute 350. These libraries were then kept at the Court House in the office of C. P. Hodge, Esq., librarian, and containing many valuable works, then of great use to the people. We believe they no longer exist; their work done, they were removed in part to Waterloo, and disappeared from public knowlege.

At this period, owing to the ability of teachers, the combination of principal and county examiner, and the lack elsewhere, the Auburn High School stood forth as well worth the name. The total number of pupils who attended during the school year was 268. There were 62 in the High School. Of these, 28 were foreign, and the average attendance of the room was 45.

The academic year was divided into three terms, two select, the first and third of twelve weeks each, and one regular, of sixteen weeks.

On April 5, a new school board was elected for a period of two years, and of these trustees, Joseph H. Ford, was chairman; Jacob B. Cassbeer, secretary, and James W. Case, treasurer. They met in the office of Drs. Keeler & Casebeer, or in the store of Mr. Case, for the transaction of business. The secretary found a new book for his use, and so began a record of school work, which continues to the present. The treasurer not only found no fund on hand, but a debt of $304.67. The board undeterred by this fact, contracted with George Lawrence for $75, for a fence to enclose the school ground and for a much-needed wood house.

There was nothing of partisan feeling existing in this board, and on Nov. 15, consulting the public welfare, engaged a corps of teachers for the winter term of three and a half months, "more or less," the term to commence on Nov. 25, and to close on Feb. 28, 1868. The teachers engaged and their per diem of salary was as follows: Spencer Dills at $3.25; T. J. Saxton at $2.50; Frank Clark at $1.50; Elsa Case at $1.25, and Miss Baldock and Miss Rainier, at 80 cents. Payment was to be made as far as possible in cash, and the balance in orders on the school treasurer to be paid out of the first moneys received.

To provide for the confusion arising from different text books for the same grade and consequent increase in clases, it was ordered: "That no new authors be introduced except by special consent of the school board." Not only in this school, but throughout the county, the enterprise of book agents and the desire of novelty on part of teachers, rendered this step necessary, but it was years later before uniformity could be secured much less the present economical and general use of like school books.

The term like its predecessors was a success and served to uphold the prestige of the teachers and the standing of the school. On April 8, 1867, Messrs. Dills and Saxton, as principals, had commenced a select school for a term of twelve weeks, and at its conclusion, had issued the first and only annual catalogue of the teachers and students of the Auburn High School. It was claimed that the teachers' school had no equal in this part of the state, and it is believed that the claim was well founded.

It will be a matter of unusual interest to learn the names of the gentlemen and ladies who composed the High School, the teachers' school and the grammar school, in 1867, and as far as practicable, somewhat of their subsequent history, as it can be learned.

The disproportion of young men now seen in the High School was manifested the other way since there were 32 of them to 13 young ladies. The catalogue is as follows: Reuben Lockwood, still of Auburn, and a partner in the Monitor Windmill Company; George Ernest, of Corunna; Publius V. Hoffman, an attorney of merit, long a member of the bar of DeKalb county, Daniel D. Moody, attorney, has been a member of the legislature and clerk of the county, at this time; Henry C. Shull, owner of a nice property in the suburbs of town, and for many years engaged in the sale of milk to the townpeople; J. M. Waterman, of Waterloo; H. Griswold and George Baltsley, of Auburn; William Latson and I. L. Roth, of the same place, and J. W. McAllister, of Iba. There was Philo Lockwood, who began as an attorney, made his start at Little Rock, Arkansas, returning, took up the business of pension agent in a small way, found a steady and lucrative patronage whose growth finally induced him to remove to Washington, D. C., where its magnitude has reached wonderful dimensions, bringing him a great and fast-growing fortune.

There was Thomas J. Dills of Spencerville, now of Ft. Wayne, and of her one hundred or more physicians, one of the foremost and best; and Henry J. Shafer, now county attorney and a member of the bar of DeKalb county.

Obituary.

Julia Franks Wise, daughter of Thomas and Eliza Franks, died Jan. 3, 1893, aged 36 years, 4 months and 28 days. She was born in Wayne county, Ohio, August 5, 1856; moved with her parents to DeKalb county, Ind., in the fall of 1865. She was married to Chas. Wise, Dec. 23, 1881. To this union four children were born; the oldest one died about eight years ago.

She was afflicted with that dread disease consumption, being a constant sufferer for the past two years. She was confined to her bed since September 1892. She bore her lot with patience, and was seldom known to complain. The latter part of her life was wholly devoted to her christian faith. The day before she died she sang "Nearer my God to Thee," louder than she had been known to speak for weeks. But a few minutes before she passed away. she sang "We're Going Home."

The funeral took place from the late home and interred in the Lakeview cemetery at Kendallville. She leaves a husband, two sons and one daughter, father, mother, two brothers and three sisters, to mourn her departure. But their loss is her gain. She has gone to that home of everlasting happiness, where sickness and sorrow cannot enter.

Real Estate Agency of AUBURN, IND.

RICKEL & SPROTT, Props.

We present in this column a list which has been selected from our choicest properties, and are the best and cheapest.

TOWN PROPERTIES.

An elegant two-story frame dwelling with all necessary out buildings, small fruits and all the modern conveniences which go to make a beautiful and pleasant home. Will be sold cheap for cash, or will accept two-thirds cash; balance in one year.

A very desirable residence property on North Van Buren street. This property has good, almost new buildings, well, cistern and some fruits, and a price that will astonish you.

A vacant lot on West 7th street.

A nice residence on Seventh street right handy to schools and churches, and within a two minutes' walk of the Court House.

A most desirable residence on South Jackson street, which we offer at a bargain, and will give the purchaser the privilege of paying out in monthly payments, if he so desires. Terms, $500 cash; balance in monthly payments.

FARMS.

We offer, first, a splendid Seventy acres in Union township, well tiled, good fences. Land that cannot be beat for gardening and for small fruits. Will sell cheap for cash, or on the most favorable terms on long time. Lays within three miles of Auburn.

Eighty acres of good land, within one mile of Newville. Good buildings, orchard, and, better soil cannot be found in DeKalb county. Easy prices, and terms to suit the purchaser.

We have a number of farms and town properties on our books, which we are not allowed to advertise, because of the simple fact, that they are offered so cheap that were it known the public would draw the conclusion that the owners are hard up for ready cash, which we all know would be a mistake.

We are agents for those lands in Kansas and Nebraska, which can be had on the most favorable terms ever offered, to-wit: The purchaser makes a small cash payment, just enough to show that he is in earnest, then yearly, thereafter, he pays (delivers at the nearest market) one-half of the crops raised on the land. If crops are unfavorable and he raises no crop, then he makes no payment that year, but is carried over until next year, and so on, until he pays out. Shall we have your application for one of these farms?

We shall be pleased to see you at any time and show, Free of Charge, any of the properties we have on our lists. Write or call on us for any information regarding rates, time of trains to any place on "God's green earth," and remember that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad pays the hack fare to all points in competition where the fare is $2. or more.

RUTHERFORD B. HAYES.

SUDDEN DEATH OF THE EX-PRESIDENT.

Forty-Nine Persons Burned to Death and Twenty Injured—A Broken Rail Wrecks a Passenger Train—Senatorial Elections—Death from Cholera.

RUTHFORD B. HAYES.

Sudden Death of the Ex-President.

A special from Fremont, Ohio, dated the 17th inst., says: Ex-President Rutherford B. Hayes died at 11 o'clock tonight. Early in the evening an inquiry elicited the response that the General had passed a fairly well day, and was resting nicely this evening. The change from better to worse was rapid and at 11 o'clock the distinguished ex-President passed away. The first intelligence of this was received when Webb C. Hayes came down town and quietly announced that his father had just died.

Ex-President Hayes left home last Monday on a trip to Columbus, Buffalo, and Cleveland. At the last named place he spent a few days with his son, Webb C. Hayes. During the last month the ex-President had complained of one or two slight attacks of neuralgia of the heart, but as they soon passed away, he thought nothing of it. On Saturday he experienced a severe recurrence of the malady, but being prepared for his return home, proceeded on his journey, accompanied by his son Webb. Word had been sent home by telegraph of his condition and he was met at the train by his son, Rutherford B. Hayes, and Dr. F. S. Hilbish, the family physician, with a carriage. Entering the carriage they were rapidly driven to the Hayes mansion in Spiegel Grove, where all attention was given the stricken General during the night. Sunday the Hayes mansion was kept quiet and Dr. Hilbish spent most of the day in watching at the bedside. The doctor stated that the ex-President had been suffering with a severe attack of heart neuralgia or agina pectoris, which he had received while at Cleveland. But, that, though he had rallied somewhat he was not out of danger. To-day there was apparently no change, and the death of the ex-President when it came, was a terrible surprise.

A TRAIN ON FIRE.

Forty-Nine Persons Burned to Death and Twenty Injured.

St. Petersburg special: A most peculiar and fatal railway accident occurred on the line between Slatousk and Samara. A train composed of several cars filled with recruits was running from Slatousk to Samara when flames burst from the foremost car. The train was going at full speed and the tongues of fire swept backward and in a few minutes all the cars were blazing. The engineer for some unaccountable reason did not stop the train until he had run a considerable distance. In the meantime there was a scene of indescribable confusion in the cars. The recruits, or at least as many of them as could, leaped from the windows and doors. Some of them landed uninjured in the heavy snow banks, while others who landed in the cleared track were killed. Those who were unable to get out of the cars were burned to death, for the train was entirely consumed. Some of the men were terribly burned before they jumped. When the confusion had somewhat subsided, the officer in charge of the recruits, who saved himself by jumping, called the roll of his men. It was found that forty-nine of them were dead and twenty terribly burned and otherwise injured.

Senatorial Elections.

David Turpie was re-elected United States Senator by the Indiana Legislature.

The two Houses of the New York Legislature balloted separately for United States Senator with the following result: Senate—Edward Murphy, Jr., 17; Frank Hiscock, 12; Whitelaw Reid, 1. Assembly—Murphy, 73; Hiscock, 52.

Senator George Gray, was elected to the Senate by the Delaware Legislature without opposition.

The Michigan Legislature re-elected Senator Stockbridge United States Senator, he receiving his full party vote.

A Broken Rail.

A Santa Fe passenger train was wrecked by a broken rail at a point two miles west of Revere, Mo., a coach, two sleepers and a dining car going over the enbankment. One man, a colored waiter, was killed, and six passengers injured. The injured were removed to Fort Madison, twenty-two miles from the scene of the wreck and there medical assistance was secured.

Death from Cholera.

Englebert Hagg, a German immigrant, died on a train near St. Paul. Dr. Henry F. Hoyt, Chairman of the Board of Health, and Dr. W. S. Whitcomb, Coroner, sitting with other physicians, pronounced the case one of genuine cholera, and so reported it to the State Board of Health.

Almost Frozen to Death.

Cambridge (O.) special: A Cambridge sleighing party on their way to Washington, found a young farmer named Simpson, aged 18, lying in the road dead drunk and almost frozen to death. They took him in their sleigh and hauled him home to his parents.

Cardinal Gibbons Honored.

Rome special: The vatican has chosen Cardinal Gibbons to be delegate to the Catholic Congress at Chicago.

The War Cloud Vanished.

San Antonia (Texas) special: The revolutionary war cloud which has been hanging over the Mexican border has ceased to be visible. Though the United States troops, United States Marshal, and the Texas rangers have been scouting continuously since the trouble began no revolutionists have been located for two weeks. Several individuals have been arrested, but, to all appearances, the revolution has vanished.

It is now reported with some aspect of credibility that the movement was merely a grand smuggling ruse to attract the Mexican troops to the lower border, while thousands of dollars of merchandise was smuggled over the river a little below Eagle Pass, Texas.

DREADFUL.

Another Street Car Casualty at Chicago.

Chicago special: Another street railway collision at Forty-seventh Street seriously injured seven persons, one of whom will die. A through train on the Rock Island road, tore through a street car and each of the seven passengers and the driver were buried beneath the wreck of iron, wood, and glass.

The conductor of the car, John Taylor, and the injured driver, Charles Saunders, were both placed under arrest, notwithstanding the serious wounds of Saunders. The car containing the six passengers was on its way to State street in charge of John Taylor, conductor. As he approached the well-known crossing he says that he looked ahead and although the gates were up he saw the train coming. He claims that he notified the driver to stop; but that as he did so some one called to Saunders, the driver, to proceed, as the way was clear. Whatever the cause, the car was started and was fairly on the track when the swiftly moving train tore down upon it.

The car had nearly succeeded in crossing the tracks when the engine struck the rear of it and it was overturned. The force was terrific. The car was a total wreck and the six passengers were buried beneath the slivered glass and broken timbers. While the passengers were yet buried beneath the ruins of the car help arrived from the immediate vicinity, and efforts were made to rescue them. The six passengers and Driver Saunders were taken from the wreckage, and carried into a neighboring saloon, where they at once received medical attendance. Driver Saunders was taken to a police station in an unconscious condition.

WRECK IN CHICAGO.

Over One Hundred Passengers Injured.

The accommodation train consisted of three coaches filled with suburban residents on their way to their homes. Fifteen people were severely injured in the wreck, and scarcely any one of the 150 or more passengers escaped some bruises or minor injury.

The accomodation train which had been delayed was standing on the main track at Fifty-fifth street when the express crashed into the rear end at full speed. The cars of the accomodation were telescoped and the destruction was so complete that it seemed little less than a miracle that scores of people were not killed outright. Scarcely had the maimed and bleeding passengers began to emerge from the wrecked cars when the debris took fire from an overturned stove. Fortunately a supply of water was near at hand and those less seriously hurt succeeded in extinguishing the flames, but not until a number of the imprisoned passengers had been badly scorched. The weather was intensely cold and some of the helpless victims suffered frost bites in addition to their injuries. B. R. Watins of 7,409 Honore street, was found to be most seriously injured. He was unconscious when taken from the wreck and the physicians say it is impossible to tell what the result of his injuries may be. Besides Redmond and Watkins, there is little likelihood that any fatalities will ensue.

ENEMIES OF CARNOT

Will Not Rest Until He Is Forced to Resign.

Paris special: The gravest rumors are afloat in regard to President Carnot. Several of the deputies, who have been most earnest in pushing the Panama investigation, make no secret of declaring that they will not rest until Carnot is forced to resign.

The strength of the case against the President depends upon the truthfulness of Baihut, the ex-Minister of Public Works, and Carnot's friends claim that no faith whatever should be attached to Baihut's disclosures, that he is malignant against Carnot for not having protected him from prosecution and that he wishes to drag the President down with him.

On the other hand it is pointed out by the enemies of M. Carnot that Baihut's charges agree with the facts as known, and that Charles DeLesseps would probably corroborate Baihut if he were permitted to reveal all that he could tell. These enemies of Carnot argue that the trial of the two DeLesseps has been hastened in order to bring them within the grasp of M. Carnot and to keep them silent as to any connection of the head of the State with Panama affairs. They argue, also, that M. Bourgois has not been as earnest as he might have been in bringing the truth to light and that the opposition of Bourgois to the arrest of Baihut was really based upon his fear that Baihut might accuse his former fellow minister, Carnot.

Meantime President Carnot preserves a serene temper, and seems indifferent to the assaults upon him.

ROUTED FROM BED.

Fire Destroys a Fashionable Boarding School.

Fifty young women attending the fashionable Kenwood Institute on Madison avenue, Chicago, were routed from their beds at 6 o'clock the other morning and forced to hasten into the zero atmosphere, clad for the most part only in the scanty garments they could snatch in their hasty flight from their dormitories when an alarm of fire was given. An over heated flue set fire to the woodwork in the basement and, in spite of the strenuous efforts of the fire department, the institute, a three-story and basement brick building, was almost totally destroyed. There was no panic among the pupils, but they were compelled to cast aside all thoughts of appearances and forsake treasured trinkets and costly wardrobes alike. Sympathizing neighbors threw open hospitable doors and took the suffering and shivering girls in.

JOY IN THE FAMILY

Upper Sandusky, Ohio, doctors are puzzled over a strange case, in which a girl recovered her voice after losing it five years ago. Miss Ella Hale, daughter of a prominent citizen, was seized, just five years ago, with a paroxysm of coughing. On recovery she found that she had lost her voice. It was considered a momentary loss, but it was soon to be seen that it promised permanency.

Doctors said it was from paralysis, and the girl resigned herself to a life that promised anything but happiness. Now she is able to talk as well as ever, having just regained her lost power. She was experiencing a coughing spell similar to the one in which she lost her voice, and, on gaining relief, found her voice as perfect as before the affliction. The joy in Mr. Hale's family can be imagined.

Kansas Democrats and Republicans Indignant.

Dispatches from Lawrence, Hiawatha, and McPherson, Kansas, state that the Republicans and Democrats of those places held mass meetings and protested against the action of the Populists in the Lower House, at the same time urging the Republican majority to maintain their position and assuring them of the endorsement of public sentiment. A dispatch from Wichita, Governor Lewelling's home, state that the Democrats of that place, who supported him loyally during the campaign, are considering the advisability of holding a mass meeting to protest against his action in the legislative muddle.

Murderous Tramps.

A terrible tragedy by which two policemen will perhaps lose their lives was enacted at Jackson, Miss. Officers Guice and Hines had arrested two tramps and started to jail with them. Without a word of warning the tramps drew pistols and opened fire, shooting both officers through the stomach, and leaving them for dead. The tramps then left, but were followed in a short time by hundreds of men and captured four miles from town. Threats of lynching were so general that the murderous wretches were taken to the penitentiary for safe keeping. The physicians say the policemen can not live.

A Business Block Collapsed.

The four story brick building at 517 Commerce street, Philadelphia, occupied as a salesroom and warehouse by the Nixon Bros.' Paper Company, collapsed. Seven men were in the building at the time. Three were buried in the ruins and killed; one was badly hurt and three escaped uninjured. The cause of the collapse of the building was probably the weight of paper stored in the upper floors, although Mr. Nixon claims that stock piled up there was not nearly so great as it has been on many other occasions. The building is a total ruin, and will have to be entirely rebuilt.

Cause of Blaine's Illness Kept a Secret.

Mr. Blaine's disease remains a mystery to all but the family and the attending physicians. The latter decline without the express authority of the family to divulge the nature of the complaint which has now kept their patient continuously in bed for seven or eight weeks, with constantly diminishing strength and frequent "sinking spells" threatening immediate dissolution. One of his physicians says: "The real nature of Mr. Blaine's illness will probably only be made known when the certificate of the health office is made public, and I fear that will occur before long."

Colorado's New Governor Against Hanging.

Denver (Col.) special: Peter Augusto; under sentence of death for the killing of Harry Sullivan, has been granted a respite of ninety days. This was the first official act of the Populist Governor, Davis H. Waite, who is opposed to capital punishment, and in his inaugural address recommended the abolishment of it and the substitution of life imprisonment. The Governor is determined that there shall be no hanging, and the respite is granted to give the present Legislature an oppprtunity to abolish the law.

Burned to the Ground.

Cushing Academy at Ashburnham, Mass., a noted educational institution and preparatory school, was burned to the ground. Loss on building, $110,000; insurance, $50,000; on contents, $50,000; insurance, $40,000. The institution has a fund of $100,000, and a new building will be at once erected. The 225 students escaped without injury.

Thawed Dynamite.

Uniontown (Pa.) special: Joseph Craddock and another workman, whose name could not be obtained, were thawing twenty sticks of dynamite at an open fire in the new tunnel on the State Line extension of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. The dynamite exploded, killing the two men and injuring several others.

Old People Frozen.

At Evansville, Ind., neighbors found Fred Kelper dead in his home and his wife helpless in bed. Kelper was old and infirm, and having been attacked with asthma he fell out of bed and froze during the night. The wife was injured by a fall recently and could not help him or call for her neighbors to aid him.

Hagan Wins the Skating Championship.

Harold Hagen, the Norwegian skater, again defeated Fred Breen, the Canadian, in the mile skating race at Minneapolis, Minn. Breen's endurance waned, and Hagen gained rapidly winning the race by forty yards in 2:49 4-5. Breen's time was 2:54¼.

Frozen to Death.

A little child of David McCracken, of Logan's Ferry, Pa., was frozen to death. The baby was 2 months old. Mrs. McCracken, wrapping the child up, started to walk to Parnassus, a distance of two miles. When she arrived there the babe was frozen stiff.

Fire at Hastings, Mich.

Fire at Hastings, Mich., destroyed the Union Block and adjacent buildings. Loss, $50,000; insurance, $25,000. Assistance was sent from Grand Rapids and Middleville, but the water mains were frozen.

Fatal Powder Explosion.

An explosion of powder at Santa Fe, N. M., resulted fatally and did considerable damage to property. Pedro Carilio was killed. James Cavanach and Patrick Donavon will lose their sight.

Electrocuted.

NEW DUTY ON TOBACCO

IT ROBS THE WORKMAN, FARMER AND CONSUMER.

The $2 Duty, Though but Two Years Old, Has Decreased Wages, Closed Factories and Increased Prices or Deteriorated the Goods.

The McKinley Tariff Tree.

If the 53d Congress does not reduce or remove the $2 per pound duty which McKinley placed on Sumatra tobacco, it will not be because it has not done great injury to legitimate business and has not worked havoc to all except a few monopolists. A McKinley tree, though only two years old, is easily known by its fruit—reduced wages, closed factories, increased power to monopolists, benefits to speculators, increased prices or deteriorated goods, deception and perjury. The $2 duty has already borne all these varieties of fruit.

"There are more cigarmakers tramping the streets to-day," said a manufacturer of Havana cigars in New York the other day, "than I have ever known before." When asked the cause he explained it by stating his own case.

"We have not," said he, "done as most manufacturers did—increase the price of our goods because wrappers cost more. Here is one of our 'Conchas Especial' cigars, which we have sold for $51 per thousand for five years. We tried to get square with McKinley in the first place by reducing wages. We now pay but $9 for making that $51 cigar, instead of $10 as formerly. Many other houses stopped paying union wages for the same reason. They were compelled to do it. In the next place we required our workmen to cut closer. They used to use two and three-quarters pounds to wrap 1,000 cigars, now two and one-quarter is a liberal allowance. This, of course, makes it harder for men to earn high wages. Then we pay less for seed leaf tobacco than ever before. The tobacco growers thought they were getting protection. The fact is that the extraordinarily high duty compels us to pay more for wrappers—which our farmers can't raise—and forces us to pay less for fillers—which they can raise.

"In spite of all these facts, we have been unable to keep our workmen busy, and have had to let some go. If it were not for the McKinley duty, we could now be employing twice as many men and paying them union wages, too."

This same man who, by the way, did not wish his name mentioned in print, in connection with reduced wages, said that the $2 duty had not hurt him as much as it did small manufactures, nor benefited him like it had benefited large ones who had sufficient capital, in 1890, with which to purchase a two years' supply of Sumatra tobacco, before the McKinley tax doubled the price. Many small manufacturers have gone to the wall because of this duty, and many workmen are prevented from going into business because it requires so much more capital than formerly, to purchase wrapper tobacco. "The duty," he said, "protects only the monopolists and speculators at the expense of small manufacturers, workmen, farmers and consumers." He mentioned three New York speculators who had made at least $1,000,000 by buying Sumatra tobacco before the duty took effect, and selling it a year or two later.

That this high duty has, as usual, led to undervaluation and perjury and favored the dishonest importer, is evident from the statement of this manufacturer, accompanied by a wink, that a neighbor manufacturer had actually imported 600 bales of Havana fillers; and that although these bales contained, in their centers, enough wrapping tobacco to wrap the fillers outside, yet wrapper duty was paid only on one bale. This, said my informant, has become the usual method of procedure.

Politicians, Take Warning.

Those who hope and those who fear that the demand of the people for a radical reform of the tariff will somehow be juggled with and evaded by the politicians overlook the most impressive and most decisive element in that demand. It is that a great public wrong be righted. The economic argument against protection is conclusive, but it was no mere argument of any kind which led to the peaceful revolution of this year's Presidential election. Protection went down not simply or mainly because it was perceived to be economically unsound, but because it was perceived to be politically unjust.

Politicians will do well to give early and serious heed to the just demand of the people for relief from oppressive tariff taxation. Delay is not even expedient. If there is any force in the plea that the law-made profits of certain men should not be touched this winter or next spring, there will be still greater force in it a year from now, and greater yet from then on. Those mysterious "adjustments" which we are adjured not to touch will become more sacred and inviolable with every month. If they are to be broken up at all, as the country declared its wish they should be, the work cannot be begun too soon. Furthermore, it will be extremely dangerous for any politician to trifle with a public demand which has so strong a moral element in it as that now found in the tariff-reform movement. When an avalanche of that sort is loosened it never moves backward. In 1861 Senator Sherman was writing his brother that the Republican party would pass no laws disturbing slavery either in the States or the District of Columbia. The clearer-sighted General told him that a war was coming which would "ruin all politicians." It did ruin all who did not make haste to ally themselves with the moral sentiment back of the war. A similar sentiment is now stirring in the breasts of the people, calling for the speedy removal of the abuses and injustices which selfish men have enacted into law under the name of protection, and it will be the ruin of all politicians who do not give heed to it.—New York Evening Post, Dec. 5.

Democrats—True and False.

"Protection is a fraud," said the Democratic platform. "It is robbery of the poor by the rich," said the Democratic stump-speaker. To all of which the people said "amen" in a voice so loud that it nearly scared Republicans out of their boots.

"Well, what are you going to do about it," now says the protected manufacturer. "Surely you aren't going to stop all the fraud and robbery at once! You will ruin us and the country will go to the dogs if you do."

"Lord, save us from our friends," says the half-fledged, weak-kneed Democratic Representative, as he begins to think about voting to put the duty back on sugar and to leave a little, just a little, "incidental protection" on manufactured goods.

"If protection is robbery, as the people have declared, then incidental protection is incidental robbery," says the stout-backed Democratic Representative, as he prepares to vote to abolish the whole rotten system of favoritism and corruption and to lift the heavy load of taxation from the backs of the workingmen.

The Steel Rail Trust.

The policy of the powerful combination of the manufacturers of steel rails has at last caused a considerable quantity of rails to be imported, in spite of the heavy tariff duty. The Iron Age of the 22d ult. reports the sale of 10,000 tons of foreign rails to be delivered at Seattle for use on the Pacific coast. The price of such rails at Liverpool, free on board, is now $19.44 per ton. The duty is $13.44, and the ocean freight charges must make the total cost at Seattle about $40.

The conditions which permit these rails to be imported profitably are exceptional. There are no rail factories west of the Rocky Mountains, and there is only one small one west of Chicago. Consequently, the cost of domestic rails to consumers on the Pacific Slope is largely increased by the overland freight charges. It would not pay to import rails for use on lines this side of the Rocky Mountains, for foreign rails cannot be laid down at this port, duty paid, for less than $36 per ton; but the high cost of transportation, added to the high price exacted by the combination, makes it possible now for railroad companies whose lines are near the Pacific coast to save something by bringing rails from Europe by water.

If prices were determined here by competition, even the high cost of overland transportation would not prevent the purchase of domestic rails for use on the Pacific coast. But for for more than two years the domestic manufacturers, under the shelter of a duty which is 69 per cent. of the selling price of foreign rails in Liverpool, have suppressed competition and have exacted a uniform price of $30 per ton at the Eastern mills and $32.50 at the Illinois mills. In the meantime the cost of their raw material has been reduced by $3 to $4 per ton, but the effect of the combination agreement has been to deprive consumers of any benefit on this account.

This is one of the most familiar examples of the manner in which a trust or a similar combination uses a high-tariff duty as an "instrument of extortion," in the words applied to this process by the New York Tribune in an unguarded utterance. The duty is three and one-half times the difference between the labor cost here and the labor cost abroad, as shown clearly by Mr. Harrison's Commissioner of Labor, and the manufacturers seized upon it as an instrument that would enable them to exact huge profits from the people, for it is upon the people that the cost of railroad equipment finally falls. The price was so fixed by the combination that importations for any part of the country except the Pacific coast would be unprofitable, and not until now has it been profitable to import for roads there, for the quantity of rails imported is shown by the Treasury reports to have been only 433 tons in the last two years for the whole country. A reduction of the combination price is now predicted.

The South Looking Up.

One of the pleasant reflections of this Christmas is the fact that we are on the verge of better times. Everything indicates that the coming year will bring prosperity to all parts of the country. The Manufacturers' Record, of Baltimore, has been making inquiries in all sections, and it reports the outlook as very encouraging, especially in the South.

All business interests in the South, the Record finds, have suffered in common with those of other sections from the financial disturbances of 1891. Cotton growers, and along with them a large proportion of the mercantile and banking interests, suffered from the low price of cotton. To the financial difficulties created by the Baring failure was added the economic drag of the McKinley tariff, increasing the price of articles used by Southern agriculturists.

The November election has had very material results from a business point of view. There is a vivifying hope of lower prices and cheapened production when the protective tariff is reduced. The fear of inimical Congressional legislation has vanished. "Confidence," says the Record, "has been established, and the South will become within the next year the scene of unprecedented industrial and commercial activity, not a boom, but natural, unrestrained growth and progress." The gratifying statement is made by a well-informed business man in Alabama that the farmers of his region are out of debt and—a rare thing—"have enough to run them through another crop." It is the general testimony that the elections have made the people "feel good." They are "cheerful and confident," which means renewed effort, increased enterprise, business activity and progress.—Atlanta Journal.

Not Going to Washington.

Congressman Walker, of Massachusetts, in his speech the other day, referring to coming tariff changes, said: "Now, let no manufacturer show his face in Washington under any circumstances." Mr. Walker's diagnosis of the times is that the manufacturer's employes will go to Washington and do the work usually done by the employes, if the latter will leave it severely alone. We trust that all manufacturers will heed Mr. Walker, and that the pearl-button men, the tin-plate heroes, the worsted sufferers, not to mention the sugar-refining martyrs and the trusts in general, will resolutely stay away and leave the whole thing to their workmen. Then we shall perhaps see the unwonted spectacle of a lot of mill operatives going to Washington to beg Congress not to do the things that they voted in favor of when they went to the polls in November. For did not President Harrison say in a recent letter that the election was lost because the operative would not walk under the same umbrella with his employer?—New York Evening Post.

Tariff on Raw Material.

The claim that the tariff encourages industry is nowhere more conclusively exploded than in the numerous and flagrant instances in which we impose tariffs upon the raw materials of our manufactures. The tariff on raw materials—coal, iron, copper, tin, lead, lumber, wool—is not merely (1) a tax on the laboring man, making his fuel and clothing, as well as his tools and every article of furniture, cost him more than it otherwise would, but (2) directly reduces the profitable opportunity and demand for labor, and therefore helps to paralyze industry.

As to (1) it is so well understood that it needs but a word. The tariff enables the owners of raw materials to charge more than they otherwise could. If it did not, there would be no use for a tariff. The manufacturer having to pay more for his materials, his manufactured goods cost him more than they otherwise would, and he has to sell them for more to make a profit. Every suit of clothes costs the buyer more, because of the duty on wool. Every tin pan costs the economical housekeeper more, every tin roof increases the rent of the victims that are under it, every can of tomatoes or oysters costs more because of the tax on tin plates. Every yard of calico costs the woman that wears it more because of the tax on dye-stuffs; every pound of paint costs more because of the tax on lead; every house costs more because of the tax that is levied on the materials of which it is composed. The result of this is, that the wages of the workman are deminished—that is, he gets less goods for a day's work.

But the second effect of the tariff on raw materials is a still more serious one. Even if our people alone were to be considered, it is plain that the higher the price of any article the fewer will be sold—fewer people can afford to buy it. And since the demand for labor depends upon how many goods are to be made (and not on how much profit the manufacturer makes on each piece), it is easy to see that taxed raw materials reduce the demand for labor and the number of men employed. But this is not the worst. The high price of raw materials caused by the tariff (25 per cent. on coal, 40 per cent. on iron ore, 75 per cent. on tin plates, 40 per cent. on copper, 20 per cent. on lumber, 50 to 100 per cent. on wool) makes them cost more to our manufacturers, who, therefore, cannot make goods as cheaply as they otherwise could; and hence, cannot afford to sell them as cheaply as do the English and Germans, who get their raw materials free. It therefore is the English and Germans, and not ourselves, who supply the rest of the world at large with manufactured goods.—Hon. John DeWitt Warner.

Some Sugar Statistics.

Willett & Gray's Statistical Sugar Trade Journal of Dec. 29 contains weekly quotations of raw and refined sugar since 1882. Those who still think that the tariff is not a tax should glance over these tables. The price of granulated sugar varies from 6 to 9 cents per pound, for eight years, and then it suddenly drops from 6.13, on March 24, 1891, to 4.50 cents on March 31. A foot note says: "About 2 cents per pound duty taken off April 1, 1891." Since then the price has varied from 4 to 4.92 cents. The price of raw sugar (96 degrees centrifugal) dropped in the same dates from 5.68 to 3.53 cents per pound. If the trust had not been in control at the time, the price of refined sugar would have dropped about exactly 2 cents. But McKinley graciously left a duty of ½ cent per pound on refined sugar to enable the trust to retain control of the market.

The tables also show the benefits of the "economies of production" from trusts. Before the trust was formed, in November, 1887, the difference in the prices of raw and refined sugars had for two years averaged less than 7-10 cents per pound. In 1888 and 1889 it averaged 1¼ cents. It then decreased, while the trust was waging war upon outside refiners until, on Jan. 14, 1892, it was only 9-20 of a cent. The trust having completed arrangements to purchase all of the competing refineries, the difference began to increase in February, 1892. On March 25 it crossed 1 cent; on May 19, it was 1 1-6 cents; on September 8, 1¼ cents; on December 29, it was again 1 1-6 cents. It costs about ½ cent to refine sugar. Every difference, then, of 1-16 cent above this means about $2,500,000 clear profit to the sugar trust. The duty of ½ cent produces no revenue to the United States, but is worth about $20,000,000 a year to the trust.

The Iron Age comments as follows upon a significant change of prices:

"While the deal between the National Lead Company and the linseed oil producers has been shrouded in mystery, as usual of late where concentration of interests is involved, a most suggestive move has been made in the shape of an advance of 2 cents per gallon in the price of oil. Not a particle of evidence comes from any quarter that would point to a change in the relation of supply to demand as dictating this advance, nor is the condition of the market for crude material such as to necessitate higher figures for oil."

The advance is probably due to the great "economies of production" which are attained, the professors of trustism say, only by means of a combination that suppresses competition.—New York Times.

Whisky Tax.

The proposal to increase the whisky tax is the one, however, which seems to meet with greatest favor. It would please the temperance people and it would not hurt the liquor manufacturers in the least. On the contrary, it would enrich them.

THE SENATE AND HOUSE.

WORK OF OUR NATIONAL LAWMAKERS.

Proceedings of the Senate and House of Representatives—Important Measures Discussed and Acted Upon—Gist of the Business.

The National Solons.

The Senate was in session Monday for five hours. Half of the time was spent on Mr. McPherson's (N. J.) joint resolution authorizing and directing the Secretary of the Treasury to suspend all purchases of silver under the Sherman act, and the other half on the bill granting additional quarantine powers and imposing additional duties upon the Marine Hospital service. Mr. McPherson addressed the Senate at length in support of his joint resolution. Mr. McPherson had not finished his speech at 3 o'clock, when the quarantine bill was laid before the Senate as the special order, but it was laid aside temporarily to allow Mr. McPherson to conclude. The House Committee on Banking and Currency by a decisive vote pushed the Andrew banking and bullion purchase repeal bill, together with the Cate amendment for the coinage of silver bullion now in the treasury, through the committee and ordered its report to the House. A motion of Cox (Tenn.) to carry out the State bank plank in the Chicago platform was defeated by 11 to 1. Mr. Townsend (Cal.) offered the Steward free-coinage bill. This was voted down. The Cate amendment was then adopted, and then Mr. Cate was authorized to report the bill as agreed to by a vote of 8 to 4. The bill as agreed upon provides that national banks upon a deposit of interest bearing United States bonds shall be entitled to receive circulating notes to the full par value of the bonds deposited. At present 90 per cent. is the limit.

Section 2 reduces the tax on national bank circulation from ½ to ¼ of 1 per cent. each half year.

Section 4 is the Cate amendment and amends the coinage section of the Sherman act so as to read as follows:

That the Secretary of the Treasury shall coin into standard silver dollars so much of the silver bullion purchased under the provisions of this act as may be necessary to provide for the redemption of the treasury notes herein provided for, and shall coin from time to time into standard silver dollars the remainder of such bullion for the uses of the treasury as speedily as the demands upon the treasury may render practicable the payment out of the treasury of such standard silver dollars, and such standard silver dollars coined under this provision of this act for the uses of the treasury shall be covered into the treasury as miscellaneous receipts, and any gain or seniorage arising from any such coinage shall be accounted for and paid into the treasury.

The bill granting additional quarantine powers and imposing additional duties upon the Secretary of the Treasury and the marine hospital service was passed by the Senate Tuesday. After the quarantine bill was passed the special order, the bill prohibiting immigration for one year, was permitted to lapse. The anti-option bill was taken up, and Mr. Vilas (Dem., Wis.) completed his argument against it. There was no action on the bill, the Senate adjourning for lack of a quorum. The House met Tuesday morning in continuation of Monday's session and resumed consideration of the bill for the admission of the Norfolk & Western Railroad into the District of Columbia, and after a sharp discussion it was passed. The House proceeded to the consideration of the Crain joint resolution, proposing amendments to the Constitution, substituting the 31st day of December for the 4th day of March as the commencement and termination of the official terms of members of the House of Representatives and of the United States Senators and providing that Congress shall hold its annual meeting on the second Monday in January, and substituting the 30th of April for the 4th of March as the date for the commencement, and limiting of the terms of the President and Vice President. The vote ordering the joint resolution to a third reading resulted: Yeas, 49; nays, 131; thus defeating the measure. The House then adjourned.

Immediately after the reading of the journal of Wednesday Mr. Blackburn (Ky.) rose, and, announcing the death of Senator Kenna, offered resolutions expressive of the sorrow with which the news of the death was received. A committee was appointed to take charge of the funeral, and as a further mark of respect the Senate adjourned. No business but the reception of the Banking Committee's majority and minority reports on the repeal of the Sherman act was done in the House. Senator Kenna's death was announced, and the House adjourned.

Both houses of Congress left work Thursday to take part in the funeral of Senator Kenna. Funeral services were held in the Senate chamber. The body of the dead Senator was carried into the Senate wing of the Capitol and laid in state in the marble-room under a guard of Capitol police. The casket was not opened. When the Senate was called to order Senator Faulkner, colleague of the deceased, secured for the West Virginia legislative delegation the privileges of the floor, and the Senate took a recess. A bier had been placed at the head of the main aisle. Soon the members of the lower house entered the chamber led by Speaker Crisp, who took a place beside the Vice President. The President, his Cabinet, the Supreme Court Judges and the mourning widow came next. They were followed by a procession of robed priests preceded by acolytes bearing censor and candles. Capitol police bore in the casket and Bishop Keane, of the Roman Catholic university, in purple robes, with the priests ranged about the coffin. The bishop preached the funeral sermon.

In the Senate Friday Mr. Sherman (O.) reported back to the Senate the bill to extend to the North Pacific Ocean the provisions of the statute for the protection of fur seals and other fur-bearing animals. The bill was passed. At 2 p. m. the anti-option bill was taken up, the pending question being the amendment offered by Mr. White (La.) to strike out the last provision of Section 2. The proviso is "that such contract or agreement shall not be made, settled for by delivery or settlement of difference, or by any other mode of performance or settlement in or upon any board of trade," etc. The amendment was rejected—yeas, 15; nays, 32. So the proviso is retained in the bill. In the House filibustering was indulged in all day against the consideration of private war claims bills, with the result that nothing was accomplished.

Most of Saturday's session of the Senate was occupied by Mr. Morgan of Alabama on the Nicaragua Canal bill. In the course of his speech he spoke sadly of the Monroe doctrine as "worn, torn and fragmentary," and as having been kicked by the Senate into "doll rags." Mr. Morgan, speaking of the provision of the bill for ten Government directors (out of fifteen) said that if the French government had its own directors in the Panama Canal Company the robberies which had taken place and which had disgraced and nearly destroyed the French republic would not have been perpetrated, and that the fraud and corruption and villainy which was now shocking the sensibilities of that great and noble people would have been avoided. At the conclusion of Mr. Morgan's speech the anti-option bill came up as a special order, but (in antagonism to it) Mr. Walcott (Rep.) of Colorado moved to proceed to the consideration of the first bill on the calendar. On that motion Mr. Washburn (Rep.) of Minnesota demanded the yeas and nays, and the result was—yeas 9, nays 31—not a quorum voting. After a brief executive session the Senate adjourned. The time of the House was principally consumed in consideration of the bill ratifying the agreement with the Cherokee Nation of Indians for the cession to the United States of the tract of land known as the "Cherokee Outlet." The bill was passed and the House adjourned.

THE Senate confirmed the nomination of Henry Clay Evans, of Tennessee, to be First Assistant Postmaster General.

SECRETARY TRACY has awarded the contracts for constructing the cruiser Brooklyn and the battle ship Iowa to Cramp & Sons of Philadelphia.

MR. ROBINSON, of Pennsylvania introduced in the House a bill increasing from $1 to $3 per barrel the internal revenue tax on fermented liquors.

THE naval review at New York next spring, following the rendezvous at Hampton Roads, Va., will not take place unless Congress makes additional provision for its proper celebration.

MARYLAND ROASTER AND BAKER

IMPROVED
ROASTER & BAKER

FOR MEATS, FOWL, FISH, ETC., AND FOR BAKING BREAD, CAKES AND PUDDINGS.

BEST SIMPLEST AND CHEAPEST

THE STEAM produced by the process of cooking cannot escape, is absorbed by the article in the roaster, and acts as a basting. There is no evaporation, no drying up or burning, hence no shrinkage or loss of weight, and all the flavor and nutritious qualities of the food are retained. Tough meats are made tender, and any article roasted or baked will be sweeter, healthier and more digestible. Put the food in the roaster, place the roaster in a well heated oven; the roaster will do the cooking. It requires no attention. Can only be bought from dealers, the trade supplied by:

CAPTAIN TREMAIN'S WIFE.

A Thrilling Story of the Days of the American Revolution.

BY MARTHA J. LAMB.

CHAPTER I.

"Isn't that a boat, that speck upon the river near the other shore?"

The questioner, a pale, blue-eyed young man of perhaps 25, bore the marks of rough experiences. One eye was closed and one side of his face swollen and discolored. His clothing was in disorder and his left arm badly sprained. He was reclining on the damp earth at the mouth of a shallow cave on the shore of the Hudson, near what is now the western terminus of Christopher street. It was in the forenoon of a sultry day in the month of June, 1776.

In striking contrast to the limp figure of the bruised and battered Harry Shipton was the self-poised, faultlessly attired, gentlemanly looking man of some thirty or more years who stood before him. He was in citizen's dress, but of unmistakable military bearing, tall, well proportioned, with a shapely head, and features of unusual manly beauty. He looked toward the object indicated.

"Yes," he said, quietly, "that seems to be a boat, probably some fisherman's." Then, turning and fixing his pitying eyes upon the disabled youth, he asked, "How did you get through the night?"

"Horribly. Such a hole as this to stay in, and my head and arm splitting with pain!"

"It is bad. Perhaps you would rather I had let them drag you to the old jail—but that might not have been the worst of your trials."

"Oh, no; this is a palace to that. Don't think I am ungrateful, but I am in agony. What shall I do? Do you know whether those devils are still hunting for me?"

"I think they are, but not in this direction. Someone raised the cry that a Tory had placed you behind him on his horse and galloped off to the north in the darkness, and a lot of troopers started on the run expecting to overtake you. Meanwhile you found a refuge here."

"You found it for me. It is a mystery to me how you ever brought me here. I don't seem to remember."

"Let that pass now. How would you like a bit of breakfast?" From his pocket meanwhile the speaker exhumed a small paper parcel and placed it upon a lace-edged pocket handkerchief which he spread upon the ground before the young man for a tablecloth. It was a delicious sandwich. A little flask was drawn from another pocket and some wine poured into a tiny silver mug and placed beside it. Harry Shipton had fasted for nearly twenty-four hours, and having one free hand he helped himself like a starving man. He brightened at once and said:

"You are jolly good to me, and yet I do not even know your name."

"I am plain Dr. Harris for the present. I cannot tell you my real name, because these rocks may have ears, and these are war times."

"Is there any way for me to get off the island to-day, Doctor? Did you see my brother last night, as you promised?"

"Yes, I saw Charlie Shipton, if he is your brother. I went immediately to him on leaving you here, told him of your misfortune and your injuries, and where you could be found, and urged him to provide means to help you across the Hudson to your family. He was uncivil to me and abused you. He said you were a traitor to your country and deserved to be hanged, and that he neither could nor would do anything for Perhaps you know that he has enlisted in a rebel artillery company under the captainship of a young man by the name of Hamilton, to whom, by the way, I had to apply, in the guise of a doctor, for a permit to speak to your brother."

"Of course he did. I could accomplish nothing without telling him, and I was convinced he would not betray you. He expressed great sympathy for you, and sorrow that you were on the wrong side in the controversy; said you and he were chums in college and that he liked you immensely. He made it easy for me to confer with your brother without eavesdroppers, and you know the result."

"What could have turned Charlie into stone?" moaned Harry Shipton. "He has always been the dearest boy in the world until lately, so tender-hearted, so generous, so true. Hamilton was a clever lad, forever drilling the boys in military gymnastics in the college grounds and then orating on politics and war. I could beat him in recitation, though, every time. I was at the head—and now to think of my being a fugitive, hunted to the death in my own native New York, and my brother willing to let me die! He is a monster!"

"Look, Doctor, look! That boat is certainly heading for the shore, just below us here," and Harry Shipton pulled himself up for a better view.

There was no available landing place in the vicinity and the little craft was in obvious danger. Gusts of wind had been for some time stirring the broad Hudson into a tumult and the boat was dancing among the waves like a crazy thing as it neared the rough bank.

"By Jove, it will be dashed to pieces! It is a woman rowing! She cannot manage the oars," cried Harry.

There was no response, for the doctor had darted to the water's edge with the speed of a whirlwind; but before he was near enough to make his voice heard by the occupants of the boat (two women and an infant), the woman who was rowing made a spring to clutch some overhanging bushes, and partially succeeding was dragged forward into the deep black water and disappeared. The boat rebounded from the shock, tottered a moment upon the crest of a high wave, and then went over—the woman with the infant in her arms uttering a piercing shriek as she was plunged into the river. The doctor had divested himself of his loose clothing as he ran, and swinging himself down by the branch of a tree he dropped into the abyss and presently emerged with a burden that taxed all his strength to lift up the ragged bluff to a place of safety. It was the mother with her infant clasped tightly to her breast in a death-like embrace. The baby was extricated, and after a little manipulation opened its laughing eyes and puckered its pretty mouth and coo-oo-ed. The doctor squeezed some of the water from its clothing, and picking up his coat from where he had thrown it wrapped it about the little innocent, which he laid tenderly into a nest among the bushes. Then he applied all his energies to the restoration of the mother, whose white, girlish face was very lovely in her unconsciousness. Great masses of brown hair, loosened from their fastenings, were so tangled about her neck and throat that he was obliged to cut some of it away with his pocket knife to prevent her choking. As she gradually revived he placed the flask with its few remaining drops of wine to her lips—then fanned her gently with his hat.

"My baby," she whispered without lifting her eyelids.

"Your baby is safe," was the reassuring response.

"Is she dead? Oh, heavens, it is my sister Edith!" exclaimed some one behind the doctor, and turning his head he looked into the horrified face of Harry Shipton, who had hobbled to the spot from the cave.

"No, Harry, not dead," came from the prostrate figure, whose beautiful dark eyes were wide open now and fixed upon her rescuer with wondering interest. She held out her hand and the Doctor raised her into a sitting posture—and it was necessary for him to support her thus for a few moments.

"I came for you, Harry. I hope the boat is not lost, for you are to go back in it," she said, and Doctor Harris observed that she had the low, trained voice of a gentlewoman—a voice with a thrill in it that sent the blood rushing through his veins.

"You came for me, Edith! How did you know I was here?" asked Harry.

"Charley told us; he came to us in the night—last night—he had special leave of absence from Captain Hamilton to inform us of your hurts, and papa and mamma were so distressed and uncertain how you could be reached and your life saved that I volunteered to undertake the secret service. Matilga rowed me across the river and is to row you back. Where is she?"

"I will look for her," said the doctor. "She fell into the water, upsetting the boat, and I fear she is drowned."

"Oh, no, I think not. She can swim like a fish, and is quite equal to saving herself," said the lady, as calmly as she would have ordered a chicken for dinner.

The words had scarcely left her lips when a woolly head and a very black face appeared above a rock on the edge of the bank. Up came one black hand, then another, and, finally, the whole figure of a short, stout negro woman was in sight.

"Halloa, Missus! how's you got up dare? I'se been ranstacking all frow de riber for ye. Seho, Massa Harry, youse ready, be's ye? I'se jest done beat a tryin' to catch dat boat, and I'se got him. Gome along wid ye."

Surprises had chased each other so swiftly that Harry was completely overcome. He saw how he had misjudged his brother Charlie, and now here was his proud and handsome sister risking her life in a venture few men would have undertaken to get him out of the trouble he had indiscreetly brought upon himself. Matilga came forward and surveyed him with a friendly grin.

"Massa Harry, wot you been a doin' to yer eye? Massa Charlie don't get no such bad looks. Be's you tryin' to beat dis nigger on de color question? Come along wid ye."

"What is your hurry? We cannot leave Edith here——"

"Yes, you can," interrupted the lady, "it is all arranged. Nobody wants to hang me; it is only yourself, Harry, that is in immediate danger. I am going to stay on this side for the present. I expect to pay a visit to General Washington and ask for a permit to join my husband."

"Come along wid ye, Massa Harry. I hear de guns dis berry minute."

"I think, Shipton, you had better lose no time. I will look after your sister," said the Doctor, assisting the young man as best as he could toward the shore.

"Good-by, Missus. Ursula will fix you up skrim," cried Matilga, as she vanished beyond the bluff.

CHAPTER II.

Under the hot skies of that memorable month of June, 1776, New York was one of the most stirring places on the Western Continent. The erection of an independent empire on this side of the Atlantic Ocean was the all-absorbing topic of thought and speech. War and bloodshed was on the wing. Men were working day and night on the fortifications. For many weeks New York had been in a state of agonized alarm. Families were making their escape as best they could, taking little or much with them as the circumstances permitted. The rich knew not where to go for safety, and the poor, thrown upon the charity of interior towns, suffered from a complication of ills. Hundreds of men were suddenly deprived of the means of supporting their families. Inhabitants as well as soldiers were subject to strict military discipline.

Washington had reached New York on the 13th of the previous April, and was in almost hourly consultation with the principal men of the New York Congress, several of whom were appointed to military office. Troops were marching into the city from all points of the compass in variegated costumes that must have seemed grotesque to the English soldiery. The old red coats worn in the French wars had been brought from the garrets and brushed up for use by the Connecticut men. Thus every now and then was seen a dingy regimental of scarlet with a triangular and much tarnished laced hat among the tow-frocked volunteers. Some of the Marylanders wore green hunting shirts with leggins to match. Troops from Delaware came in dark blue coats with red facings. Some of the Jersey riflemen were in short red coats and striped trousers, others in short blue coats, old leather breeches, light blue stockings, shoes with brass buckles and wool hats bound with yellow. The Pennsylvania regiments were in all the colors of the rainbow, brown coats faced with buff, blue coats faced with red, black coats faced with white and studded with great pewter buttons, buckskin breeches and blue cockhats with white tape bindings, also blue coats faced with white; while several companies came without any coats at all, each man with but a single shirt, and that so small that the New-Englanders made fun of them. The Virginians were in white smock frocks furbelowed with ruffles at the neck, elbows and wrists, black stocks, hair in cue, and round-topped, broad-rimmed black hats, although ere long their light dragoons were uniformed in blue coats faced with red, or brown coats faced with green. Washington's guards wore blue coats faced with buff, red waistcoats, buckskin breeches, black felt hats bound with white tape and bayonet and body belts of white. Hunting shirts with breeches of the same cloth gaiter, fashion about the legs were seen on every side, and as these were convenient garments for a campaigning country, they were soon adopted by the British themselves. This was the origin of the modern trouser or pantaloon.

The question of what to do with the Tories was anxiously being discussed by the patriots, as they were making mischief on every hand. It was difficult to discriminate between those who were really criminal as covert enemies and such as indulged in a peaceful difference of opinion. Many were seized on suspicion and imprisoned by the Committee on Conspiracy. The popular element was fierce and uncompromising and compelled neighbors to show their colors. It was unsafe to breathe a syllable against the American cause. Neutrality was not tolerated. All who did not declare themselves "for liberty" were, in the lower class particularly, pronounced traitors and pursued with merciless rancor. They were chased like beasts and obliged to secret themselves in the woods, swamps and other hiding places and wait for the coming of the British army. Even in the best families fathers and mothers were doomed to see their children arrayed against each other, as in the case of Harry and Charlie Shipton. Wives saw their husbands arming against their own blood. Personal and domestic happiness was jeopardized on all sides.

The Shiptons lived in an elegant house in Broad street, and were greatly beloved by their associates. Colonel Shipton was a retired British officer, but his three children were born in New York. His only daughter, Edith, had, in 1774, married her cousin, Roland Tremain, a young man about her own age. When hostilities were dawning he had defied all his relatives and family interests and joined the patriots. Charles Shipton did likewise, despite his father's protest and prayers. Harry Shipton's sympathies were with his father and with British rulership, and he combated with his brother Charles on the subject until coming to boiling heats the father interfered and told each to go his own way. They left the family fireside one sad evening, by different doors, and before midnight Colonel Shipton was privately informed that he was himself under suspicion and to be arrested by the "Committee on Conspiracy" during the next forenoon. This was to him an unexpected blow, for he had no intention of taking part in the coming conflict. There seemed but one course, however, for him to pursue; he secured boats and in the darkness of the early morning he and his family were conveyed with a few necessaries to the Jersey shore of the Hudson, where they took possession of a farmhouse on their own property, some half a mile from the river. This was only a temporary refuge, and Edith, who went with them, intended to return to New York the first opportunity in order to be near her husband.

"I am at your service, what can I do for you?" The Doctor had clambered up the bank from having seen Harry safely embarked on his trip across the Hudson, to find his patient convalescing rapidly. She had crept to her baby and was amusing it by shaking bits of grass over its face.

"There is a little habitation in the woods to the north of us, not far, where some of our servants are staying. I will go there. May I know how seriously my brother Harry is injured?"

"He has no wounds so far as I am aware that endanger his life, but he has such as should have immediate care."

"Was it true what Charlie told us, that he just barely escaped being hung."

"You might have thought so if you had seen the irresponsible mob that had him in hand when I came upon the scene," said the Doctor, smiling. "May I go and bring some of your people to you?"

"Oh, dear, no; I will go to them. If I had baby on my shoulder I could run away even from a band of Indians," and she laughed merrily in trying to rise to her feet, unconsciously seizing both the Doctor's extended hands.

"You had better see if you can walk before you begin to run," he said, playfully.

"I am all right. Yes, I can walk," she replied.

"Well, then, I wonder if baby will oblige me with my coat?"

He picked up the little one, held it high in the air, and made it laugh outright, and, laying it on the ground again, put on his coat, and then took it in his arms quite naturally.

A little later on a graceful, hatless woman, whose clothing, very much soiled and wilted, clung fast to her limbs, was groping her way step by step through a swampy field, followed by a man carrying a baby.

Some negro women sunning themselves in front of a little hut among the trees saw what they at first thought an apparition, but presently recognized the woman and came running to meet her.

"Wat de matter, missus?" they asked in chorus.

"Lord's sake! Glory be's to God you's got out. Ware's Matilga?"

"She has returned to mamma with the boat. Ursula, take the baby and relieve this kind gentleman who helped us out of the water."

The order was obeyed with noisy demonstrations in the way of hugs and kisses, the baby seeming well pleased with it all, and in the midst of the commotion the Doctor took Edith's hand, raised it to his lips, and walked rapidly away, having left the words, "God bless you!" in her ears for a perpetual memory.

"Dare now, guess I know dat chap! Say, missus, ware did you find him?"

"Fanning me, when I was trying to breathe. What do you know about him?"

"He ware at Mister Elliott's last year. He came along wid de Commodore, and he were de chap dat brung de gold claspet to Miss Agnes."

"Well, he has been good to us, and that counts for something. You must not speak of him to a soul, lest they carry him off to prison as an enemy. Are my trunks here?"

"Yes, missus. We covered 'em up wid leaves in de cellar."

"I must have some dry garments at once, and so must baby; dress me up nicely, Ursula, for I am going to call upon Gen. Washington."

Within an hour and a half the wet and snarled hair had been dried and combed and arranged artistically in the fashion of the day, and the sweet face of Edith Tremain framed in a picturesque gypsy hat, while a thin gown of some summer fabric in white and blue set off the shapely figure to great advantage. The baby smiled approval, but cried with animation when the bewitching object went out of sight down the pathway.

Richmond Hill House, Washington's headquarters, stood upon an eminence to the southeast not far distant, about where Charlton now crosses Varick street. It was a country villa, a mile and a half from town, surrounded by fields of grass and grain, with a flower garden at one side inclosed by a hedge. The roses were in bloom, and Ursula, walking beside her mistress along the winding carriage drive to the entrance to the mansion, could not resist putting her hand through the fence and snatching one, which she fastened to Edith's hat, and then walked on demurely. Suddenly there was a clatter of hoofs and two horsemen galloped round the curve toward them, one of whom lifted his three-cornered hat as he passed, and Edith blushed under the admiring gaze of Captain Hamilton, who wheeled his horse to ask respectfully:

"Can I serve you in any way?

"No, thank you, further than to take good care of Charlie," and away he galloped.

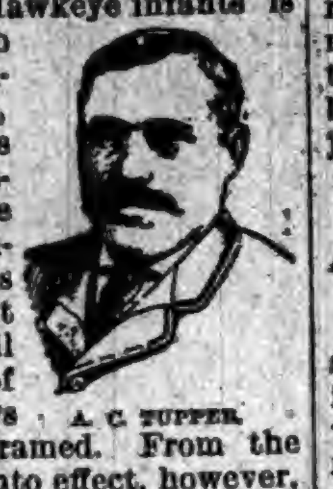
IOWA HAS PURE MILK.

The Hawkeye Inspection System—A Good Law That Is Rigidly Enforced.

There are no pale, sickly or unhealthy babies in Iowa; they are all fat and jolly. This highly satisfactory condition of Hawkeye infants is directly due, so Dairy Commissioner Tupper claims, to the first-class milk law in operation in the State and the able manner in which it is enforced. Iowa, it is admitted all around, has one of the best dairy laws that were ever framed. From the very day it went into effect, however, the quality of the milk used in the principal cities in the State has steadily improved, and now it is found that the products of the dairy there are way above the legal standard. Milk to be good must, according to the law, contain 3 per cent. of butter fat. During the month of July, out of the many tests that were made in various parts of the State, there were only four dealers whose milk was 1 per cent. higher than the legal figure, while the bulk of the milk barely passed the law. Tests made a month later, however, showed the milk of fifteen dealers to contain 4 per cent. of butter fat, and now it is rarely that the tests show less than 3.50 or 4 per cent. Commissioner Tupper is now satisfied that there is no State in the Union where purer milk is sold.



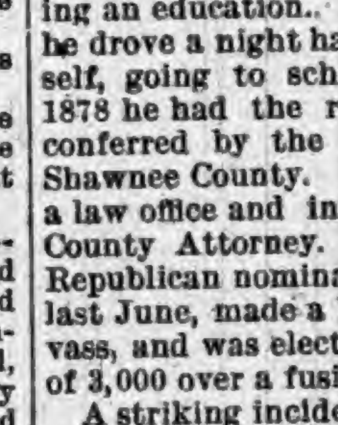
A. C. TUPPER.

The law provides that any person who shall sell, or exchange, or expose for sale, deliver or bring to another for domestic use, or to be converted into any product of human food whatsoever, any unclean, impure, unhealthy, adulterated, unwholesome or skimmed milk, or milk taken from an animal having disease, or was taken from an animal fifteen days before or less than five days after parturition, shall, upon conviction thereof, be fined not less than $25 nor more than $100, and be liable in double the amount of damages to the persons on whom such fraud shall be committed. The law authorizes the dairy commissioners to appoint agents in every city having over 10,000 inhabitants, and to collect samples of the milk sold in such cities. It is their duty to forward such samples to the office of the commissioner in Des Moines. The compensation of such agent at any one time is not to be more than $3 for collecting and delivering the same to express companies. The law also provides that the number of times samples are collected in each city shall not exceed an average of thirty times during any one year.

AN INDIAN IN CONGRESS.

Charles Curtis, a Quarter-Blood Kaw, Elected from Kansas.

Kansas is always doing something unexpected in political fields, and at the recent election it again did a notable act in choosing a quarter-blood Indian to represent the Fourth District, including the capital city of the State.



CHARLES CURTIS.

Charles Curtis, Congressman-elect, is the son of a quarter-blood Kaw Indian and Captain O. A. Curtis, of the Kansas Volunteers, Fifteenth Regiment. His grandmother still lives on the reservation in the Indian Territory and is very proud of her offspring's prominence. He was born in North Topeka Jan. 25, 1860. His mother died when he was 3 years of age, and he was brought up by his father's parents. He was literally the architect of his own fortunes, having been a jockey until his 16th year, commencing as soon as he could manage a horse. He rode horses summers in Texas, Arizona, Colorado, Louisiana, Iowa, and Missouri and attended school winters, thus securing an education. In 1876 and 1877 he drove a night hack to support himself, going to school daytimes. In 1878 he had the rights of majority conferred by the district court of Shawnee County. In 1879 he entered a law office and in 1884 was elected County Attorney. He received the Republican nomination for Congress last June, made a house to house canvass, and was elected by a majority of 3,000 over a fusion candidate.

A striking incident of his canvass was the appearance in his audience in the south part of his district of his Indian grandmother, who wept tears of joy at the "big talk" of Charlie. When the speech was over he went down to her and kissed her, amid the applause of the crowd. He is an eloquent speaker and has a striking appearance.

Ennui of Officers.

Alluding to one or two conspicuous recent instances, the New York World says:

Neither neuralgia nor drink nor insanity nor debt is necessary to make a United States army officer feel like committing suicide. Slow promotion and lack of occupation causes many an ambitious man to occasionally wonder if life is worth living. Nevertheless very few undertake to decide practically that it is not.

Nothing is easier to demonstrate than that men who are worth anything at all must sometimes vary either their employment or their enjoyment. The profession of arms opens up the most glorious possibilities in times of war, especially in the service of a nation which is as well calculated to take care of itself as the United States. But it may prove exceedingly lonesome as it is certainly monotonous in times of peace in a country like this, where the arts of peace are always to the fore, except in the very heat of conflict.

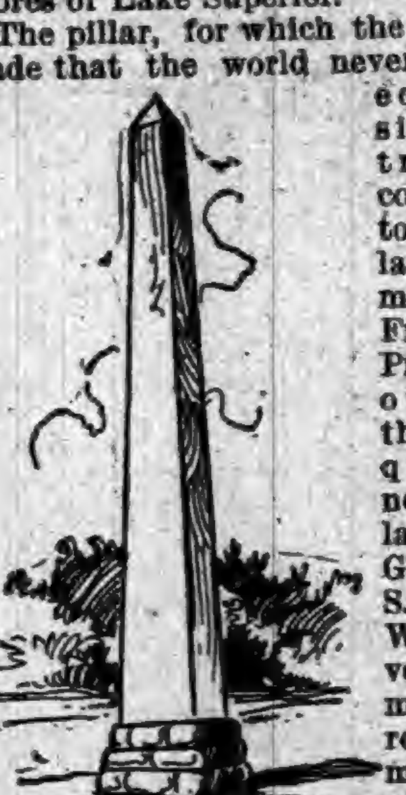
In Germany, on the contrary, these hypochondriacs would be the jolliest of fellows, having men whom they could command almost absolutely and having for their imperial master a young fellow who may not correctly understand the first principles of campaigning, but who loves military reviews better than he loves even the empress and his children, and almost as well as he loves his all-important self.

In other armies in Europe also the jaded, lonesome American officer turned European could reflect that millions were toiling and delving for him. Here he sees hundreds of thousands coining money and getting cartloads of enjoyment while he lives off of reveille and taps. But, save for the few thus inconvenienced, it is all right. A commercial nation, easily mobilizable, does not need to imitate tottering despotism in turning its brave officers and men into mere janizaries.

THE BIGGEST OF ITS KIND.

A Monolith from Wisconsin for the World's Fair.

A great brownstone monolith will stand in Jackson Park, Chicago, during the World's Fair as a specimen of what is produced from the vast quarries of Wisconsin that lie along the shores of Lake Superior.



THE MONOLITH.

The pillar, for which the claim is made that the world never saw its equal in size, can trace its conception to a jocular remark made by Frederick Prentice, owner of the large quarries near Ashland, to ex-Gov. Sam S. Fifield. While conversing on matters relative to monster pillars of stone in the shape of obelisks, Mr. Prentice remarked that he could surpass the largest Egyptian production from among his quarries on the Bayfield shore of Chequamegon Bay, or on one of the numerous Apostle islands. To Mr. Fifield it hardly seemed feasible, but the earnestness of Mr. Prentice and his declaration that if the State of Wisconsin would accept and erect the monument he would deliver it to the State without cost, for a State exhibit at the World's Fair, so impressed Mr. Fifield that he opened communication with the Board of World's Fair Managers. This correspondence, although appearing to the commission to suggest an impossibility, led them to make a visit to Ashland, and, in company with Mr. Prentice, to view the quarries. After looking over the ground, they practically accepted Mr. Prentice's generous tender, and agreed to take the stone as soon as it was broken from its bed, and move and erect the same on the grounds to be designated by the Fair officials at Chicago. Accordingly work was commenced at once with five steam channelers and about forty men, and the work has been pushed until the large pillar was worked out.

The monolith is of Lake Superior brown stone Mr. Prentice's first proposition to furnish the monolith was for a stone just a trifle larger than the Egyptian obelisk, which is 105 feet 7 inches, exclusive of the foundation, and 9 feet square at the base. He first intended the monolith to be 106 feet in length and 9 feet 2 inches at the base, but upon a later consideration decided to have it 115 feet long, 10 feet at the base, and 4 feet square at the top. The apex will be about 5 feet long, and will be tapered to about a 6-inch tip. The entire monolith will rest upon a foundation of granite 10 feet high and 17 feet square.

Photographic Black.

In "charging" the little wax cylinders used upon the Edison phonograph for recording and reproducing speech or song, the singers or instruments whose notes are to be recorded, are placed as closely to the large speaking horn of the phonograph as possible in a room from which all other sound is carefully excluded. If there is more than one singer or instrument they are grouped in a semicircle. Four or five, sometimes as many as seven phonographs, are arranged also in a semi-circle. The sounds are recorded on all simultaneously, but not with equal perfection, some of the cylinders being better than others. By this process, if a large number of cylinders are needed to supply all the phonographs controlled by the company, the music is simply repeated as many times as is necessary. After testing the cylinders are then ready to be placed upon the phonographs at the railway stations, seaside resorts and other public places, where the curious audience of one drops a nickel in the slot and then smiles to himself and wonders why every one else doesn't smile in enjoyment of the feast of song. A much more rapid process is used by Mr. Edison in his works. What is called a "master record" is made upon a single cylinder, which is used similarly to the matrix in the stereotyping process for reproducing or multiplying the cylinders as many times as may be desired.

She's a Genius.

Near the town of White Oaks, N. M., lives one of the most remarkable women even of this most remarkable age. The house in which she lives, a low, white-walled adobe building covered with green vines and fitted out with rich carpets, artistic hangings, books and pictures, exquisite china and silver, and all the dainty belongings with which a refined woman loves to surround herself, was built with her own hands. The huge ranch on which it is located, with 8,000 cattle, is managed entirely by her. It is she who buys or takes up the land, selects and controls the men, buys, sells, and transfers the cattle. She is also a skillful and intelligent prospector, and found the valuable silver mine on her territory, in which she now owns a half interest. She sings charmingly, accompanying herself on the piano or guitar, and handles a cambric needle or water-color brush as dexterously as she uses an adze or a jackplane. She entertains delightfully at her home whist parties, little dances, and even an occasional german. Her name is Mrs. Barber, and she has been twice a widow. A woman who can run a ranch, build a house, manage a mine, and engineer a successful german deserves a prominent place in the ranks of women of genius.

Dr. I. S. Townsend & Brothers,
Consultation Free.
At the Swineford House, Tuesday Jan. 24. One Day Only.

REMARKABLE CURES OF AUBURN AND VICINITY.

For the past four years the afflicted have been flocking in great numbers to see him, and they always return filled with the greatest enthusiasm, and the stories they tell of his remarkable diagnose and wonderful cures border on that of the miraculous. One says, "I went there on crutches and came away without them." Others say they had been sick and suffered for years, and they were cured. To see him and to be treated by him means health.

He asks no questions but gives a full history of each case as soon as he sees the patient telling better how a person feels than they can tell it themselves. His knowledge seems perfect and his medicines are specific. They never fail. The work he accomplishes is truly astonishing.

There is no need to live in constant misery. It cost nothing to see him. The fullest examinations are free. A cure can be had for the mere cost of the medicine. He is the sick man's friend and no one is turned away unaided.

One of Auburn's most respected citizens Mr. M. N. Ward of Auburn, on the corner of Second and Jackson street, says: "I came to see Doctor Townsend four weeks ago I could hardly walk to the doctor's room without help. I have had heart disease and weak lungs and catrrau in my head for 20 years and was given up by the best physicans. I had rheumatic and so my joints was so stiff I could not walk and my head hurt me so I could not rest or sleep. I was nearly deaf in right ear, but now can hear as well as I ever could. My neighbors all know how I have suffered. I can hear the clock tick in both ears. I thank God I feel well. Doctor Townsend has cured me. I have not been able to work for over one year, doctoring and taking patent medicines. I feel I am able to do two men's work now, have gained in flesh. I advise all to call on Doctor Townsend and be cured. I am willing to see any one and tell how bad I was, and let them see how well I am now.

Another respected lady of Auburn, Mrs. Rebecca Dickinson who has had a complication of diseases, stomach kidney, heart and lung disease and neuralgia pains all over, her limbs swollen so she could not step on them. She now feels nearly well, her pains have left her and her heart is well and she feels better every way.

Mr. Ward says his eye sight was so bad he could hardly see. He now feels that he could dispense with his glasses. The Doctor performed over twenty cures on his last visit. He will forfeit $5 00 for any case of catarrh he cannot cure. An eye witness to a lady who was helped to the doctor's room four weeks ago, is now doing her own work.

CLEVELAND'S plurality over Harrison on the popular vote is 435,325. This does not include the democratic vote that was cast to aid the Weaver electors in states where the aim of the democrats was to keep their states out of the Harrison column. If these votes were counted it would run the plurality up to over half a million, or about equal the entire vote of both parties in Indiana.

SOMEONE has sent us a marked copy of the Atlanta, Ind., Herald, in which they call attention to the fact that they are going to make tin there. Well, what of it? Many other towns are making various articles that are just as valuable to the community and just as worthy of having marked copies sent abroad. Auburn has a number of buggy factories, of wind mill factories, of foundries, of church furniture and, such things, but they are run for business and on business principles. All industries that will pay a profit are desirable to have, and a tin plate factory, while also desirable, is no more so than those we have named in Auburn. Let us have done with this foolishness about tin plate, and turn the tin making business to profit, as we can no doubt, and not make it a political bore any longer.

World's Fair Notice

I am building a fine residence on the shore of Lake Michigan one mile south of the world's fair grounds. These rooms will be nicely furnished and rented during the world's fair season. I shall be pleased to show plans of this house and make prices to all who are expecting to visit the fair. My location and terms cannot be excelled. Secure your rooms now. They are going rapidly. Any information gladly given.

New Mexico for Consumptives.

New Mexico has become the great resort for consumptives it has been found that all those who go there while the disease is in its earlier stages, experience great relief, and the majority are permanently cured, the climate is peculiarly adapted to this class of cases. Albuquerque, being the largest town in the territory, and also an American town is the point the most of them seek. An association has been formed there which is called the "Health Resort Society," and which is composed entirely of persons who have been restored to health by this climate. Its object is to answer letters of inquiry and whatever it can to bring the facts in regard to the climate to the notice of the afflicted in all parts of the country. It makes no charge for anything and cheerfully answers all letters received. If you are interested in this subject write to the Health Resort Society, Albuquerque, N. M.

North Galveston's Growth

North Galveston is the name of a new industrial point situated 14 miles north of Galveston, proper. It is being developed by the North Galveston Association, whose local agents are Rickel and Sprott. It has railroad and water facilities and advantages of climate and location which insure big returns, either to the investor or the settler. Call upon Rickel & Sprott to day.

Wages and Labor Cost.

The more one knows about Republican protection the less one believes in it, and a thorough knowledge of the subject would put to flight the last particle of faith in this humbug still left among the people of the United States. The most absurd pretense as to protection is the pretense that it enables protected manufacturers to pay the difference between the wages of American and foreign workingmen. It does not, because in most protected industries there is no such difference as the Republican protectionists pretend to discover. The fact is that in most of these industries American labor is the cheapest in the world.

You will not believe this if you read only Republican newspapers, for they take care to compare only the day wages of Americans with the day wages of foreigners, and in most trades, whether protected or not, American day wages are higher than European day wages. It is easy enough, however, to show that this is not a fair method of comparison. One often hears a hustling housewife say that she'd rather do a piece of work herself than leave it to a careless child or an unskillful, lazy hired girl. Every farmer knows that many a good hand is cheap at double the wages of an idle, shiftless fellow. The woman who knows how to do things finds it cheaper and less wearing to mind and body to do them herself than to have them done by a person who will do them so badly that they must be done over. The farmer would rather pay thirty-five dollars a month to some hands than twenty dollars to others. What is true of the household and the farm is true of the factory and the world in general. There is no mystery about this, and any man who wishes to understand it may do so and may come to understand it so well that he can teach it to others.

Charles S. Hill, a Republican protectionist employed in the department of state, declared on oath before the tariff commission that in 1872 5,250,000 hands in the United States produced $8,000,000 worth of manufactured goods, while in the same year 3,140,200 hands in England produced only $4,000,000 worth of goods. In other words, American labor, measured by the amount it produced, was worth nearly double what English labor was worth. Thus would have paid nearly 100 per cent. more wages than the English manufacturer and still have been better off as to profits.

The New York Press, a high protectionist paper, declared a few years ago that the labor cost in a ton of paper made at Schuylerville, N. Y., was $4.50 less than the labor cost of a ton of paper made in England. The American paper maker, however, was paid an average of $395 per year, while the average of the English paper maker was considerably less. Thirty-seven men at Schuylerville produced 11,000 pounds of paper daily, or an average of nearly thirty tons each. The average daily product of English paper makers was only thirteen tons each.

According to The American Economist, organ of the Republican protectionists, the average product of each manufacturing operative in the United States was, in 1850, $1,105, and in 1880, $2,045. The average annual wages in the one case was $255 per year, in the other $360 per year. That is, labor received 28 per cent. of the product in 1850 when the tariff averaged 24 per cent., and labor received only 24 per cent. of the product in 1880, when the tariff averaged 48 per cent. Yet the tariff was raised to raise wages.

Let every Democrat and every man who thinks of becoming a Democrat get a firm grip on the idea that wages should not be compared by days' pay, but by the amount of labor cost in a given product. Don't let any Republican protectionist fool you with talk about the pauper labor of Europe. Remember ours is the cheapest labor in the world, because it is the best.

Cheapness Under McKinleyism.

The fact that many articles are now cheaper than they were two years ago has been seized upon by Republican editors and stump orators as a proof that the McKinley law has reduced prices. But people who keep themselves informed as to the changing conditions of trade will not be deceived by this transparent humbug. Many raw materials—notably cotton and wool—are now much lower than they were in 1890, and this fall in prices was brought about in the main by far other causes than the McKinley law.

But there is another reason why some prices have not advanced, a reason that is never heard from protectionist speakers and newspaper organs. Honest trade papers, however, are telling some hard truths about the kind of cheapness which we are having under McKinleyism. Such a paper is The American Wool and Cotton Reporter, of Boston, a journal of the very highest character and edited by a Republican and protectionist. Here is what The Reporter says about McKinley cheapness:

"There is some complaint made by clothiers that the quality of the goods now being made by the domestic mills is not up to the old standard. The complaint is not alone with the manufacturing clothier, but is made also by the retail dealer; even some of the well known standard makes are put down as falling short of their old standard. No doubt some of the trade will remember that one of the leading clothiers in this city came out with a letter some two years ago, in which it was stated that as a result of the McKinley bill prices would either be higher or else the product of the mills protected would deteriorate. Almost immediately following the passage of the bill prices were advanced, but in many cases they did not hold, as public sentiment was strongly against a wholesale advance.

"When many of the prices returned to their old figures and business became more settled manufacturers commenced to make a poorer fabric, yet claim it was the same thing, and held to the old price. This practice must have proved profitable, at least for the time being, as it was continued and carried further, so that today the trade complains. To the eye many of the cloths appear fully up to the standard, and it is only after they are doing service for the consumer that the deception is discovered."

It is evident that under McKinleyism "cheap and nasty go together," and we are now buying the particular kind of coats made famous by President Harrison in his noted remark, "I cannot find myself in full sympathy with this demand for cheaper coats, which seems to me necessarily to involve a cheaper man and woman under the coats."

Cement Stronger Than Stone.

From a number of careful tests made to ascertain the precise strength of anchor bolts set in Portland cement in the ordinary way, the fact appeared that the joint was really stronger than the stone. In this demonstration 2-inch iron rods were set into the stones some 11½ inches, and then subjected to the test. The first rod had a screw thread to improve the grip of the cement, and the cement began to yield at a load of 32,000 pounds, the breaking of the stone taking place at 50,000 pounds. With a plain, smooth rod it was found that the cement began to yield at a load of 34,000 pounds, but the rock broke at 67,000 pounds. Thus, though the strength of the cement joint was not developed, it was inferred that, in a suitable setting, the cement joint on a smooth rod might be made to break the rod.—New York Sun.

The Century Magazine in 1893.

It would be hard for a person who cares for good reading to make a better investment than a year's subscription to The Century Magazine. No region is too remote, no expense too great, if it will only produce what the Century's readers want. This is the policy that has made it, as the Pall Mall Budget, of London, says: "By far the best of the magazines, English or American."

The November number begins a new volume and contains the first chapters of a powerful novel of New York society, called "Sweet Bells out of Tune," written by Mrs. Burton Harrison, the author of "The Anglomaniacs." In this story the fashionable wedding, the occupants of the boxes in the Metropolitan Opera House, the "smart set" in the country house are faithfully reflected, and the illustrations by Charles Dana Gibson, "Life's" well known cartoonist, are as brilliant as the novel.

In this November number begins also a great series of papers on "The Bible and Science," opening with "Does the Bible contain Scientific Errors," by Prof. Shields, of Princeton, who takes decided ground that the Bible does not contain scientific errors of any moment, and who most interestingly states the case from his point of view. Other articles in this series will include one in the December (Christmas) number, "The effect of Scientific Study upon Religious Beliefs."

An important series of letters that passed between General Sherman and his brother Senator John Sherman are also printed in November, which number contains also contributions from the most distinguished writers, including an article by James Russell Lowell, which was not quite completed at the time of his death. The suggestion which Bishop Potter makes in the November Century as to what could be done with the World's Fair if it were opened on Sunday, is one which seems the most practical solution of the problem yet offered.

The December Century was a great Christmas number,—full of Christmas stories, Christmas poems, and Christmas pictures,—and in it began the first chapters of a striking novel of life in Colorado, "Benefits Forgot," by Wolcott Balestier, who wrote "The Naulahka" with Rudyard Kipling.

Papers on good roads, the new educational methods, and city government are soon to come. Four dollars will bring you this splendid magazine for one year, and certainly no cultivated home can afford to be without it. Subscribers can remit directly to the publishers, The Century Co., 33 East 17th St., New York. They should begin with November, and so get first chapters of all the serials, including "Sweet Bells out of Tune."

LaGrange Democrat:—The Auburn Courier has a subscriber who paid for his paper this year with raisins, a large quantity of which were sent him by a brother in California. The performance was "fruit" for Bro Barns and we wouldn't mind if some of our own delinquents adopted that method of "raisin' their own subscription.

RHEUMATISM CURED IN A DAY.—"Mystic Cure" for rheumatism and neuralgia radically cures in 1 to 3 days. Its action upon the system is remarkable and mysterious. It removes at once the cause and the disease immediately disappears. The first dose greatly benefits. 75 cents. Sold and guaranteed by Robbins & McCord druggists, Auburn.

For pains in the chest there is nothing better than a flannel cloth saturated with Chamberlain's Pain Balm and bound on over the seat of pain. It will produce a counter irritation without blistering, and is not so disagreeable as mustard; in fact is much superior to any plaster on account of its pain-relieving qualities. If used in time it will prevent pneumonia. 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord.

The Cleveland, Ohio, Plaindealer has this to say of Musin the Violinist. He is more than an artist. He is a genius. To hear him play one would believe that he is inspired. Such sweetness of tone, such exquisite beauty of sound, could not have been acquired by years of study. We know nothing of the technique of his art, but we know there is something about Musin's playing that is entirely captivating. "A person does not need to be cultured in music to appreciate Musin.

Few people realize that the nervous system has more to do with health of the body than the stomach, liver and all the organs of the body which are so much doctored. They forget that the nerves reach and control all parts of the body. Hence many cases are misunderstood and wrongly treated. Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer is a nerve remedy of recent discovery by an eminent specialist, which acts directly and correctly on the nervous system to cure any nerve disorder. Is backed with an offer of $50 for an incurable case. $1.00 bottles or trial samples free at F. E. Davenport's 2

Marshal Joe Pfefferl has been giving the boys of Auburn a number of free sleigh rides, a thing he always does, when there is sleighing. The lads enjoy hugely a race about town behind the big fire department team going at a full gallop. And Joe enjoys it with them.

Some old settlers are claiming we have not had such a winter in 50 years, because that was the date of the "hard winter of 42-3." A mistake, gentlemen, we have had several winters since then, as cold, and even colder than this, and as much snow with it. The "cold New Years," was worse, for one.

Miss Mary Kelley is home again after several weeks' stay at Ann Arbor, where she has been for medical treatment. Her brother, Douglas Kelley, went up to see her last week, and she returned with him. She seems to have received benefit from the treatment, and we hope her improvement may prove permanent.

"In buying a cough medicine for children," says H. A. Walker, a prominent druggist of Ogden, Utah, "never be afraid to buy Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. There is no danger from it and relief is always sure to follow. I particularly recommend Chamberlain's because I have found it to be safe and reliable. It is intended especially for colds, croup and whooping cough." 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord.

Forty hours devotion will be held in St. Mary's Catholic church, this city, beginning at 9:30 a. m., Friday, Jan. 20, and ending the following Sunday evening. The Rev. Father Wilkins, of Decatur, Ind., will conduct the services and preach the sermons. A high mass will be celebrated on Friday and Saturday at 9:30 a. m., and on Sunday at 10 o'clock. Services will also be held on Friday, Saturday and Sunday at 7:45 p. m. Sunday evening will be the close of the forty hours.

Many do know and all should know the merits of Brant's Balsam for coughs, colds, asthma, all throat and lung troubles, which may be forerunners of consumption. The cost of knowing its value is so slight, (large 25 and 50 cent bottles), you will be wise to test it for its prompt use may save a life. Mothers should know its value for spasmodic or membraneous croup, which need quick attention or the child may die. It relaxes the contracted muscles or loosens the false membrane, causing the child to throw it off, giving quick relief. Sold by F. E. Davenport. 2

Mme. Annie Louise Tanner Musin the Prima Donna of the Musin concert company is an artist of rare ability. The New York world says: Her wonderful execution, her clear beautiful runs, her delicate staccato, brought the house to her feet." While the Chicago Daily News says of her, "Indeed, the great Peschka Leutner herself hardly sang these roulades with more exquisite grace, while in purity of tone she is far behind Mme Tanner-Musin."

We are in receipt of the Columbian Edition of Landreths, seed catalogue for 1893—the 109th year of this well-known firm. The catalogue is a model of neatness and convenience of arrangement, and is free from the sensational and exaggerated features so common to seed catalogues. It is full of useful information, and deals in facts. It is fully illustrated, and the cover giving an accurate illustration of the sailing and landing of Columbus; a bird's eye view of the Columbian Exhibition at Chicago is unique.

The catalogue will be mailed to any address on application to D. Landreth & Sons, Seedsmen, Philadelphia, Pa.

Teachers' Examination.

The schools are all in session in the county, and no need of the usual teachers' examination this month. Hence there will be none and the day usually devoted to the examination will be given to arranging the work for the educational exhibit. C. M. MERICA.

The Cold Weather.

Everybody knows we are having a cold winter, but no one seems to know the exact degree. L. Bowers has a correct thermometer, one he got direct from the signal service of the government, and he gives the following report:

JANUARY 15, 1893.

" 8 " 17 "
" 10 " 10 "
" 12 noon 5 "
Monday 16th 7 a. m. 5 below zero.
Tuesday 17th 7 a. m. 15 below zero.
Wednesday 18th 7 a. m. 19 above zero.
Snow about 15 inches deep.

The First National Bank.

We announced last week the retirement of W. H. McIntyre from his position in the First National Bank. At the meeting of the directors that followed, D. A. Garwood, was chosen cashier, and Charles McClellan, assistant cashier. Both have accepted and are now in active discharge of their duties. Wm. McIntyre, who has been in the bank more or less, since its organization, will thus be given a much needed rest from its confining duties, which no doubt he will greatly appreciate. Henry McIntyre, as we remarked last week, has outside business interests that demand his full attention, and which with his usual energy and ability he is making a success. The new officers are young men of ability and considerable experience, and we do not hesitate to say, will continue the First National at the front in its business prosperity and in public esteem.

The Keeley Institute.

This establishment is now fully located in Auburn, occupying the Askew residence, on West Seventh street. The able and experienced physician, Dr. W. P. McGlenn, in charge, fully understands all the details of this great discovery of Dr. Keeley's, and is fully prepared to treat all cases presented. The other gentlemen who are in charge of the management of the Institute, are Mr. S. S. Patt and Mr. Geo. J. Beerider, both competent business men, and who understand the details of the Keeley treatment under all conditions. Capt. Mattox, who has general oversight of all the Keeley Institutes in this part of the country, will be here every few days, spending part of the time with us. They receive their patients, subject to most rigid rules, which they insist must be followed, and which they see are carefully and fully followed. Patients are, however, treated with the utmost consideration, but as the Institute is organized to effect a cure, the cure is the first object sought, and the strict construction of the rules, and exact following of the regulations is therefore insisted on. They are advertising the Institute far and wide and in the most effective way. We feel sure they will make it a success. If so, it will prove a blessing to many unfortunates, be a valuable addition to the business interests of Auburn, and we hope also, a good business investment for the proprietors. Let us give the Keeley Institute our best wishes, our sympathy and our moral and social support.

Richland Township S. S. Institute.

Richland township people hold their 5th township Sunday school institute, at Corunna, on Saturday, Jan. 28, beginning at 9:30 a. m. with devotional exercises led by H. M. Fretz. The welcome address will be by Rev. F. G. Freid and response by Mrs. Ella Grate. Rev. Mr. Graham will discuss "Week day work of the S. S. teacher;" and Rev. A. B. Lilly will talk on "Results from good home training." Rev. Mr. Chloe will talk on "Best methods to promote Sunday School work." Rev. F. G. Fried will give "Why shoud we take our bibles to Sunday School." Rev. G. V. Walker will discuss, "The importance of punctuality." On Saturday evening there will be children's meeting. The evening before, however, Friday evening, there will be a lecture by Rev J. J. Fred, of Spencerville, and Mrs. C. B. Jones, of Garrett, on the subject, "The Sunday School as an Educational Institution." The enterprising and earnest people of Richland township have kept up these S. S. meetings for many years, as may be seen by the number of this one. And each one seems to be better than the one before it. We look to see this one of the best, as well as the best attended.

To The Public.

To the people of Auburn and the surrounding towns and country. In coming before you in the annual entertainment of the successive Junior classes of our High School, it was our aim from the first to secure the very best talent possible, never dreaming, however, that we should be able to secure such a superior combination of artists as the Musin Grand Concert Company. No one who ever heard "Ole Bull," the great violinist of his day, would have the memory of that event blotted out for many times the cost; for not only was he amply compensated by the bewitching music of his wonderful instrument, but he ever has the satisfaction of having heard the great Master of his day. Musin is a master, and in point of brilliancy and execution, he stands to-day without a rival.

Remember we are giving you the extremely rare opportunity of hearing a master, and a combination of artists of the highest order, and that your patronage is in the interest of the High School library and laboratory. In coming before you with such a company we shall surely feel deeply disappointed with anything but a full house.

Obituary.

Wright Elwood Aamstrong was born in Franklin county, Ohio, July 25, 1868. At the age of four years, he came with his parents to Auburn, where he resided until Nov 4, 1892, when he moved to Bowling Green, Ohio, where he died of congestion of the lungs, Jan. 14, 1893; aged 24 years, 5 months and 19 days. December 24th, 1890, he was united in marriage to Nellie Crew, who with his mother, a sister and two brothers, survive to mourn his departure. He was a dutiful son, a loving brother and husband, and a true friend. He was a member of Company K, Third Indiana Infantry, and had won the respect and esteem of both officers and men, by his devotion to duty. Funeral services conducted by Dev. J. D. Brosy.

Gould remembered only himself and his family while living, and only his family when dying. He was not a philanthropist, and never pretended to be.

Mme. de Lesseps, who ought to know, claims that her husband, the great canal man, is 87 years of age. If so he has little to fear from prosecution.

Crinoline is again coming into fashion, and man, vain man, the lord of creation, is preparing to slide off the sidewalk and dispute the right of way with the street cars.

Whether or not the Chinese are civilized enough to poke holes in the statutes of their adopted country may be a question. But they can easily hire the necessary grade of civilization to do it for them.

Modesty is one of the characteristics of Kansas. J. B. Watson is honored as the richest man in her boundaries, and yet he has only a trifle of three millions to his name—hardly enough to win him recognition in New York.

The Los Angeles School Board consists of four Democrats, four Republicans and a woman allied as much to one party as the other. Or, to be deferential to truth and candid as to the fair sex, the Los Angeles School Board consists, to all intents and purposes, of one woman.

Corbett has been saying that he was trying to be both a pugilist and a gentleman. Had he he refrained from that fatal error to which the great are prone, the error of writing letters, perhaps somebody knowing little either of pugilists or gentlemen would have believed him.

A Chicago man wants to exhibit 18,000 pairs of jack rabbits at the World's Fair for the purpose of building up an export business with Europe. The jack rabbit is an animal that looks like the mule on a small scale, destroys property like the locust, breeds like the fly and tastes like the hawk.

London went daft over Paderewski, and one woman in the abounding exuberance of her idiocy threw herself at his feet at the close of his farewell show. But the musician did not forget that he was a gentleman. With self-sacrifice little short of heroic he refrained from stepping on the creature.

Some of the Atlantic steamer lines have abolished the steerage department. This means, rather than the suppression of the steerage passenger, that hereafter himself, his poverty, and his microbes will travel right in company with other passengers. The occasion does not seem conducive to expressions of gratitude.

When the bewildering news comes from Calcutta that the Nizam-Ul-Mulk, brother of Afzul-Ul-Mulk, reigning sovereign of Chitral, has defeated the forces of Sher Afzul Khan, the usurper, who murdered Afzul-Ul-Mulk last November and took possession of the throne of Chitral, we get some idea of the exceeding toughness of the Atlantic cable.

The eye of prophecy can easily look into the future and see the actresses of the land clustered about the metal toes of Ada Rehan at the World's Fair. The ear of prophecy can hear the remarks, tinged with sisterly acrimony, setting forth that the honor of being immortalized in silver had been offered to each of them before, with evident chagrin, it struck the Rehan bargain.

The reason assigned by the coal barons for putting up the price of coal was that the miners were to receive increased pay, but word comes from Wilkesbarre that the miners there are idle, are without food, and that the demands made upon the charitable are greater than they have been for many years. Therefore, only the barons and not the workmen are being benefited by the advance. This being the case, let the authorities begin work without further delay.

Mrs. Caroline McC. Everhard, President of the Ohio Woman Suffrage Association, believes that, in order to maintain always the identity of man and wife, instead of saying "Mr. and Mrs. John Jones" one should always say "Mr. John and Mrs. Jane Jones." With the Jones family that idea might answer very well, but when it came to saying "Mr. Alexander Obenhauser and Mrs. Caroline McClosky Everhard," for instance, a patient and long-suffering public would be very apt to kick.

Mr. Talmage, of Brooklyn, apparently cannot stop praising the Czar. He has acquired the habit hopelessly. And yet all the Czar did for him was to tender him a square meal, his call having coincided with his royal dinner hour. Mr. Gerber, of Omaha, visited Russia and received much more marked attention. He was furnished an escort all the way to Siberia and given employment in the mines for a stated tenure of fifteen years. But Mr. Gerber came back, and the most intent listener has not heard him say a word akin to extolling the Czar.

The Philadelphia City Hall before it reaches completion will have absorbed some $10,000,000 more than the original estimate of its cost. And only a couple of centuries ago the site of the whole blessed town was secured by William Penn for a blanket or two. There is quite a discrepancy here in point of frugality, but in another respect there is remarkable similarity. Penn skinned the original landholders as thoroughly as he could, and many of his descendants are applying equally drastic treatment to the landholders of today. Brotherly love is a big thing in Philadelphia. Yea, verily!

Like John Brown's soul, woman goes marching on. In Pittsburg Mrs. Henderson smashes her son-in-law's nose with a heavy ruler and knocks his brother down with her fist. At Martin's Ferry, O., Mrs. Motz, having been legally punished for writing a malicious book, starts to get even with one of her prosecutors, is arrested en route, and several pounds of dynamite, caps, and fuses are found concealed on her person. The irrepressible female is surging to the front, and you can't stop her. Men must get out of her way or they will be swept violently aside or crushed to flatness. There are no flies on the coming woman, and the passing man should lose no time in yielding full appreciation to this interesting fact in natural history.

Gen. Miles' talk about 'British war vessels on the lakes has naturally filled responsible officials at Washington with astonishment at his recklessness. If the government of Great Britain should choose to take official notice of a hostile declaration by a high officer of the army of the United States, it is difficult to see how Gen. Miles can escape the discipline necessary to maintain the subservience of the military to the civil department of the Republic. It is no part of the duty of army officers to deliver sensational opinions about matters appertaining to the relations of this country with other countries. If Great Britain or Canada should attempt to violate treaty stipulations with the United States no individual officer of the American army need be unduly troubled with sense of personal responsibility concerning it.

Granville S. Ingraham's bequest for a hospital for the sick poor of Chicago is a provision which even the socialists cannot quarrel with. Such an institution is needed now, and Mrs. Ingraham should lose no time in settling upon a convenient location and getting the hospital ready for the reception of patients. It is to be hoped, when it is finally established, that its management will always be in harmony with the Christlike impulse that inspired its foundation. It should be a place where no long consultations are held while an unfortunate is dying for want of care. No man afflicted with epilepsy should ever be turned from its doors to be jolted and frozen to death in the patrol wagon. No thinly clad mother should be sent out from its warmth to walk through the bitter cold till her babe freezes stiff in her arms. Like the street car, it should always have room for one more, and be run not by political machinery but by humanity.

The railroad construction of the year just passed in the United States is footed up as 4,062 miles, which is about 10 per cent. less than the total for 1891, and less than a quarter of the 12,983 miles of track credited to 1887. But it slightly exceeds the total for 1884, and is one-third larger than that of 1885, and as much work was done in this direction as needed for the legitimate extension of traffic. The course of railroad building shows that at any time within the last quarter of a century the work has proceeded fully as fast as wanted by the people, and in many cases has gone ahead of the demand. As there is more capital available now than a few years ago, it is safe to conclude that new track has been laid down this year wherever it was really needed. Vermont, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Delaware, and Nevada laid none, and Kansas and Mississippi narrowly escaped being placed in the same category of inactivity. The work was well distributed among the other States, and it is worthy of remark that in all cases the length of the new track was short. A total of 289 lines were built, the average length being but fourteen miles. The railroad mileage of the United States now foots up 174,663 miles, 53,000 miles of which have been added in the last ten years, and 104,000 in the last twenty years.

Two Brothers.

Two small boys signaled a street car, and when it stopped it was noticed that one boy was lame. With much solicitude the other boy helped the cripple aboard the car, and after telling the conductor to go ahead returned to the sidewalk. The lame boy braced himself up in his seat so that he could look out of the car window, and the other passengers observed that at intervals the little fellow would wave his hand and smile. Following the direction of his glances the passengers saw the other boy running along the sidewalk, straining every muscle to keep up with the car. The passengers watched his pantomime in silence for a few blocks, and then a gentleman asked the lame boy who the other boy was.

"My brother," was the prompt reply.

"Why does he not ride with you in the car?" was the next question.

"'Cause he hasn't any money," answered the lame boy, sorrowfully.

It is needless to say the little runner was speedily invited into the car, and the sympathetic questioner not only paid his fare but gave each boy a quarter besides.

THE WAY THINGS RUN

IN THE GREATEST OF GREAT STATES, INDIANA.

Things Which Have Lately Happened Within Its Borders—Some Pleasant and Some Sad Reading.

Minor State Items.

A 500-barrel oil-well was struck on the Coggshell farm in the Camden field, Jay County.

Diphtheria is raging at Grandview, a small town on the Ohio River, six miles from Rockport.

Sneak thieves are working extensively in Terre Haute, many robberies being daily reported.

Sherman Lancaster's house, near Windfall, was destroyed by fire. Loss, $1,000; no insurance.

The citizens of Sleigh, Carroll County, think there is natural gas in the vicinity, and will drill for it as soon as the weather permits.

The Diamond Window Glass Company of Findlay, Ohio, located at Farmland, will employ 135 men, the factory being a twenty-pot plant.

The Young People's Christian Endeavor Societies of Hamilton County have just closed a highly successful convention in Noblesville.

Albert A. Featherling, a hay-dealer at Kouts, Porter County, was kicked over the heart by a horse, and fell dead before assistance could be summoned.

Jeremiah Harris, oldest Odd Fellow in Indiana, aged 88, died at Marion. In 1842 he established the first paper in Grant County, the Democratic Herald.

A tramp printer, who tried to clean out the office of the Brazil Times the other day, said, when placed in jail, that he had been mesmerized a year or two ago and never got over it.

John Fleming at Caseyville, Clay County, was paralyzed by falling slate in in the Brazil Block-coal Company's mine No. 8. When found he was pinioned to the side of his room wholly helpless. He will die.

The First National Bank of Elwood will increase its capital stock to $100,000, and then consolidate with the Elwood National Bank, recently organized by Colonel Conger. The combination will have a capital stock of $200,000.

A 9-year-old boy named William Cunningham, and the support of a widowed mother, lost both eyes at the rolling-mill in Brazil. He was looking into one of the large puddling furnaces when one of the employes threw water on the fire. The hot ore flashed into his eyes, leaving him totally blind. He was otherwise badly injured about the head and face.

The strange animal that has made its unwelcome appearance in the vicinity of Brownsburg was again seen the other evening, and it came very near capturing one of Brownsburg's citizens. James Adams was milking his cows when the animal suddenly slipped up from the other side of the cow and struck a powerful blow at Mr. Adams with its paw. Mr. Adams started for the house, with the animal close at his heels, and luckily he reached the door ahead of the beast. He then "sicked" his two large bull-dogs on the varmint and slipped out to a neighbor's house for a gun. When he returned the animal was gone and his blooded dogs had been whipped and torn so badly that one of them had to be killed. Citizens will import blood-hounds to capture or chase the animal to its den.

A band of about forty foreigners, said to be from the island of Sicily, are camping in Clinton County, about five miles southwest of Russiaville. They have with them, besides their horses, five cinnamon bears, and a few monkeys. They are furnishing some amusement and a considerable amount of uneasiness to the farmers in the neighborhood. A great many wild stories are being told about their manner of living. A horrible story, which seems to be well authenticated, is told of the disposition of the body of a baby that died in their camp on New Year's Day. It is said that the big chief of the company took a huge knife and cut the child's body in pieces and fed it to the bears. They were camped in a dense woods near "St. Paul," a country church, until recently, when they pulled stakes and departed at the instigation of an enraged community.

Many citizens of Brazil are talking loudly about the pardon of Isaac W. Sanders, who was sent from that city, about fifteen years ago, for wife murder. The crime was most atrocious, and the prisoner had to be guarded from violence at the hands of a mob. On the 11th of April, 1878, Sanders, while intoxicated, shot his wife through the heart, virtually killing her. She was the daughter of Jonathan Crousdale, one of the wealthiest citizens of the town. Sanders pleaded guilty to the charge of murder in the first degree, and would have been condemned to death had not Mr. Crousdale arose in court and asked that he should not be hanged, as he wanted "no man's blood on his hands." The prisoner was immediately taken to Jeffersonville, to avoid mob violence, which the officers had reasons to believe would follow if the prisoner remained in the County Jail over night. He was granted a new trial two years after his sentence, but was again convicted and sentenced for life.

A farmer named William Templeton, aged 45, and residing six miles southwest of Elwood, met death recently in the woods. He was cutting down a a large tree and was unable to escape from under it when it fell. He was pinioned to the ground and his head crushed. He leaves a wife and two children.

Miss Ida S. Durham of Darlington, has entered suit for $5,000 against S. G. Kersey for breach of promise.

A misplaced switch on the Wabash railroad caused a freight wreck at Roan. W. B. Loughran of Peru, was the only person injured.

George Gougler, in an intoxicated condition, applied at the home of George N. Hicks near Elkhart, stating that himself, together with a companion, had been assaulted by thieves. He besought Hicks, who was an aged and feeble man of 70 years, to go with him to his partner in need of help. The story so excited Hicks with fear and dread of being the victim of a plot that he was immediately taken sick and died before he could be put to bed.

William Porterfield, while at work at the Shelbyville ice-houses, became entangled in the hoist, which broke and carried him about twenty-five feet into the river. It was only after hard work that he was rescued, badly bruised.

INDIANA LEGISLATURE.

January 10.—The speaker announced the standing committees. There were no special surprises in the award of Chairmanships. Cullop was sent to the Ways and Means, as was anticipated, and McMullen to the Judiciary, while Ader, of Putnam, who was also a candidate for speaker, was given the Organization of Courts. Hench secured the Benevolent Institutions, Redmon the Prison South, Harkness State Prison North, Fippen Fees and Salaries, Farlowe the Corporations and Heagy the Roads. A great number of bills were thrown into the House. The Speaker anticipated a crash, and he adopted a rule limiting each member to two when his name was called. Then the flood began. Quite a number of Representatives were loaded with road bills, the annimus resting with the good roads agitation in which the State is interested. Other measures were in the line of so-called labor bills. Among them is the one aimed at the insurance system in vogue on the Pennsylvania Central, which the labor leaders clam militates against the beneficial features of their own organizations. All of these bills were in duplicate, the filing being simultaneously in both houses. A bill of considerable moment was presented by Darby of Clark, providing for a sinking fund of 5 per cent., and calling for a marked change in the manner of applying appropriations.

Senate—The Lieutenant-Governor appointed Magee Chairman of the Finance Committee and sent Griffith to the Judiciary Committee. The other principal assignments included: Leyden, Benevolent Institutions. Sellers, Fees and Salaries; Kern, Insurance; McHugh, Educational Institutions, and Moore, the Roads. The Judiciary Committee in both Houses, judging from the personnel of the membership, is made up of conservative men, and this will be important in considering the special legislation demanded by the labor leaders. No radical legislation is looked for from either committee.

A bill was sprung in the Senate to-day by Kopelke of Lake, which contemplate a revolution in the management of penal and benevolent institutions. All of these institutions, with the exception of the Female Reformatory, are to be placed under the management of four people, to be known as the Board of Regents; the first Board to be appointed by the Governor, and its members to be thereafter elected by the people, the same as other State officers are elected.

January 11.—The Legislature dived into law-making with a vengeance today, the House alone listening to the introduction of nearly a hundred bills. Among the most important were co-employes' liability bill, one extending the jurisdiction of the Appellate Court, one against child labor, one raising the age of consent to fifteen years, one providing for the discharge of harmless insane, one making Labor and Memorial day legal holidays, two reducing the school tax from 16 cents to 10 cents on the $100, one providing free text-books for indigent children, one curbing Township Trustees in their purchases of school supplies and one providing the same system for school supplies now in use for school-books. Mr. Fippen introduced a scheme for a joint law by half a dozen States taxing foreign mortgages, and resolutions were adopted for special committees on the soldiers' monument and World's Fair, while the G. A. A. encampment was given some attention.

To-day was an uneventful if not a drowsy day in the Senate. A number of Senators were absent and the rest a trifle sleepy. The bills were nearly all of minor importance and of local effect. The bill asking that $50,000 be appropriated to defray the expenses of entertaining the G. A. R. reunion was about the most important. The bill relating to the erection of memorial tablets in the Government Park of Chickamauga on behalf of Indiana soldiers was of some interest. Senator Magee's bill asking for the separation of the State revenue funds and legislative action regarding the spending of the same and the creation of a sinking fund was of perhaps the most general importance.

January 12.—Both the Senate and House this morning adopted the joint and separate rules which governed the fifty-seventh General Assembly without practical change. Senator Boyd introduced a resolution looking to the investigation of the accounts in the office of Attorney General Smith. The resolution, was made the special order of next Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

An important resolution introduced by Senator Stuart, has for its purpose the redistricting of the State for Circuit Court purposes.

The following bills were introduced in the Senate: Providing for the erection of bridges over streams dividing counties; protecting dairy products; appropriating 60,500 to the State Normal.

The House passed and ordered sent to the Senate a joint resolution, asking the Indiana Senators and Representatives in Congress to use their influence and cast their votes to secure the establishment of the office of Secretary of Labor as a regular cabinet position.

The Conference Committee appointed on the bill appropriating $105,000 to defray the expenses of the session, made its report, which was accepted, and employes may now get their pay.

January 13.—In the call of committees a few unimportant bills were recommended for passage, among them being Senator Filman's bill exempting all church parsonages from taxation; Senator McCutcheon's bill fixing a penalty of from ten days to six months in jail, and a fine of from $50 to $500 for carrying concealed weapons; a House bill providing for a continuance in cases where an attorney is a member of the Legislature.

The proceedings in the House was dull and unimportant. The Conference Committee's report on the Appropriation Bill to pay the expenses of the session, was adopted. The Labor Committee reported favorably on Mr. Deery's bill, making it a misdemeanor to discharge employes for membership in labor organizations; also favoring the passage of Suchanech's bill, making it unlawful to employ children under 14 years of age in factories over eight hours a day.

A few other minor bills were recommended for passage, a few unimportant bills were introduced, and the House adjourned at noon until 11 o'clock Monday.

A polite Texas journal compliments its new rival on "leaving so much room for improvement."

The business losses of Hamburg, on account of the cholera last summer, foot up about $35,000,000. Business men of this country should understand that a visitation from this dread disease means a heavy loss to them, even if it does not touch their homes to take away their loved ones. Money spent to clean up means money saved in business by barring out the pest.

There are too many people who seem to think that the best thing they can do for the Lord is to try to run their preacher

THE COLDEST IN YEARS.

THIS WINTER A SURE RECORD-BREAKER.

Spell of Weather Throughout the Northwest that Stumps the Oldest Inhabitant—Mercury Freezes Solid in Wisconsin—Ice Six Feet Thick at St. Paul.

Great Suffering Reported.

It "beats all," according to the government weather man at Chicago, how the cold spell hangs on. He says he never saw such conditions.

The coldest day Chicago has experienced in twenty years was in December, 1872, when it registered a minus 25 for only a short time. Three winters later, in January, there was a day 20 below; one in January, 1879, when it got as low as 18, and January 1884 and 1888, had one each equally as chilling. Sunday was the next epoch-maker and the mercury at 7 o'clock a. m. showed 16 below. Necessarily, the cold caused untold suffering. It was a bitter Sunday for the coalless poor, and they are legion in Chicago. Church-goers were comfortable in heated sanctuaries, but the unfortunate in the thousands of fireless attics got another swish from the flood of misfortune. Many a grave will get its fill from the blast. The station houses were filled with men who begged for places to sleep. They could have been filled twice over had it been possible to receive all the applicants. Hundreds came in with frozen ears and faces, piteously asking for a chance to get warm.

Ice Six Feet Thick.

After three winters that scarcely deserved the name the Northwest is now experiencing one of the old-fashioned kind. The present January has beaten the record for intense and sustained cold weather and there is no prospect of a change. For four years the new year has found the ground clear of snow at St. Paul, and every lake and stream open. That city has been proudly claiming location in the center of the "banana belt." This winter got its work in early, coming in November with steady snow falls that will lie till spring. The mercury went below zero in the same month and has been above that mark only at rare intervals since. On Christmas Day it was 25 below, about the same on New Year's, and has maintained a steady gait ever since. At St. Vincent and Minnedosa 40 below has been reached and the cold has been nearly as severe all over the western and northwestern part of the State. A cube of ice six feet thick was cut from Vadnais Lake. It is the heaviest ice seen since the famous block which formed the corner stone of the Ice Palace in 1886.

In Omaha the thermometer registered 8 below and in the northwestern part of the State 22 below. The snow in the eastern part of the State has been there since Nov. 26. Kansas is also suffering extremely from the cold but in the western part snow covers the ground and wheat is well protected.

In Des Moines, at 4 o'clock in the morning the thermometer registered 18 degrees below, and at Sioux City the weather has been intensely cold for a week. The mercury has ranged from 4 to 18 degrees below zero. The Missouri, Big Sioux and Floyd Rivers are frozen to a greater depth than for many years.

At Cincinnati everything is tied up by the cold weather. The thermometer was 14 degrees below zero, and in some places on the hill-tops it was 18 below. The Ohio River is frozen tight from bank to bank, postponing any threatened devastation by the ice gorge. For the first time since 1877, pedestrians are walking across the river on the ice, the five bridges being deserted except by vehicles and cars. Many motormen and cable gripmen were compelled to desert their posts. More relief is promised the poorer classes. Eighteen car loads of coal, 180 tons, arrived for distribution at cost price.

Froze the Mercury Solid.

Wisconsin is also fast in the grasp of the ice king. Dispatches from all parts of the State report the coldest weather for years. In Milwaukee it was 14 degrees below, but that wasn't a marker to the weather up north. At Sparta the mercury froze solid at 40 below; at Whitehall it was 45 below; Lacrosse, 36; Medford, 42; Neenah, 28; Watertown, 30; Kaukauna, 35. The Winnebago Indians on the reservation near Black River Falls are suffering terribly. Marine men say the lake will be frozen solid from Grand Haven to Milwaukee if this weather continues.

The thermometer at Detroit reached 10 degrees below. Few advices from out in the State have been received as yet, everything seeming to be literally paralyzed by the cold.

SATOLLI IS SUSTAINED.

Placed at the Head of the American Apostolic Delegation.

The Pope has decided to establish a permanent apostolic delegation in the United States, and has nominated Mgr. Satolli to be the first delegate. This decision the Vatican considers to be a sufficient reply to the opposition to Mgr. Satolli and his mission. The Propaganda will send from Rome by the Rev. F. Z. Rooker the documents authenticating the new powers conferred upon Mgr. Satolli as permanent delegate.

Archbishop Ireland said: "I am heartily glad that this action has been taken The establishment of a delegation here will have a most beneficent result on the church in America. It will maintain peace and harmony and facilitate the settlement of the controversies among Catholics which heretofore had to be referred to Rome. It practically organizes in perfect form the Catholic Church in America, instituting, as it were, for more important church affairs, home rule. We will have at home a branch of the Supreme Ecclesiastical Court. A further result will be that the immediate working and thoughts of the Holy See will be brought more prominently before the American people."

KANSAS HOUSE AFRAID TO ADJOURN.

Rival Factions of the Kansas Legislature Hold the Fort for Twenty-four Hours—Neither Side Will Surrender—A Compromise Proposed.

Night Spent in the Capitol.

Two bodies of law-makers, in the same hall, each with a speaker of its own, and claiming to be the lawful Assembly of the State, is the situation here, says a Topeka, Kan., dispatch. At 1 o'clock in the morning, when it became apparent that no move could be made by the Populists until the Senate should meet, an armed truce was declared, and each side relaxed somewhat its vigilance. Speakers Douglass and Dunsmore agreed that neither side should attempt to transact business during the night, and they retired. Blankets were brought and a joint bed was made up for them behind the Speaker's desk, where they enjoyed more or less undisturbed repose. The other members of the two houses were less fortunate, being obliged to sleep in chairs, on the floor, or in any nook or corner not otherwise occupied. During the night the Republicans prepared a memorial to the Governor, signed by sixty-four members who had certificates of election from the State Canvasing Board, certified to by the Secretary of State, setting forth that they, a majority of two of the whole number of members, had participated in the Republican organization and petitioning him to recognize that body as the legally constituted House of Representatives. This communication was taken to the Governor at midnight. He was aroused and accepted the document, but told the committee presenting it that he had no statement to make. At 7 o'clock in the morning the members began to arouse themselves and to cast about for breakfast. Sandwiches and coffee were served in the cloak-rooms and then began a three hours' wait for the assembling of the Senate.

The Populists' plan for bringing things to an issue contemplated an important move at 10 o'clock, to which hour the Senate adjourned the previous day. The plan involved the recognition of the Populist House by the Governor and Senate, which is ruled by a Populist majority. This being done the Populist Speaker was to request the retirement of all persons not members of the House, including the members of the Republican House. If the latter declined to withdraw voluntarily then the Governor was to order the Adjutant General to lend his assistance in forcing them out, the latter being authorized to order out the militia to enforce his orders.

FAVOR CLOSED GATES.

World's Fair Committee Hear Arguments of Sabbatarians at Washington.

Fourteen men and one woman addressed the House World's Fair Committee in opposition to the pending joint resolution authorizing Sunday opening of the Exposition. About fifty spectators and three members of the Durborow committee were present at the opening, but before the close three more committeemen dropped in and got the benefit of a few speeches. Col. Shepard led off in a ten minutes' address, in which he claimed that the opponents of Sunday closing represent the Christian sentiment of the whole United States; that the Secretary of the World's Fair Commission has certified that there are on file petitions signed by more than 25,000,000 citizens asking for the preservation of the Sabbath by Sunday closing.

The Rev. Dr. Ramsdell said he wanted the Exposition to be a grand success and every dollar paid back to those who have advanced it. The managers should respect the prejudices of religious people, else they would be in conscience bound to refrain from giving their patronage to the Exposition. He made a calculation of the number of preachers in the United States, the officers of the churches, and the members of their families who would not go to Chicago if the Fair is kept open Sundays, and comparing this aggregate loss with the estimated revenue of twenty-six Sundays figured out a very large net loss. Besides, he predicted that the $900,000 asked for medals will not be appropriated.

Joseph Cook, of Boston, considered it dishonorable to ask for Sunday opening after having accepted the $2,500,000 on condition of closing the Fair. He thought thieves, thugs, gamblers, and all kinds of undesirable people would flock to Chicago, and certain parts of the city would be overrun by them. He also gave the World's Fair managers a sharp rap for violating the trust reposed in them in respect to the sale of liquors. The Rev. Dr. Mott, of New Jersey, pleaded for preservation of the good name of this Christian nation by observance of the Sabbath, and incidentally criticised the directory for granting catchpenny concessions. Dr. Coffin, of Iowa, ex-Railroad Commissioner, spoke as the representative of the farmers of that State and the railroad trainmen of the whole country. Dr. Crafts, of Pittsburg, Pa., said there were no petitions from liquor dealers except one favoring Sunday opening. He expressed surprise that the Mayor and Council of Chicago should ask Congress to help them violate the State laws against amusements on Sunday. He read to the committee letters from Bishop Potter, of New York, and Cardinal Gibbons, of Baltimore.

BELIEVE IN SHORT SKIRTS.

Woman Suffrage Agitators Discuss the Proposed Reform.

Missouri and Kansas woman suffrage agitators came together at Kansas City, Mo., to advocate the short-skirt reform. Many of the members came with dresses three or four inches above the ground, to see how the thing really looked, and those who had objected to the reform came into line when they saw that every inch taken from the bottom of a skirt took ten years from the woman's age. Mrs. J. C. Merine, author of the short-skirt idea and wife of the well-known portrait painter, made a little speech in which she deplored the fact that her shorter dresses were not completed in time for the meeting. Another woman stepped to the front and showed how nicely her dress hung when shortened and how only a few additional inches of feet were exhibited to the public. One exhibitor of the mode was accused of being a traitor because the back of her dress hung too low, but on discovering the fact she naively remarked that a hook was out of place and calmly proceeded to adjust it. No one seemed to want the resolution amended to permit of lower or higher dresses.

CINCINNATI POOR STAY ABED.

Coal Becoming Scarcer and Higher and the River Is Rising.

The situation in regard to the coal famine in Cincinnati is more serious than ever. There is now on hand in the various yards and elevators about three weeks' supply. The amount now on the road to Cincinnati is estimated at 100,000 bushels. The residents in the suburbs are having the hardest time. The supply is the shortest that the city has known for twenty years. Coal dealers in Cincinnati are selling at $6 and $6.50 per ton, while directly across the river in Covington and Newport the price is $4. The abnormal condition of things just now—the river gorged with ice, navigation absolutely closed and the thermometer five degrees below zero—is causing intense suffering among the poor, many of whom are compelled to remain in bed to keep warm. The river is rising and filled with floating ice. A further rise of two feet, which is threatened, will cause another break in the ice.

BIG COAL FIELDS BOUGHT.

The Reading in a Deal for the Control of Nova Scotia Mines.

It is stated on good authority that the coal magnates of Pennsylvania, acting with the Canadian Pacific Railway, have about concluded a deal by which almost the entire coal-fields of Nova Scotia are to pass under their control. The combine, it is said, has over $17,000,000 to invest in the project. The Nova Scotia Legislature has been called to meet to ratify the bargain. A well-known financier says of the scheme: "This consolidation of Nova Scotia mining companies is the outcome of the combination of the anthracite coal carriers in February, 1892, and the anthracite men are believed to be backing this deal to protect themselves against the competition of Nova Scotia coal in the event of the abolition of coal duties.

CALL FOR MORE CASH.

World's Fair Budget Increased—Financiers Are Perturbed.

Mr. Burnham has made another estimate of the amount of money necessary to finish the World's Fair buildings and put Jackson Park in proper shape for opening the gates of the exposition on May 1. Much to the surprise of the Board of Directors this estimate calls for between $400,000 and $500,000 more than any previous budget prepared by the director of works. Naturally the directors who have heard of this estimate are very uneasy. The large increase over all previous guesses at the cost of building the Fair was a complete surprise, for the director of works has been very liberal in his estimates, and it was generally supposed that the top notch of possible expenditures had been reached in a previous calculation. A member of the Finance Committee expressed the sentiment of the board when he said "expenses are running away with us."

NO ELECTION IN MONTANA.

Democrats Have Not Yet Nominated a Candidate for Senator.

The Montana Legislature met in joint session to take the first ballot for United States Senator. There were present thirty-three Republicans, thirty-four Democrats and three Populists, a total of seventy. The sick Democratic member, Davidson, was not present. The Republicans all voted for W. F. Sanders, the caucus nominee, and, while to a certain extent the vote was scattered, it gave a very good idea of the strength of the leading candidates. Two of the Populists voted for Mulville, Populist, and the third voted for Hauser, Democrat. This latter was Beecher, who agreed at the beginning of the session to stand by the Democrats on all political questions. He has announced that he will stand by the Democrats in the fight until it is over.

Mr. Cleveland Must Pay Duty.

Somebody abroad has sent President-elect Cleveland a package of woolen gloves. Mr. Arthur W. Robeson, custom-house broker and forwarding agent of Baltimore, received from England consignment papers for the parcel to arrive on the steamship Rosemore and to be handed to Mr. Cleveland at Washington. The package is free of freight, but as nothing has been said about the duties Mr. Cleveland will have to pay the duties prescribed in the McKinley tariff before receiving the gloves. The duty will be 49½ cents on each pound of weight and 60 per cent. ad valorem.

They Broke the Deadlock.

The Senate deadlock, which has blocked the business of the Nebraska State Legislature for over a week, was broken by a combination between the Democrats and Independent Senators. The organization of the Senate was completed by the combine. The deadlock has postponed the inauguration of Governor-elect Crounse, Republican, for a week beyond the usual time, and prevented the outgoing officers from giving way to their successors.

A Great Frozen Lake.

On the road from Irkutsh to Kiachta, the frontier town of the Chinese Empire, is Lake Baikal. It is frozen for nine months in the year. Mr. J. M. Price, in "From the Artic Ocean to the Yellow Sea," says that its origin is undoubtedly volcanic. It contains 12,000 square miles, and has an average depth of over 5,000 feet. The cold is so terrible that when a hurricane stirs the waters the waves often freeze as waves, remaining in hummocks above the surface. At the time of the author's crossing however, the cold had caught the earth asleep, and the ice was perfectly smooth. He had thirty miles to drive on the solidified ice.

Owing to the marvellous transparency of the water, the ice presented everywhere the appearance of polished crystal, and although of undoubtedly great thickness, was so colorless that it was like passing over space. It gave me quite an uncanny feeling at first to look over the side of the sledge down into the black abyss beneath. This feeling, however, gradually changed to one of fascination, till at last I found it difficult to withdraw my gaze from the awful depths, with nothing but this sheet of crystal between me and eternity.

About half-way across I stopped to make a sketch and take some photographs. It was no easy matter, for the ice was so slippery that in spite of my felt snow-boots I could hardly stand.

The lake was marvellously still, yet the silence was occasionally broken by curious sounds, as though big guns were being fired at some little distance. They were caused by the cracking of the ice here and there. I was told that in some parts of the lake there were huge fissures through which the water could be seen. For this reason it is always advisable to make the journey by daylight.

We reached Moufshkava, on the opposite shore, in four hours and a half after leaving Liestvenitz, the horses having done the whole distance of over thirty miles with only two stoppages of a few minutes each.

It was evidently an easy bit of work for them, as they seemed as fresh when we drew up in the post-yard as when they started in the morning.

Unbroken Forests.

So far from selling any part of its forests, the Hungarian Government buys more each year. In some parts of the country, as in the eastern region of the Carpathians, woods are found of several thousand acres in extent, consisting for the most part of red beech. This is used for firewood, carriages, staves and agricultural implements, and in the manufacture of bent wood. There are few fires and they seldom permanently damage the woods. There are large resinous forests in Transylvania, but they are not very accessible, and there are also some districts of Marmaros, in the north-east of the country.

Couldn't Lose a Woman.

The poet Whittier had many admirers among women, and this admiration frequently took personal form. One day, the poet's sister, in her slow, quaker fashion, was describing these attentions: "Thee has no idea," she said, "of the time Greenleaf spends in trying to lose these people on the streets. Sometimes he comes home and says, 'Well, sister, I had hard work to lose him, but I have lost him.'" To this Whittier pathetically added: "But I can never lose her."—London Figaro.

Nature's Surest Ally.

If nature did not struggle against disease, even in weakly constitutions, swift indeed would be the course of a malady to its fatal termination. While nature thus struggles let us, lest worse befall us, aid her efforts with judicious medicinal help. Experience must be our guide in battles with disease, and that "lamp to our feet" indicates Hostetter's Stomach Bitters as a safe, tried and thorough ally of nature. If the blood be infected with bile, if the bowels and stomach are inactive, if the kidneys fail to expel impurities of which they are the natural outlet, a course of the Bitters is the surest reliance of the sufferer, one, moreover, that is sanctioned by professional indorsement and use for nearly half a century. No American or foreign remedy has earned greater distinction as a remedy for and preventive of chronic liver complaint, malaria, constipation, kidney and rheumatic trouble and debility.

The Grip

Left me in a terribly weak condition; my health nearly wrecked. My appetite was all gone, I had no strength, felt tired all the time, had disagreeable roaring noises in my head, like a waterfall. I also had severe headaches and severe sinking pains in my stomach. Having heard so much about Hood's Sarsaparilla, I concluded to try it. All the disagreeable effects of the Grip are gone, I am free from pains and aches, and believe Hood's Sarsaparilla

Royal Baking Powder.

THE GOVERNMENT TESTS ESTABLISH ITS ABSOLUTE SUPERIORITY.

(Data from the latest Official U. S. Government Report on Baking Powders, Department of Agriculture, Bulletin 13, page 599.)

Royal is placed first of the cream of tartar powders, actual strength, 160.6 cubic inches of leavening gas per ounce of powder.

Every other powder tested exhibited a much lower strength than the Royal, the average being 33 per cent. less.

Every other powder likewise showed the presence of alum or sulphuric acid.

The claim that this report shows any other powder of superior strength or purity has been denounced as a falsehood by the Government officers who made the tests.

Avoid all baking powders sold with a gift or prize, or at a lower price than the Royal, as they invariably contain alum, lime or sulphuric acid, and render the food unwholesome.

Papa's Forcible Remark.

"Mamma, does the dictionary have all the words in it?"

"Yes, dear."

"Yes, yes, and keep still while mamma talks with Doctor Antibrigues."

Johnny disappeared into the library and was gone twenty minutes. When he came back he wore a look of deep disappointment and struggled manfully with the weight of Webster unabridged.

"What is it you want to find, Johnny?" asked the doctor.

"What papa said when I breaked his shaving mug," was the boy's innocent but suggestive remark.

In High Estimation.

Tennyson was highly esteemed at court, as this little anecdote will show. A favorite amusement within the Queen's home circle is what the French call the game of petits papiers. A few years ago the Princess Beatrice propounded this question. "If you were not to be yourself, what Englishman or Englishwoman would you rather be?" Among the little slips of paper containing the answers of those present, there were two which bore simply the name "Tennyson." The Queen wrote one, and her faithful friend, Lady Ely, since dead, the other. This reminds us of a distinguished Philadelphia lawyer, who, when his wife asked him, in company, when the question was going round: "Who would you rather be if not yourself?" made the gallant reply: "Your second husband, dear."

Then He Sat Down.

An oratorical pause is apt to be misleading. At the end of one of Lord Palmerston's speeches, a butcher called out: "Lord Palmerston, will you give me a plain answer to a plain question?" After a slight pause Lord Palmerston replied: "I will." The butcher then asked: "Will you or will you not support this measure?"—a Radical bill. Lord Palmerston hesitated, and then, with a twinkle in his eye, replied: "I will—" Then he stopped. Immediately the radicals cheered tremendously. "Not" — continued his lordship, (Loud Conservative cheers.) When these ceased, Lord Palmerston finished his sentence — "tell you." Then he immediately retired.

From 132 to 200.

We would respectfully call attention to this from Mr. E. A. Van Hoten, the well-known and popular barber doing business at 375 Third street, corner Grand River avenue, Detroit, Mich.:

"Any one who has suffered torments with dyspepsia or gastritis, as my physician called it, as I did for four years, knows what it means, and the difficulty of getting any relief, let alone a cure. I doctored with eleven different physicians, and tried I don't know how many different remedies, but my trouble lingered with me with the affection of a brother. Two years ago I began trying Hood's Sarsaparilla. Before I had taken half a bottle I began to feel better. I kept on until I had used six bottles. I also took Hood's Pills. I am happy to say that I have been perfectly and, I think, permanently cured. For the past year I have been able to eat anything without distress, have a blessed appetite, and once more thoroughly enjoy what I eat. I had also rheumatism quite badly for a number of years, and that has departed. When I began taking the Sarsaparilla I weighed but 132 pounds, now I weigh about 200. I have no hesitation in stating that Hood's Sarsaparilla, judging by the happy results that I know to be due to it in my own case, must be one of the best preparations ever placed on the market. You can always count on me as a friend."

These figures represent the number of bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, which were sold in the United States, from March '91 to March '92. Two million, two hundred and twenty-eight thousand, six hundred and seventy-two bottles sold in one year, and each and every bottle was sold on a positive guarantee that money would be refunded if satisfactory results did not follow its use. The secret of its success is plain. It never disappoints and can always be depended on as the very best remedy for coughs, cold, etc. Price 50c. and $1 00. At Robbins & McCord's drugstore. 6

Shirts of chain armor, which cost about $5000 are now worn by more than one distinguished person in Europe.

Strength and Health.

If you are not feeling strong and healthy, try Electric Bitters. If "La-Grippe" has left you weak and weary, use Electric Bitters. This remedy acts directly on liver, stomach and kidneys, gently aiding those organs to perform their functions. If you are afflicted with sick headache, you will find speedy and permanent relief by taking Electric Bitters. One trial will convince you that this is the remedy you need. Large bottles only 50c., at Robbins & McCord's drug store. 6

Successful Always.

The New Great South American Kidney Cure.

The acknowledged superior cure and immediate relief for all derangements, painfulness and decay of the kidneys or bladder, Bright's disease, diabetes or any complaint that hurts or despoils either of these delicate organs. This new remedy has been thoroughly tested by learned physicians and found far superior to any medicine yet discovered for quickly relieving all weaknesses, aches, pains and distresses arising from disease of any part of the urinary passages. It gives great relief for the old, middle aged and children, male or female. It relieves at once retention and pain in passing water, and it is very effective in relieving prostatic troubles in the old, and for nightly incontinence of water in children, or others, caused by weakness of the bladder. It may be worth to many a hundred times its cost. This is a remedy of great value to ladies, because they are very liable to weakness and pain peculiar to their sex. Sold by Robbins & McCord, druggists, Auburn, Ind. tf

HONDURAS LETTER.

Southward to Summer Land.

HONDURAS, Dec. 23, 1892.

On the last day of November we bid adiew to our loved ones and started for the eternal summer and after many delays in Chicago and New Orleans we at last set sail across the great gulf, so famed for sudden storms, as we left the jetties of the Mississippi we all went on deck to bid farewell to the best land on earth, and as I saw my native land faded in the distance dim, feelings of deep emotion for my dear land left behind filled my heart with sadness, and night closed over the scene. Morning dawned, we had left the chilly winds, snow and ice behind, we had gained a warmer clime. Delightful weather has followed us through all sea voyage. We were five days out of sight of land when as the sun shed his first rays of light on the tropic sea we sighted the beautiful island of Utilla, tall coconut, palms lined the shore and in the background groves of oranges and bread fruit covered the rising hills. We stopped at this island, but a short time then away to the coast, reaching Cuba in the afternoon of the same day, where our ship discharged some cargo and about fifty negro laborers. From thence we sailed to Port Burchard, which is our destination for the present. As I write I can see the place of my former home. The trees look as green and the surf rolls as when I left five months ago. I have not yet landed but write this from aboard the ship. He are all well and will go ashore to-morrow morning. So the readers of the COURIER good night until we have a chance to write again

JOSEPH A. SHADE.

How the Salt Springs at Syracuse were Discovered.

The great bulk of the salt used in the United States is derived from brine-springs, and the oldest plant in the country, the Onondaga State Reservation, is at Syracuse, New York. In the heart of the lands belonging to the Five Nations was a small but beautiful lake, Oh-nen-ta-ha (Onondaga), whose waters were sweet and pure, while in the marshes upon its borders bubbled springs of bitter water which left a fine dust of white crystals upon the over hanging leaves and grass. The Indians marveled greatly at the strange mixture of sweet and bitter water flowing apparently from the same source, and looking upon the tainted pools as bewitched and the abodes of demons, they feared to drink of their waters. These enchanted springs were pointed out to the Jesuit missionaries, the first whites who dared venture among the fierce and powerful Iroquois, and these intrepid and heroic men taught the savages the value of their brine springs, and completely exorcised the demons by placing a kettleful of the water over a fire, and explaining the art of manufacturing salt. This circumstance is narrated in the "Relation" of Father Lemoine, who went on a mission of peace to the Indians in 1654. Subsequently the Indians manufactured salt in small quantities, and sent it, with furs and skins, to the trading posts.

The close of the Revolutionary War brought a tide of immigration into this section, and by the treaty of Fort Stanwix, in 1788, the early settlers bargained for the right to manufacture salt upon the ground on one side of Onondaga Lake. In 1797, the State of New York purchased outright from the Indians the salt-reservations skirting the lake, and, after a survey, rented certain tracts to producers. The systematic manufacture of salt was thus instituted, and the works have been in operation ever since; producing millions of bushels of salt, netting the State an immense revenue, and, for a long time, almost monopolizing the salt-trade of the country.—Extract "From the Depths of a Crystalized Sea," in Demorest's Family Magazine for February.

Drs. Townsend Coming.

The diagnostic powers of these Surgeons in reading diseases without asking questions have produced a sensation among the physicians of the country. The stories patients tell of their power over disease border on the miraculous. One says: I went to them on crutches and I came home without them. Another: I had spinal curvature that doctors told me was incurable and I am now well. Another said: I was given up by fourteen doctors, who told me I had Bright's disease of the kidneys, but thanks to Drs. Townsend I am now a well man. Another: I was bedridden for over ten years with a complication of female diseases. Some of the most eminent specialists, including three professors in medical colleges, and they all told me I could not get well. Four years ago I placed my case in the hands of the Drs. Townsend, and in 5 months and 4 days from the time I commenced treatment I dressed myself and walked across the room, and in another month I felt as well as I ever did in my life and have remained in excellent health ever since. Another says: I had epilepsy for fifteen years and was cured.

In Memory of Marian.

The infant son of Henry and Sarah Smurr, aged 2 months and 22 days.

Marian, we will miss you,
As we turn around the room,
And see the little cradle
Standing empty in the gloom.

Marian we will miss you,
As the morning dawns so bright,
And no one else the little hands
We fondly c[illegible] last night.

Marian we will miss you,
But to us this comfort given,
That you will [illegible] happy be
With angels bright in heaven.

I, H. N. Coffinberry, Auditor in and for said County of DeKalb, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and complete list of all the lands and town lots in said county returned delinquent for the taxes for the year 1891, with the delinquent tax, penalty and interest, and also the tax for the year 1892, to the best of my knowledge and belief.

Notice is therefore hereby given, that so much of the foregoing lands and town lots as may be necessary to discharge the taxes, interest and penalty, and charges due thereon or due from the owners thereof at the time of the sale, will be sold at public auction at the court house door, in the town of Auburn in said county, on the second Monday in February, A. D., 1893, (the same being the 13th day of said month.) unless such taxes, penalty, interest and charges are previously paid. Sale to commence at 10 o'clock a. m., on said day and continue until all have been offered for sale.

H. N. COFFINBERRY, Auditor.

CORRESPONDENCE.

WATERLOO.

Your correspondant is informed that Mrs. Ida Daniels is expected home this week for a visit.

Protracted meetings are being held in three of the churches in town, and one in Uniontown.

Dr. Harry Chamberlain and Dr. Myers went to Salem Tuesday to organize a K. P. lodge at that place.

The L. M. C. held their regular session Tuesday evening of this week at the home of Miss Mattie Maxon.

Last Friday evening which was a very cold night, a large party went to Angola for a sleigh ride and to visit the skating rink.

Frank Goodwin has rented the east half of the house owned by Mr. Abby, on South Railroad street, and is moving into it.

Sunday the fire bell rang out its alarm which happily proved to be only a chimney burning out in the building occupied by Dr. Frank Bevier.

Mrs. Eli. Williamson died last week Wednesday, after a long illness and great suffering. She leaves a husband, two daughters, one married, Mrs. H. B. McCord, of Auburn, and two sons.

Mrs. Walker died Sunday night at midnight. Her funeral will be held Wednesday in the U. B. church. Mrs. Walker has been living with her son, north of town since her husbands death, several years ago.

A party of five couples took a sleigh ride last Tuesday evening George Bells', near Auburn. They took oysters, but on arrival they found that Mrs. Bell had provided an excellent and abundant supper of good things. They had a pleasant time is reported.

BUTLER.

J. A. Campbell and wife visited Garrett last week.

Mrs. Fred Ginder, nee Emily McDannel, is seriously ill.

The M. E. quarterly meeting was but slimily attended owing to the extremely cold weather.

The body of John Devore was brought here for burrial last Monday. His death took place somewhere in the west.

Snow about 20 inches deep and the mercury ranging from 10 degrees above to 18 below zero, has been the weather situation for the past week.

The ice harvest has proven a very good one and our dealers have a large supply on hand in their houses, and more being gathered each day. The quality is excellent and about one foot in thickness.

The Butler manufacturing company has been reorganized a new, board of directors elected and strong efforts are made to get this concern on a paying basis. We think under the present management something will be accomplished and possibly some remuneration returned to the stockholders, who so far have received little if any returns for the good money invested.

ASHLEY.

There is a ready sale for sleighs here.

It is true you find no seconds in Ashley.

Remember Chas. Ling is the boss baker.

Keep your eyes peeled and look out for the grand opening of new goods at J. W. Clarks'.

The school marm has no trouble during the past week to compare cold, colder, coldest.

E. D. Spangler, our popular jeweler moved his family here last week. Ed. says he has come to stay.

We expect a great stir on this plantation when spring opens. Mr. Gary says the outlook for Ashley is splendid.

At the Bargain Cash store you can buy any thing from a shoe string to a sack of flour, with prices to suit the times.

Editor Strayer had another dream last week. He now assures us that the big shops at Ashley are a dead sure thing, no fooling this time.

The West Ashley elevator company elected the following officers: M. P. Frederick, Pres.; E. A. Metz, Sec'y.; A. L. McDowell, Treas.

Our boys have organized a band with ten pieces. They should have the support of every citizen. They are not certain whether they will play for the World's Fair or not.

CONCORD.

Will Lucas has a brother visiting him

Mrs. Rose Phillips has the quinsy very hard.

Ida Koch come home from Ft. Wayne Thursday.

J. H. Stafford drove up to Concord Thursday.

Will Smurr is hauling hickory butts to Ft Wayne.

George Arnold and son, of Cedarville, were up Sunday.

Joseph Koch entertained several pleasure seekers Friday evening.

Beulah and Roy Koch, of St. Joe, visited their cousins over Sunday.

Mrs. Henry Seberts has the rheumatism and Mrs. Sam Stafford has the grip.

Ed and Blanche Leighty, of St Joe, came up to Tell Elson's Monday evening.

C. R Culbertson and C. H. Brown has purchased the lumber yard of M. F. Bishop, of St, Joe.

J B Draggoo and daughter Hattie were visiting relatives in Kendallville Thursday and Friday.

Last Monday Master Fred Elson's dog was killed by the train. Fred says it will never run away again and make a Crandall of him.

Friday last W. E Bush and wife, W. B. Brown and family and Frank Rush and family, from Auburn, visited in the family of F. Buchanan.

HEART DISEASE 30 YEARS.

GRAND ISLAND, NEB., April 8th, 1892.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

GENTLEMEN: I had been troubled with HEART DISEASE FOR THE LAST 30 YEARS, and although I was treated by able physicians and tried many remedies, I grew steadily worse until I WAS COMPLETELY PROSTRATED AND CONFINED TO MY BED WITHOUT ANY HOPE OF RECOVERY. I would have very bad sinking spells, when my pulse would stop beating altogether, and it was with the greatest difficulty that my circulation could be started, which would bring me back to consciousness again. While in this condition I tried your NEW HEART CURE, and began to improve from the first, and now I am able to do a good day's work for a man 68 years of age. I give DR. MILES' NEW HEART CURE all the credit for my recovery. It is over six months since I have taken any, although I keep a bottle in the house in case I should need it. I have also used your NERVE AND LIVER PILLS, and think a great deal of them. Z. AVERY.

My daughter has been afflicted with female trouble for over six years and I have paid out over $750 in vain trying to find relief for her. A lady friend advised her to secure a bottle of Dullam's Great German Female Uterine Tonic and she has been completely cured by it. We gave it a fair trial and the results were wonderful. We cannot recommend it too highly to all ladies who are afflicted.

How Unpleasant

it is to see a beautiful child's face disfigured with vile humors, bursting through the skin in pimples, blotches, and sores, and sadder still, when the young and innocent are laughed at and twitted at in all such cases. Parents should give them that good and pure remedy, Sulphur Bitters, which will search and drive out of the blood every particle of humor.—Health Gazette. 7

More than 700 biographies of Columbus have been written in various languages.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

What is

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

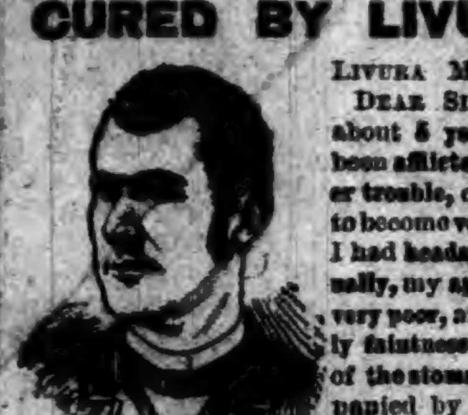
WHAT OTHERS SAY.

"THAT TERRIBLE DISTRESS."

LIVER TROUBLE, BILIOUSNESS, NERVOUS PROSTRATION, AND KIDNEY DISEASE.

Treated by Eight Physicians Without Benefit.

CURED BY LIVURA.



Mr. F. B. Archer.

Livura M'f'g. Co.,

Dear Sirs:—"For about 5 years I have been afflicted with Liver trouble, causing me to become very Bilious. I had headache continually, my appetite was very poor, and a deathly faintness at the pit of the stomach accompanied by a terrible distress. During the past two years my Kidneys became very weak and pained me so badly I could not rest. Owing to extreme nervousness I was unable to attend to my business, and in January I came down with Nervous Prostration. Eight different Physicians have had me under their care, but I grew worse instead of better.

Learning of PITCHER'S LIVURA I began taking it and my improvement was noticeable from the first. I have taken 3 bottles and am ENTIRELY CURED, able to attend to my work, and have not felt so well for 6 years. I give all the credit to

PITCHER'S LIVURA.

Respectfully, F. B. ARCHER,

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

There were in the same class I have been speaking of, D. B. Chilcote, of Corunna, J. W. Kanagy, of Iba, now Sedan, Sidney Jones, of Waterloo, S. Snyder, of Butler, E. Bodine, of Auburn and James Shilling, of Avilla.

Thomas H. Sprott son of Samuel Sprott, variously engaged has of late in company with W. Rickel, worked up a fine intesest in real estate, has been engaged in insurance and as city agent for sale of tickets to travelers on the Wabash and B. & O. railroad.

J. W. McCaslin was teacher of penmanship and assistant in the High School, Cosper Altenberg teacher and lawyer went to Little Rock, Arkansas, where he still resides.

We have no knowledge of N. B. Moore and O. Carmer of Auburn, O. Johnston, of Kendallville and Helmer of Corunna, but in the class were M. F. Long now of Butler, James W. Clark, of Smithfield, now a hardware merchant in Ashley, D. Snyder of Butler, later a business man in Auburn, engaged in manufacturing and a present citizen of Danville, Ill. Most knew W. A. Zern, H. Weyer and C. Ashelman until recent years a farmer on a part of the farm owned by his father in the earlier day.

The ladies in attendance were Della Waggoner, M. Ditmars, A. Alling, A. Beard, Mattie Rush, Mollie Rush, A. Raimer, A. Swarts and Mary Ward, of Auburn, N. Britton, of Corunna, T. M. Furnish, of Spencerville and Ellen and Mary Hogue of Swan. Looking backward through the changes and vicissitudes of their lives from the busy and realistic present to that school term of 1867, the last for many of their number, memory must recall those as pleasant days.

In the teachers' school were Andrew and J. J. Baxter, of Waterloo, the former now an attorney at Butler, the latter, a well to do farmer of the county; Calvin P. Houser, of Corunna, a teacher in the Auburn schools, a book and fruit agent, publisher for a time of the DeKalb County Republican and at present farm gardener near town. Joseph L. Penny, once town marshal, now a resident of Topeka, Kansas, A. and W. Hartman, P. D. Graham, D. Williams and A. Ross, of Auburn. Doctors E. D. Raub, Jared Spooner, Andrew Carper and Richard S. Kester are engaged in the practice of medicine and Abraham Reinœhl was a teacher and an attorney at-law. Dr. Spooner was a close medical student and enjoyed a good practice in Auburn and vicinity at a time when physicians were numerous and population comparatively small. He married Mary Ford daughter of Dr. J. H. Ford and at Peru, Ind., has a fine reputation and large patronage.

Dr. Carper was to a considerabl extent a self educated man, married Harriet Steele, a teacher in the schools of Auburn and Butler and by a study of his calling and assiduity in practice, has won and retained the confidence and support of the community where he lives.

The grammar school had eighty-eight members as follows:

Lyman Lockwood, George Wineland, Cook Ford, Allen Weaver, Henry Weaver, Thomas Leasure, K. Rush, H. Rush, F. Palmer, D. Lawrence W. Spangler, W. Dancer, W. Ralston, W. Heist, James Rowley, Henry Jones, Jefferson Clark, Henry Smith, F. Sherlock, I. N. Shilling, Frank Britton, James Brandon, T. Cool, W. Robbins, W. C. Fluke, J. D. Clark, P. Alling, Granville Lahnum, J. Rush, H. Bumpus, W. Weyer, M. Roth, J. Robbins, J. W. Johnston, John Gleeson, Henry Little and H. Long.

And the young ladies were:

Alice Widney, Eunice Lockwood, Emma Ford, Zaida Kessler, Emma Catlin, M. McKean, S. Wartensleben, E. Williams, A. Chidsey, Addie Roth, Denna Zern, Ada Reed, Radie Brandon, Rebecca Cannon, W. Wisner, Rose Blair, Ida Blair, Orpha Bodine, Dora Bodine, Georgia Lowrey, Dora Lowrey, Sarah Latson, Hattie Latson, Mary Catlin, Ella Dearborn, Bell Teeters, Bell Brandon, R. Wyatt, M. Mourer, Ida Moody, Emma Wheelock, A. Baldock, Fannie Latson, Carrie Snowers, E. White, M. Crawford, Josie Rush, B. Larimore, Hattie Griswold, M. Robbins, Hattie Clark, Ada Moody, B. Heilbruner, K. Bender, Rosa Ashelman, Sarah Picker and A. Ashelman.

In this roll call a quarter century since the academy was in the zenith of its prosperity and since those named had little of care beyond the lessons of the day, we hear many a familiar name, recall the youthful features and acquaintance of many till now almost forgotten. Some have died, some have removed. Few to day of the ladies would respond to the surnames then theirs, matrons now, with sons and daughters, they have unconsciously grown in years and like a dream they hear the old bell ring again, climb the inconvenient and narro stairs, take the familiar rough seat for study, of Pinneo, Monteith, Ray and Cutter, occupy the recitation seats and listen to voices that can be heard no more, and awaken to know that the charm has departed and that 1867, to the young as well as the old, the townspeople as well as the town, is a date from which great changes came bringing in their course, something of anxiety and trouble, but much of lasting and substantial good.

Oh! memories of the past, abide and bless us:
Though wanderers from places loved of yore;
Sometimes let airs from your far fields caress us,
Until we need your healing balm no more.

Real Estate Agency of AUBURN, IND.

RICKEL & SPROTT, Props.

We present in this column a list which has been selected from our choicest properties, and are the best and cheapest.

TOWN PROPERTIES.

An elegant two-story frame dwelling with all necessary out buildings, small fruits and all the modern conveniences which go to make a beautiful and pleasant home. Will be sold cheap for cash, or will accept two-thirds cash; balance in one year.

A very desirable residence property on North Van Buren street. This property has good, almost new buildings, well, cistern and some fruits, and a price that will astonish you.

A vacant lot on West 7th street.

A nice residence on Seventh street right handy to schools and churches, and within a two minutes' walk of the Court House.

A most desirable residence on south Jackson street, which we offer at a bargain, and will give the purchaser the privilege of paying out in monthly payments, if he so desires. Terms, $500 cash; balance in monthly payments.

FARMS.

We offer, first, a splendid Seventy acres in Union township, well tiled, good fences. Land that cannot be beat for gardening and for small fruits. Will sell cheap for cash, or on the most favorable terms on long time. Lays within three miles of Auburn.

Eighty acres of good land, within one mile of Newville. Good buildings, orchard, and, better soil cannot be found in DeKalb county. Easy prices, and terms to suit the purchaser.

We have a number of farms and town properties on our books, which we are not allowed to advertise, because of the simple fact, that they are offered so cheap that were it known the public would draw the conclusion that the owners are hard up for ready cash, which we all know would be a mistake.

We are agents for those lands in Kansas and Nebraska, which can be had on the most favorable terms ever offered, to-wit: The purchaser makes a small cash payment, just enough to show that he is in earnest, then yearly, thereafter, he pays (delivers at the nearest market) one-half of the crops raised on the land. If crops are unfavorable and he raises no crop, then he make no payment that year, but is carried over until next year, and so on, until he pays out. Shall we have your application for one of these farms?

We shall be pleased to see you at any time and show, Free of Charge, any of the properties we have on our lists. Write or call on us for any information regarding rates, time of trains to any place on "God's green earth," and remember that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad pays the hack fare to all points in competition where the fare is $2. or more.

CAUGHT FROM THE WIRE FOR INTELLIGENT READERS.

Gas Explosion at Anderson, Ind.—Many Lives Lost—Blaine's Family Do Not Expect Him to Recover—End of a Quartet—Wreck on the Pennsylvania.

BLAINE UNABLE TO TALK.

A Friend of the Family Says They Do Not Expect Him to Recover.

Mr. Blaine's condition remains practically unchanged, said Dr. Johnston, who left the patient at noon Thursday. Mr. Blaine passed a restful night, sleeping the greater part of the time, and has apparently lost no strength; neither has he gained any. Mr. Blaine is much of the time in a state of unconsciousness. A relative of the family, who was at the bedside of the distinguished patient during the doctor's visit, said that Mr. Blaine had not spoken a word to the members of the family for more than a week. They share the belief of the physician that the sick man can never recover, even partially, and are resigned to the inevitable. His present condition, however, is not regarded as critical, and there is no apprehension on the part of the family of an immediate dissolution.

A $100,000 Fire.

A special from St. Augustine, Fla., says: "A fire which started in the Casino building adjoining the hotel Alcasear, raged stubbornly for nearly five hours, but was confined to that structure which was badly gutted. The loss will probably reach $100,000. The Casino covers an area of 200x300 feet. Its walls were of solid concrete. The ground floor was occupied by billiard rooms and bowling alleys. The south and central portions for three floors were occupied by an immense swimming pool, opening from which were magnificent apartments fitted up in original style for Russian and Turkish baths. The upper floors were occupied as servants' quarters for the Alcasear and other hotels.

Gas Explosion.

An explosion of natural gas totally wrecked the National Exchange Bank, which is on the ground floor of the Doxey Hotel, Anderson, Ind. The concussion shook the entire building and created a panic among the occupants of the hotel. Flames at once broke out and an alarm of fire brought to the scene the entire fire department. The flames quickly spread and the entire block was destroyed. Several of the inmates of the hotel are missing, and, it is believed, that at least two persons are buried in the ruins. The explosion occurred at a time when the bank and hotel were filled with people, and it is miraculous that the list of casualties is not greater.

With Small-Pox.

Nathaniel Graham was found sick on the streets of Chicago and was taken to the County Hospital by the police. It was discovered that he was suffering from small-pox and he was removed to the pest house. All the 625 patients in the hospital have been exposed, directly or indirectly, and every person in the building was vaccinated by officers of the Health Department. Graham has been living in the city for a year but has had no fixed residence recently, and it is feared that he may have spread the disease among the lodging houses.

End of the Quartet.

Jules Kampe, local manager of the Washington Life Insurance Company, who shot himself because he was short in his accounts, was buried at Cincinnati. Kampe, Samuel McGlasson, Samuel Clark, and Fred Boles were for several years inseperable companions and all four held responsible positions. Boles had a shortage and shot himself in the head four years ago. Clark did the same in the presence of Kampe and McGlasson, the latter following by taking poison in a Virginia hotel, and now Kampe has taken his own life.

Satolli Permanent Papal Delegate.

Rome special: The congregation of the propaganda has sent to the American archbishops the announcement of Archbishop Satolli's nomination to be permanent papal delegate to the church in the United States, and directed the archbishops to communicate this announcement to their suffragens.

Secretary of Printers' Union Resigns.

W. S. McClevey, Secretary and Treasurer of the International Typographical Union the last four years, has resigned. The International Executive Council has named A. G. Wines of St. Louis, to fill out the unexpired term.

New States to Be Admitted.

The Republican senatorial caucus has decided by a majority vote to take favorable action upon the admission of the Territories of Oklahoma, Utah, and New Mexico, but it left Arizona out in the cold.

Pugilism Barred at Huntington.

As the result of a number of boxing and knock-out exhibitions given in Huntington, Ind., by boxers, the City Council passed an ordinance prohibiting any fight or exhibition of pugilistic skill in the city in the future.

Wreck on the Pennsylvania.

A passenger train on the Pennsylvania railroad was wrecked near New Brunswick, N. J., and the express messenger was killed.

His Child Died for Want of Medical Aid.

Haverhill (Mass.) special: The 1-year-old daughter of the Rev. A. S. Orne died of typhoid-pneumonia, from which the child had been suffering for the past three weeks, and during which time she received no medical treatment whatever. Mr. Orne says of the case: "The girl was taken sick three weeks ago, but no serious turn came until last week, when Dr. Morse diagnosed the case at my request, and pronounced it to be typhoid-pneumonia. He did not give me any prescription, for I do not believe in physicians or their treatment. Furthermore, I am not of this world, and I try to follow the words of the Scriptures and, as God did not see my child, I believe He has another object in taking her away."

Mr. Orne stated that he had healed his children at other times by anointing with oil and laying on of hands and prayer, and believed it it had been God's will this child would have been saved. Rev. Mr. Orne was formerly city missionary here, and is now the State agent of the State Parental Home Association.

THE CRONIN CASE

Revived by a Sensational Supreme Court Ruling.

Chicago special: Daniel Coughlin, the only survivor of the trio of Irishmen sentenced to imprisonment for life, December 16, 1889, for the murder of Dr. P. H. Cronin, will have another tussle with the law for freedom. At the October term of the Supreme Court an appeal for a writ of error in the interest of the convict was made by Attorneys Wing and Forrest. The appeal has been sustained, a decision to this effect having been rendered at Ottowa. This decision means that Coughlin is, for the time being, in the eyes of the law, free from the brand of murder. He is no longer a convict he is as innocent in the legal sense as when he took his place in the dock three years ago last August with Beggs, Kunse, O'Sullivan and Burke to answer for the killing of Dr. Cronin. But the charge of murder still hangs over him, and the new trial that the decision of the Supreme Court involves may send him back to confinement or to the gallows. It may on the other hand result in his getting his liberty. The judgment of the Supreme Court is based on the charge of prejudice made in the appeal in the case of Jurors Clark and Bonetecon. The admissions made by these jurors on their examination as venemen were fastened on as supplying good grounds for a new trial by Coughlin's attorneys, and a majority of the court agrees with that contention.

Justices Magruder and Scofield dissented from the verdict of their brothers on the beach.

THROUGH A BRIDGE.

The north-bound express from Indianapolis on the Lake Erie and Western Railroad, was badly wrecked about one mile south of Peru, Ind. Among the fifteen passengers on board the train not one escaped injury. The entire train, engine, smoking, express, and chair cars were precipitated on the ice of the river about thirty-five feet below. A broken rail about 100 feet from the river threw the train from the track and the train continued on until it reached the bridge when the first two tiers gave way, and the entire train went down. The engine stood upright, and cars covered it with its wreckage of three cars. The fireman jumped, but Engineer Griffin was pinned in the cabin and taken out severely scalded. The wreck took fire and was burned completely, the cars being smashed to splinters. Brakeman Richard Neff was badly hurt, but pulled himself out of the wreck and, lighting a lantern, ran back and flagged a freight which was following. It was stopped only about 100 feet from the wreck and another horrible wreck was averted.

It is miraculous that no more were killed as the cars were hurled over stones and not a splinter of the wood was saved from the fire.

BADLY BEATEN.

The Muncie Switchmen Give up the Strike.

The switchmen's strike on the Lake Erie & Western road at Muncie, Ind., which has been carried on for more than a week, was practically settled Saturday as the company succeeded in getting out five trains without being molested. Six of the sixteen strikers have been arrested and taken before Judge Baker of the United States Court, and warrants are out for the others but they cannot be found.

"Men have a right to quit the employ of a company, but they have no right, under the guise of organized labor, to interfere with property and to engage in trespassing. Then it is not organized labor; it is organized crime." These were the remarks of Judge Baker of the United States Court, in the trial for contempt of P. Nixon and D. Kirkwood, two of the Lake Erie and Western strikers, who are charged with contempt.

Money for Public Buildings.

Among the contracts that have been entered into for partial work or for completion of public buildings to the amount of $2,250,000 are the following: Ashland, Wis., $100,000; Atchison, Kan., $100,000; Burlington, Ia., $125,000; Canton, Ohio, $100,000; Cedar Rapids, Iowa, $100,000; Chicago, government building for World's Fair, $400,000; Rockford, Ill., $100,000; Rock Island, Ill., $75,000; Salina, Kan., $75,000; Saginaw, Mich., $100,000; Sheboygan, Wis., $50,000; Sioux City, Iowa, $125,000; South Bend, Ind., $75,000.

The treasury is authorized by existing laws to spend $9,160,000 additional on other public buildings, among which are: Aurora, Ill., $75,000; Bloomington, Ill., $75,000; Davenport, Ia., $100,000; Emporia, Kan., $10,000; Galesburg, Ill., $75,000; Madison, Ind., $50,000; Racine, Wis., and Danville, Ill., $100,000; Fort Dodge, Ia., $75,000; Kansas City, Mo., $175,000; Lafayette, Ind., $80,000; Lansing, Mich., $100,000; St. Paul, Minn., $400,000.

Collision on the Pennsylvania Road.

Jersey City (N. J.) special: The train for Newark on the Pennsylvania road broke down on the meadows, just beyond the Hackensack River. The signal agent, supposing the train had gone beyond his block, signalled to the Chesapeake & Ohio Express, immediately following, that the road was clear. The express crashed into the stalled train, completely telescoping it. Two persons were killed outright and seventeen wounded. The injured were brought to this city. As none were badly hurt, and all wished to go to their homes in Newark, a special train was fitted out and they were sent to their destination.

Murdered for Money.

A special from Marietta, Ohio, says: Mike Haas and wife were murdered about two miles out of town on the Newport pike. Haas last fall married a Mrs. Langfitt, who had two sons aged 27 and 20 years. The family has never been a happy one, continual quarrels occurring between the two sons and Haas and his wife. Haas and his wife went into the country to sign some papers on some property, which Haas owns. Mrs. Haas had about $1,000 on her person. The two Langfitt boys each hired a team of Mugrage, the liveryman. Haas was shot and Mrs. Haas was stabbed several times.

Almost Smothered.

Sixteen people were found overcome by gas in a row of buildings at 1608 to 1614 Milwaukee avenue, Chicago. Two of the victims, Mrs. Mary Sidlers and her 3-year-old son, have been taken to the county hospital and will probably die. The others will, it is believed live. The gas was first discovered in McCaffrey's saloon. The police were called, and found the inmates stupefied by the noxious vapor. But for their speedy action many lives would have been lost.

A County Treasurer Skips.

Auguston Cronkhite of Williamsport, Ind., Treasurer of Warren County, has disappeared. It is reported that his accounts are short to the extent of $65,000. It is not known where the money or Cronkhite has gone.

Cronkhite was in the habit of receiving money from heavy tax payers and not entering the same on his receipt book, although giving receipts to the parties who paid the money. The required publication of the delinquent list precipitated matters and Cronkhite left. He left a note to his bondsmen telling them that he was afraid to face the music.

Valuable Letters and Signatures.

A sale of autograph letters and signatures of various notables was held at Bangs & Loyd auction rooms, New York, recently. George Washington's letters sell for half what they used to. One to Thomas Jefferson, concerning his condition of continuing in office, went for $35. Signers of the Declaration of Independence fared hardly better. Autograph of Thomas Lynch, the rarest of all the signers, went for $24, while the signatures of modern men of prominence in the literary and artistic line went for a few cents each.

Terrific Boiler Explosion.

The waterworks boiler at Nappanee, Ind., exploded killing three men and injuring two others. The boiler also operated the electric lights, and had just been repaired. It was being tested when the accident happened. The killed are N. A. French of the Town Board; George Parker, and Electrician Johnson. The injured are Jonas and Isaac Whisler, boiler-makers. The stand-pipe of the system collapsed not long since, fatally injuring several.

The Socialists' Claims.

Paris special: The Socialists are still claiming the Panama scandal will land them in power again. Citizen Guesde, one of the leaders, says that sixty Socialists will be returned at the next election. After the Socialists get into power, he says, they will seize all the banks, railways, big landed estates, and all corporate property, manage them for the people of France instead of a few.

Sad Accident.

John Buchtman met with an accident at the Sherry Manufacturing Company's handle factory, New Haven, Ind., which resulted in his death. He was running a rip saw when in some way the carriage did not work and a piece of timber fell on the saw. It was thrown back and struck him in the stomach. He leaves a young wife whom he married at Delphos, Ohio, two months ago.

Hanged to a Tree.

In Pickens County, Alabama, May Davis, aged 13, gave birth to a colored child, confessing that James Williams, colored, was its father. Williams was arrested by officers, who, while taking him to Carrolton Jail, were overpowered by a masked mob at Coal-fire Swamp, and Williams was taken and hanged to a tree. His body was then riddled with bullets.

Close the Fair on Sunday.

In the Lower House of the Pennsylvania Legislature a concurrent resolution urging Pennsylvania Senators and Representatives in Congress in favor of enforcing the contract entered into between the United States Government and the World's Fair Commission requiring the closing of the Fair on Sunday, was agreed to, yeas, 91; nays, 52.

The President Declines to Pardon Bank Wrecker Harper.

Edwin L. Harper, bank wrecker and ex-President of the Fidelity National Bank of Cincinnati, and a convict in the Ohio Penitentiary, has been denied a pardon by President Harrison. Harper was thought to be seriously ill, but an investigation proved otherwise.

Boy Badly Burned.

James Irwin, the 5-year-old son of Henry W. Irwin, living near Cedar Chapel, Ohio, was seriously and probably fatally burned. The little boy fell into the fire, and before assistance could be had was frightfully burned about the head and breast, the flesh being literally roasted.

An Elevator Burned.

The grain elevator belonging to Fred Rush & Co., Indianapolis, was destroyed by fire. The fire was remote from water and the department could do little but stand by and see the elevator destroyed. It contained about 40,000 bushels of wheat.

Dempsey Found Guilty.

Pittsburgh special: Judge Stowe delivered his charge in the Homestead poisoning case against Hugh F. Dempsey, District Master Workman of the Knights of Labor, and after the jury was out three hours they returned a verdict of guilty.

Aged Woman Injured.

Mrs. E. Yocom, residing at Staunton, Ind., fell from a large chair breaking her right thigh. She is past 70 years and cannot recover. Mrs. Yocom is the mother of County Recorder Yocom.

Senator Carlisle Resigns.

Frankfort (Ky.) special: The resignation of Senator Carlisle has been transmitted by the Governor to the State Senate. The decision of Gov. Brown not to be a senatorial candidate is final.

Matthews Can't Appoint.

A caucus of Democratic members of the Indiana Legislature has decided to kill the bill giving to the Governor the appointing power.

MOURNING FOR HAYES

THE EX-PRESIDENT HAS LEFT THIS EARTH.

His Illness, Neuralgia of the Heart, of but a Few Days' Duration—Sketch of a Life Remarkable for Diverse Experiences.

At Rest with His Loved Wife.

Ex-President Rutherford B. Hayes died at his home, Fremont, Ohio, at 11 o'clock Tuesday night. He returned from a trip the prior Saturday night and was then ill. He grew worse, and Monday it was announced that he was seriously sick. He had been seized at Cleveland with neuralgia of the heart, while on his way home from an Eastern trip.

During Monday night he rested well, and Tuesday his friends were hopeful. As the day wore away his symptoms became aggravated. In the evening the family sent for Dr. Hirbish, physician. The doctor soon announced that his patient was growing rapidly worse and that the end could be expected any moment. Shortly thereafter the ex-President died. There were present at his bedside his daughter, Miss Frances Hayes, and his sons Scott of Cincinnati, Birchard of Toledo, and Webb and Rutherford H. Hayes.

A personal friend of the family gives this statement of the sickness and death of the ex-President: "Gen. Hayes was in Cleveland with his son Webb, Friday, and left there Saturday afternoon for Fremont. He was driven in a closed carriage to the Union depot, where his son joined him, and immediately after entering the car complained of cold and asked for stimulants. He finally consented to leave the car, and went into the waiting-room, where stimulants were given him. These so revived him that he insisted on returning to the train, saying that he must go home. 'I would rather die in Speigel Grove,' he said, 'than live anywhere else.' After his return to the car he was seized with violent pains in the chest, which lasted until after his return home. He was treated for angina pectoris, but while relieved of distress his heart never recovered its vigor and life was suddenly terminated by paralysis of the heart while lying in his own room. He frequently referred to a visit made to his wife's grave the preceding Sunday and spoke of the quiet beauty of the snow-covered scene. He said that he almost wished he was lying there by the side of his wife. 'It was all so peaceful, and yet,' he said, 'I am not unhappy. My life is an exceptionally happy one.' His last words were: 'I know that I am going where Lucy is.' This was spoken to his family physician with the utmost earnestness early in the evening. There was every reason to suppose that the patient would pass a comfortable night, and the family retired to rest. He passed quietly and painlessly away."

Sketch of His Career.

Rutherford Birchard Hayes was born Oct. 4, 1822. He had been known principally as an Ohio Governor prior to his nomination for the Presidency, although he made a record in the war. He was educated at Kenyon College and studied law in the office of Thomas Sparrow, at Columbus. In 1849 he moved to Cincinnati, where he built up a good practice and gained considerable reputation in several sensational murder trials. In 1859 he was made City Solicitor. He entered the army as Major of the Twenty-third Ohio Volunteer Infantry June 7, 1861. A few months later he was Lieutenant Colonel, and he came out of the army with the rank of Brevet Major General of Volunteers, a rank conferred upon him "for gallant and distinguished services during the campaign of 1864 in West Virginia, and particularly at the battle of Fisher's Hill and Cedar Creek, Va."

Aug. 6, 1864, while Hayes was in the field, he was elected to Congress, and took his seat Dec. 4, 1865. He was elected to the next Congress, but resigned to make a race for the Governorship, to which he was elected in 1867. In 1869 he was renominated by acclamation, and was elected by about the usual Ohio majority. In 1872 he accepted a nomination to Congress, but was defeated by Gen. H. B. Banning. The Republican State Convention in 1875 nominated Hayes a third time for the office of Governor. After a campaign that excited the attention of the entire country on account of the financial heresies involved he was elected, defeating "Old Bill" Allen about 5,000 votes. It was this important canvass that suggested Hayes as a possible dark horse in 1876. His nomination was brought about by the fight against Blaine. The nomination of the latter was seen to be impossible. The Pennsylvania delegation led in a break for Hayes, and his nomination followed.

The suspense and anxiety of the country during the months following the election is well remembered. It is not necessary to dwell long upon the causes. His administration was not a brilliant, but a respectable one, and Washington society declared his wife to be a most refined and charming woman. Mrs. Hayes died at Fremont, O., June 21, 1889.

Since his retirement from the Presidency Rutherford B. Hayes had lived quietly at his old home in Fremont, O., devoting himself assiduously to poultry farming and the promotion of prison reform. Mr. Hayes was attacked by an illness which caused him to lose his voice, and he was much depressed in consequence.

It will be remembered that ex-President Hayes had been an intelligent and systematic worker for the education of the Southern freedmen and for prison reform. He was a trustee of the Ohio State University and was an earnest and effective laborer for the prosperity of that institution. He gave special attention and work to the subject of industrial education, in which he was a great believer, and of which he was an earnest advocate. In these and other fields of practical usefulness he employed what might have been the idle leisure of his retirement.

The Birchard library was presented to the town of Fremont by ex-President Hayes. It contains a large collection of books and a museum of historical records.

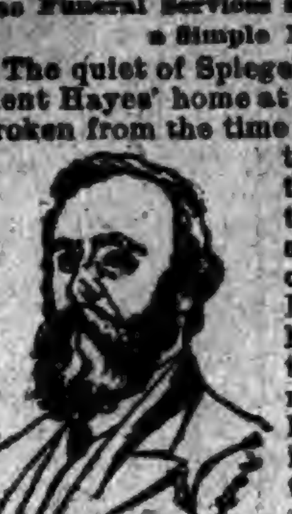
The life of Rutherford B. Hayes since his retirement from the Presidency has been one of peculiar unostentatiousness. During the recent Grand Army encampment at Washington the ex-President marched through the broiling sun, with the rank and file of his command. Upon recognizing him, the assemblage of patriotic thousands accorded him a perfect ovation all along the line of march. In speaking a few days before his death of his daily pursuits, the ex-President said: "I rise with the sun both winter and summer and seldom use the gas to dress by. This makes me get up very early in the long days of the year, but in the winter I sometimes lie abed as late as 7 o'clock, though I usually try to get out by 6. I dress and come down to my library and work from that time until breakfast. I do all my disagreeable work before breakfast, and I solve my most knotty problems at that time. I think one's brain is clearer in the morning, and I find this to be my best working period. My correspondence is quite large and it covers all sorts of subjects. I do all my work myself and pen answers to all my letters with my own hand."

The Value of Thought.

The best men in any enterprise are those who think, those who wisely plan. The commonest article made must first be fully created in someone's thought before it can be realized in wood or metal. When the great Faraday was announcing his discoveries in pure science which have made the telegraph, the telephone, electric lights and electric power possible, he was offered a million of dollars to stop his investigations, and devote his entire time and ability to making practical applications of electricity, but he refused to entertain the offer, saying that he could render mankind more service by his theoretical discoveries, and that other men could follow him with the applications, as Edison, Bush and Bell have done. The bulk of men do no thinking; enterprises with which they are connected carry them, and the results are patent on every hand. A few thoughts of a Bonaparte make Austerlitz a possibility. Scores of men can execute a plan where one man can be found to make the plan and do the necessary thinking to render it a success. The most valuable men to Germany in the Franco-Prussian war were Von Moltke and Bismarck, who did the thinking, while inferior men like the Crown Prince and Prince Charles executed what Von Moltke had planned.

BURIAL OF GEN. HAYES.

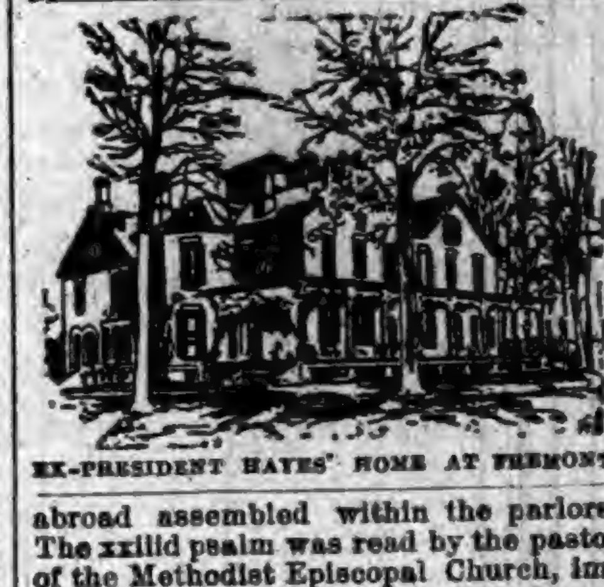
The Funeral Services at Fremont Were of a Simple Nature.



GEN. HAYES.

The quiet of Spiegel Grove—ex-President Hayes' home at Fremont—was not broken from the time death entered until the morning of the funeral, when the body lay in state until the hour of the services. During the earlier hours of the day the citizens of Fremont viewed for the last time the familiar features of their distinguished neighbor and friend, and an opportunity to view the remains was also given the guests from abroad at a late hour after the trains arrived. The crowd in Fremont three years ago at the obsequies of Mrs. Hayes was estimated at 15,000. That, however, was in the month of June, and the cold weather which now prevails diminished the number on this occasion. It is estimated, however, that the number present reached nearly 10,000.

The churches of the city were all warmed and thrown open for the accommodation of strangers and warm lunches were served by the ladies of Fremont for the accommodation of all. Every vehicle in the city was under contract for the day, and outside towns were called upon, as Spiegel Grove is at a considerable distance from the center of the town, and the cemetery where the interment took place is about two miles farther out. The services were simple and impressive. At 2 o'clock the family, personal friends and dignitaries from abroad assembled within the parlors. The xxiiid psalm was read by the pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, immediately followed by a favorite hymn, sung by Prof. Alfred Arthur of Cleveland, leader of the regimental band, and David H. Kimberly of the Twenty-third Ohio, assisted by a quartette. Prayer was then offered by Dr. James W. Bashford, President of the Ohio Wesleyan University. There was no sermon. The services closed with singing and the Lord's prayer. The Grand Army ritual, which is very simple, was used at the cemetery. The Ohio National Guard and other military bodies were in the procession.



EX-PRESIDENT HAYES' HOME AT FREMONT.

By direction of the Secretary of War the following officers of the army attended the funeral: Brigadier General Joseph C. Breckinridge, Inspector General; Colonel George D. Ruggles, Assistant Adjutant General; Lieutenant Colonel Marshall I. Ludington, Deputy Quartermaster General; Lieutenant Colonel H. C. Corbin, Assistant Adjutant General; Captain Tasker H. Bliss, A. D. C. to the Major General commanding the army. Secretary Charles Foster, Postmaster General Wanamaker and Secretaries Noble and Rusk attended as the special representatives of President Harrison, and President-elect Cleveland was present in person. They were accompanied by Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Rathbone, representing the Ohio Republican Association. With the exception of Representative Haynes, the Ohio delegation did not attend the funeral. Senator Sherman found that his presence was needed in Washington, and Representative Enochs, who was in Gen. Hayes' brigade during the war, and would have attended the funeral, is not in very good health.

At Washington.

At Washington, on the day of the funeral, the national flag was displayed at half-mast. At dawn of day thirteen guns were fired and afterward, at intervals of thirty minutes between the rising and setting of the sun, a single gun, and at the close of the day a national salute of forty-four guns. The White House and all the executive departments were draped in mourning, and will wear their sable emblems of sorrow for a period of thirty days. All the departments were closed.

The central tumulous, where the relics were found, has a double circular wall, and was probably used for sepulchral purposes.

FARMERS from various parts of Carroll County report that quails are dying by the thousand. The earth being covered with snow and the streams frozen up, they can get neither food nor drink. Many farmers are feeding the quails. Unless this is done generally over the State the birds will be almost entirely obliterated this winter.

A MEETING was held at Valparaiso to organize a driving circuit, embracing the towns of South Bend, LaPorte, Plymouth, Crown Point, and Valparaiso. E. S. Beach of Valparaiso, was chosen President, and W. O. McHelson of Crown Point, Secretary. The dates established so far are: Valparaiso, Sept. 19; La Porte, Sept. 26; Crown Point, Oct. 3; South Bend and Plymouth to be arranged later.

THE boiler at the Kelly-Metz hominy-mill, Muncie, exploded, badly demolishing the engine-room. It is thought that tramps entered the engine-room and turned on the natural gas to keep warm, and went off and left it. The boiler split in two and did $3,000 damage, with no insurance. The company moved the mill to Muncie from Indianapolis, where it was formerly operated. If any persons were in the engine-room at the time they are buried deep below the debris.

GOV. MATTHEWS has appointed Major Irvin Robbins as Adjutant General and Samuel M. Compton as Quartermaster General. Both gentlemen are residents of Indianapolis, and are prominently connected with Grand Army circles of the State. Major Robbins being at present Adjutant General of the State Department. During his military career he served three months in Company F, Seventh Indiana Regiment, afterward enlisting with the One-hundred-and-twenty-third. In this regiment he arose to the rank of Captain, and at the close of the rebellion had earned the title of Major. Quartermaster General Compton, has an honorable military record, which he gained as a soldier of Battery K, First Regiment, Indiana Heavy Artillery, and with which regiment he served five years.

A YOUNG daughter of Andrew Welch of Seymour, was instantly killed by being caught between two O. & M. cars while on her way to school.

A LAW-AND-ORDER LEAGUE has been organized at Wabash, with the following officers: President, L. O. Dale; Vice Presidents, Rev. C. E. Morgan, Charles Little, Daniel Spiker, A. W. Lamport and Calvin Cowgill; Secretary, Mrs. M. H. Kidd; Treasurer, A. J. Ross. Ten thousand dollars have been subscribed as a fund for prosecuting violators of the law, especially the liquor laws. Of this fund not more than 5 per cent. is to be collected annually on assessment.

ANDERSON experienced another terrific explosion of natural gas the other day. The treacherous fluid which had been accumulating in the cellar of Henderson's drug store, on the south side of the public square, let loose. The shock was felt several blocks distant. James Kelly and Charles Conner were standing in front of the building over the grating which covered the entrance to the cellar. Both were lifted high into the air and blown a distance of twenty feet into the street. Connor escaped with few bruises, but Kelly was seriously injured. A large gash on his head, a broken nose, cut hands and the skin burnt from his face constituted his injuries. The front of the drug store was demolished.

INDIANA LEGISLATURE.

JANUARY 16.—Prison South affairs occupied the attention of both houses to-day. In the Senate a letter was read from Mr. Patton, referring to the charges of mismanagement and cruelty to convicts sprung upon him from Republican sources, and asking an investigation. Mr. Patton also said: "Believing that the charges emanate from a spirit of malice and revenge, and for the purpose of putting into execution a threat to defeat the Prison Directors for re-election, and to bring the prison management into disgrace, and that an effort is being made by designing politicians to give these charges a political coloring for political effect only, I demand that they be made specific and that I be furnished with a copy of the same, together with the names of the accusers, so as to be able to act advisedly in the premises."

The debate drifted along through the morning session and was resumed after noon. The matter of an investigation was finally referred to the regular committee of the Prison South.

The communication of Warden Patton to the House, similar in tone to that laid before the Senate, was backed by a resolution introduced by Representative Ader of Putnam, reciting the charges which have found their way into print and referring the same to the Committee on the Prison South, with full power to act.

The committees will act jointly in the prison investigation.

The bill looking to placing appointments of prison directors, boards of benevolent institutions, &c., into the hands of the Chief Executive, saw light to-day. It was introduced in the House by Cullop of Knox. It is wide-sweeping in its provisions. The Governor is given power of removal for cause, and he is made practically responsible for the management of the State Institutions.

Another matter exciting attention was a resolution by Mr. Tippen of Tipton, calling for a joint committee to correspond with other State Legislatures and endeavor to prepare a bill subjecting foreign capital loaned in the States to taxation.

IN the Senate Tuesday, David Turpie was nominated and elected United States Senator by a vote of 35 to 4. He was nominated by Senator Kern and seconded by Senators McLean and Griffith. Mr. Fairbanks was nominated by Senator Loveland, who read Senator Wishard's speech, he being sick. Senator Hobson seconded and Senator Boord made a very creditable maiden effort in behalf of Fairbanks.

In the House the ceremony of placing in nomination candidates for United States Senator was made the special order of 11 o'clock. The special order being called, Mr. Cullop presented the name of Senator Turpie, which was seconded by Hench, Cravens, and Johnson.

The name of Hon. Charles W. Fairbanks was presented by Mr. Lindermuth and seconded by Morens R. Sulzer and Mr. Meredith. The vote resulted—Turpie 63, Fairbanks 36. Summary—Turpie 99, Fairbanks 50.

A few minor bills were killed by adverse committee reports in both Houses. Among them was one to amend the celebrated "Provoke" law, which queer statute was left as it is. An effort to rush Judge Elliott's Appellate Court Bill through the House failed, but votes enough were recorded for it to pass it when it comes up regularly. It has been amended so as to leave the term of life of the court six years. The first of the usury bills reducing the legal rate of interest to 6 per cent. came up and was killed.

AT 12 o'clock Wednesday, both branches of the General Assembly met in the hall of the House of Representatives to canvass the vote for United States Senator, cast yesterday. Lieutenant Governor Nye presided. The journals of both branches relative to the Senatorial proceedings of yesterday were read and the vote being tabulated, showed 98 votes for Turpie, and 50 votes for Fairbanks. Mr. Turpie having received a majority of the votes cast was declared duly elected a Senator from Indiana for a period of six years, commencing on the 4th day of March, 1893.

There was important legislation in both Houses. A bill passed the House practically legalizing labor unions, and it did so without provoking debate. This provides that any employer discharging an employe because he is a member of a labor organization or refusing to employ him for the same reason, shall be subjected to a fine of $100 and imprisonment in the County Jail for six months.

The Senate passed the bill making telegraph companies responsible for damages both to the sender and the receiver in case of negligence in delivering a message.

Many new bills were introduced in both Houses during the day, among them one in the Senate appropriating $50,000 in aid of the National G. A. R. Encampment to be held in Indianapolis in September next.

Both Houses adjourned until 10 o'clock Thursday, owing to the death of Ex-President Hayes.

IN the House, Thursday, a bill enabling the City Council of Indianapolis to vote an appropriation of $75,000 for the entertainment of the National Encampment of the Grand Army passed with only two votes against it.

The Committee on Agriculture reported in favor of the adoption of the Fippen bill providing for the taxation of foreign money loaned in the State on farm mortgages. The report was adopted.

The committee recommended the passage of the Montroux bill providing penalties for fraudulent nursery agents. Report adopted. The committee reported in favor of killing four dog bills, and the report was adopted. The Committee on Temperance reported in favor of the passage of the Grossart bill requiring persons taking out a Government liquor license to take out also State, county, and city licenses. The bill is aimed at houses of ill-fame and gambling-houses, and is demanded by the saloon-keepers of the State. The report was adopted.

IN the Senate the roll of Senators was called for bills on second reading and a number of the measures were passed to engrossment. The most important one was that by Senator McLean, which proposes to restore to the Governor the power to appoint members of Boards of Directors and Trustees, of which Governor Hovey was deprived. The bill was made the special order of next Tuesday at 2 o'clock.

The Senate Committee on World's Fair applied a stuffed club to the proposed junket of the whole Indiana Legislature to Chicago to see the World's Fair buildings. The committee reporting upon the invitation extended recommended that it be accepted by the Standing Committee on World's Fair, but that it was inadvisable and unnecessary for the whole Legislature to go. The report was adopted.

The subject of fees and salaries received a large share of attention in the Senate Friday. The discussion was precipitated by reports from the Fee and Salary Committee upon a number of bills, all of which were recommended for indefinite postponement.

The special committee to whom the matter was referred, have prepared a bill redistricting the State for judicial purposes. The number of districts by this measure has been reduced from fifty-four to forty-four, and the districts have been as nearly equalized as possible with reference to the amount of business done. It is claimed for the bill that it will save ten Circuit Judges and ten Prosecutors, whose salaries would cost the State $80,000.

Senator Loveland presented a petition, with nearly 12,000 signatures, asking such amendment to the election law as will permit all political parties representatives on Election Boards.

In the House, Mr. Deery of the Labor Committee, reported favorably upon Mr. Suchauck's bill for the protection of Union labels, and the report was adopted. The committee favored the Wilson bill to shorten the hours of labor; also the killing of the Hench and Thornton bills to prevent the discharge of employes for membership in labor organizations, a similar measure having already passed the House.

Mr. Ader's bill empowering the State Board of Agriculture to hold 240 acres of land got through by the skin of its teeth. The bill passed by a vote of 51 to 38.

Two reports come from the Committee on Ways and Means on Mr. Van Buskirk's bill to appropriate $3,000 to mark the position of Indiana troops at Gettysburg. The majority report, presented by Mr. Cullop, was for killing the bill. The minority report, presented by Mr. Hench, favored the passage of the bill after giving the House an opportunity to amend it. The majority report was adopted and the bill killed.

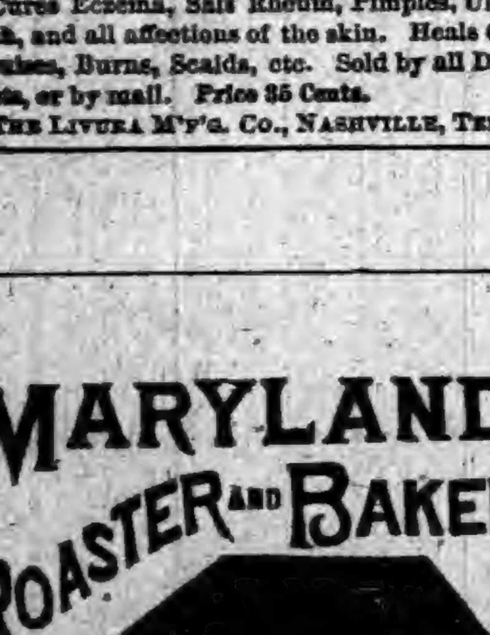
ROASTER AND BAKER



FOR MEATS, FOWL, FISH, ETC., AND FOR BAKING BREAD, CAKES AND PUDDINGS.

BEST SIMPLEST AND CHEAPEST

THE STEAM produced by the process of cooking cannot escape, is absorbed by the article in the roaster, and acts as a basting. There is no evaporation, no drying up or burning, hence no shrinkage or loss of weight, and all the flavor and nutritious qualities of the food are retained. Tough meats are made tender, and any article roasted or baked will be sweeter, healthier and more digestible. Put the food in the roaster, place the roaster in a well heated oven; the roaster will do the cooking. It requires no attention. Can only be bought from dealers, the trade supplied by:

CAPTAIN TREMAIN'S WIFE.

A Thrilling Story of the Days of the American Revolution.

BY MARTHA J. LAMB.

General Washington was at that moment presiding over a council of officers and committees assembled to discuss burning questions. The British were in the harbor, preparing for action. Tories were enlisting secretly, sworn to hostile acts for co-operation with the enemy. It was discovered that they were to blow up the magazines, spike the guns, and massacre Washington and his officers. A terrible plot was partially unfolded. Governor Tryon, from his safe retreat on shipboard, was offering bounties, through agents on shore, to such as would engage in the conspiracy. Some of Washington's own servants had been tampered with. A private meeting had been surprised the evening before, and broken up in great confusion—its leaders narrowly escaping death by hanging, among whom was Harry Shipton, son of the eminent Col. Shipton, who, it was reported, was one of the most hot-headed and mischievous of them all. This young man disappeared miraculously, and a large price had been offered for his capture. He was considered the most dangerous, as he had a brother and a brother-in-law in Washington's army, and was thus in a position to obtain news for the enemy that would ruin the American cause. Some one inquired the whereabouts of the father, Col. Shipton, and two or three expressed the opinion that he was safe somewhere under British colors. The council adjourned until next morning, and as the gentlemen before parting were engaged in excited conversation an aid brought a card to Gen. Washington with these words written on it:

"Mrs. Tremain, the wife of Lieutenant Roland Tremain, wishes to speak to General Washington concerning a permit to join her husband at his post."

The General consulted one of the officers who stood near him and learned the name of the regiment in which Tremain was enrolled, and furthermore, that Mrs. Tremain was the daughter of Colonel Shipton. Then he went to the sitting-room to greet her. She was standing by the window, but turned at the sound of his step and met him in such a self-contained and graceful manner that he was curiously embarrassed. He had not expected to encounter a vision of loveliness, and stammered in reply to her direct and urgent request.

"Do you know where your husband is at present stationed?" he asked.

"I believe he is doing guard duty on Long Island, but I have no advices as to the exact locality."

"Are you aware, madam, that the entire army is under orders to be prepared for instant action? We are in no condition to protect the residents remaining in the city, much less to send a woman to the front. Troops are changing their positions hourly; while you would be on your tiresome journey to one point your husband might be ordered miles away in the exigencies of battle." He spoke kindly and considerately, but his few words were like the stones in a solid wall obstructing her hopes.

"I see your point, sir," she calmly replied. "I did not suppose the collision was so imminent. I thank you for your courtesy."

She bowed and moved quickly through the door and, joined by Ursula, tripped down the steps and along the dusty road.

"I spects you got no shatisfaction, missus, by de way you runs," said the maid presently, quite out of breath.

"Oh, am I going too fast? I was wondering whereabouts the British mean to land."

"Bress your preshus heart, missus, I spects da will come a marchin' up and down eberywhere in dare bloody red coats, and de rest ob dem will circumbent de country wid dare ships."

The baby had done more energetic crying in the hour of its mother's absence on this fruitless errand than ever before since it first saw the light, and Edith was too much absorbed the rest of the afternoon in quieting and caressing it to nurse her disappointment. She feared the child was sick and was comforted only when it seemed to sleep as usual. The servants had abundant facilities for making her comfortable, small and primitive as were their accommodations, and Hulda, the old family cook, placed a delicious supper before her. These trustworthy negroes had buried a quantity of the Shipton silverware, jewels, and money in the earth under and about the hut, and Edith made some whispered inquiries concerning the absolute secrecy with which the work has been conducted. She laughed a little over the clumsy bed prepared for her, but was too tired to care much for anything but the rest it afforded. She might have been better entertained by some of her friends in town, but her husband's family, the Tremains, had vacated their house and gone to Albany, and others were on the wing. Ursula told her "everybody was goin crazy and movin'." She could not for some time to come return to her parents, because she knew they would leave the farm house as soon as Harry reached them, and it was uncertain to what locality they would fly. She, therefore, concluded to content herself until further developments.

She spent the few following days in playing with the baby and sleeping. All was quiet as the Sabbath in a secluded place. Ursula tramped to the city one morning with a basket of fruit to sell. Edith was afraid to let her go without some apparent valid reason, and she succeeded in talking a few moments with Charlie Shipton, and brought home a letter he had in charge from Lieutenant Tremain. But the maid was horrified with what she had accidentally seen near the Bowery road that Edith was a long time in getting from her a coherent account of it. She almost went into fits in telling her mistress. She said a thousand men were being hung all along the roads to scare the British. Then she modified her statements under Edith's cross-questioning, until the number of victims was reduced nine hundred and ninety-nine. One man was actually hung about 10 o'clock that morning, in the presence of not less than 20,000 persons. It was one of General Washington's body guard—an Irishman who had deserted from the British army. He had been detected and arrested, then speedily tried by a court martial and found guilty of "mutiny, sedition, and treachery." It was believed that he was in the pay of the British to murder General Washington, and he was promptly executed.

The information in the letters to Edith from her husband and brother convinced her that she had acted wisely in remaining in the woods with the servants. She learned that the city records and money and papers belonging to the provincial Congress had been secretly conveyed to places of safety up the Hudson; that Washington had advised the New York Congress to remove all women, children and infirm persons at once from the city, as its streets must soon be the scene of a bloody conflict; and they admonished her that her only security would be in hiding, lest she be called upon to deliver up her brother Harry to the hangman.

It was not a cheerful situation. Edith, however, was young and brave, and she did not presume that she was in any personal danger. The days slipped by one after another until the memorable afternoon of the 12th of July. Dinner had been served later than usual that day, as Hulda, in pursuit of some chickens in the morning, had been hindered at a farmyard through the absence of the farmer. The table had now been cleared, and Ursula had placed the baby in a curious swing she had contrived from the branches of a tree and was rocking it to slumber, while Edith, lolling on the grass in the shade nearby, was reading an interesting book. All at once the ground trembled and guns were heard in the direction of the city. Edith sprang to her feet and stood in the attitude of listening—cannons were indeed booming with ferocious rapidity.

"It do seem as if de day ob judgment am begun," cried Ursula.

Edith hurried to an opening among the trees, where she had a clear view of the river to the bay, and what she saw was two large ships sailing proudly by the helpless city, firing guns into the air in reply to the batteries on shore, which had been opened upon them. These ships came up the river with the British flag flying, and when nearly abreast of where she stood threw out their anchors. An officer in full uniform was seen upon the deck of the larger of the two vessels directing some sailors who were lowering a boat, and then he followed them into it and came toward the shore.

Ursula was terror stricken and, seizing her mistress, almost forced her into the hut, while the other women insisted she must hide in the cellar.

"Nobody is going to harm me," declared Edith; "what are you afraid of?" And she resolutely remained standing in the doorway. Ursula, with her teeth chattering, picked up the baby and marched up and down like a sentinel.

In a few moments there was a rustle among the brushwood and a handsome, manly figure, in red and gold and lace, with a jeweled sword at his side, approached with a quick step, and all Ursula's heroic resolves to defend her mistress with her latest breath were scattered to the winds, as she looked up into his face! Edith stepped forward and grasped his hand with her cheeks aglow, but the next instant the bright color faded into a death pallor.

"I am the bearer, Mrs. Tremain, of bad news. This message from your husband will explain." And placing a letter in her hands he turned away as if unwilling to witness her distress.

"Oh, sir," she cried, "tell me if this be true. He says he is fatally wounded and a prisoner."

"It is only too true. He is in our hospital ship with good surgeons in attendance, who fear that he cannot live throught the night. He begs to be permitted to see his wife and child, and I am here, madam, to take you to his bedside without delay.

Ursula tugged at her arm, and drew her aside, and whispered a few words in her ear.

"Hush!" she said with decision. "I shall go. Make the baby and yourself ready once." Then addressing her visitor: "You saved my life and that of my brother, Harry, from an ignominious death by violence. How can I help but trust you. May I ask your name?"

"Lord Dunbarton of his Majesty's service," was the reply. "It is desirable that you lose no time in preparations; the sun is going down, and it would be unsafe to try to embark in the darkness from these rough shores."

Edith rushed into the hut, and the officer in waiting heard a mixture of sobs and prayers, and above it a clear directing voice. Ere long the party were on the way to the shore—Edith in the lead, Lord Dunbarton, with the baby on his shoulder, following, and Ursula, with a bundle of necessaries, running to overtake them. Two barges, well manned, caught Edith's eye, and, responding to her swift, anxious look of inquiry, Lord Dunbarton said:

"I am sorry I cannot accompany you down the bay. I hold at present a command of responsibility that forbids it, but you are a courageous woman, and I have detailed some of the best sailors for the expedition. Arrangements are made for your reception at the hospital, and you will be well cared for until you wish to return here. The sailors will await your orders." And he slipped a paper into her hand which was to be her safe conduct in any emergency.

To Edith the hours seemed ages on that weird night voyage in an open barge, obliged to creep cautiously along near the Jersey coast to the bay, in order to escape possible observation from New York, which was astir from center to circumference. The nautical movement of the afternoon had caused the wildest excitement, as it was evidently for a purpose. Ursula and the baby found the cushions and blankets that had been provided most welcome, and slept soundly in the bottom of the barge; but Edith's eyes never closed. When she saw the lights from the British fleet snugly anchored in a safe haven between Sandy Hook and Staten Island, she thought of the thirty-seven men-of-war and 400 transports she had been told were stationed there, and of what Roland had written her about there not being enough muskets in his regiment to go around. She nearly fainted while being lifted to the deck of the hospital ship, but she was under perfect self-control on reaching the couch on which her young, boyish-looking soldier husband was breathing out his life.

Roland Tremain rallied under the sunlight of the actual presence of his beautiful wife, coming as it did into the blackness, where he had seen no ray of hope. He told her how he fell in an honorable warfare, pierced with three bullets. He was defending a post on the shore of Long Island, which was attacked by a party of British marines. He was supposed dead, and his command was captured. One of his companions obtained an interview, however, with Lord Dunbarton, and begged that boat's crew might be sent to search for him, and finding him alive they brought him to this hospital, where he had received the kindest treatment. Lord Dunbarton came to see him in person and promised to find and bring his wife and child to him if possible, although the moving of ships at that juncture might precipitate a battle prematurely. Then Edith knew what General Washington never understood to his dying day, the reason why those vessels sailed past the Battery on that summer's afternoon and anchored off the shore of the Hudson where they did.

Roland Tremain lingered three days and then the end came, peacefully and painlessly. Edith closed his eyes and kissed his fair forehead, with her hand entwined among the curls of his rich brown hair. The surgeon led her away and the burial rites were in exact accordance with her expressed wishes, after which she found the barge in readiness and the silent oarsman conducted her in the night time for safety's sake to the haven from which she had so recently embarked. She went to bed with her sweet, sad memories, from which she did not rise again for many weeks. The strain upon her nervous system, together with a cold contracted in the night exposure, brought on a slow fever and many days of delirium. Ursula found their old family physician still in the city and he visited her daily. She was sitting up for the first time on the day of the evacuation of New York by Washington's army, but was unable to join the throng of refugees that were attached to it, as she would have done if in health. The British army came into the city, but the little hut in the woods was so far from town that the fact gave her no disquietude. Ursula found it just as easy to obtain supplies as formerly, and asked in much bewilderment:

"Say, missus, w'at's de worst, bein' ruled by a clowned head ober de water, or by a clown ob heads on dis side?"

* * * * * *

A year and a half has passed. It is winter now, and Edith is quartered in the house of a relative in lower Broadway. The faithful Ursula is dressing a pretty little maiden of two years, while the mother is reading a letter in a quaint kind of cipher just received from a lady friend in Valley Forge. It is in answer to one Edith has written, in which she described the condition of New York and declared herself "heartily sick of British tyranny." She is interrupted by the entrance of a servant with a card, upon which, without changing color, she reads the name "Lord Dunbarton." She has never seen him since the day he sent her to Roland Tremain, and although she made inquiries after her recovery from the long illness, wishing to acknowledge his generous kindness, she could only learn that he had left the country.

She meets and greets him presently with the dignity of a princess and introduces Miss Bessie, who has accompanied her to the parlor, and who is quite agreeable to being placed upon his knee. He explains to Edith in a few words his reasons for resigning his commission and returning to England—he could not be concerned in a war where brother was fighting against brother. Whatever the result of such a conflict, domestic ties must be severed on every hand.

The interview was short, but he came again, and then again, and again. He was only in New York on a visit, and the ship would sail in a few days. One morning he called early, and as Edith entered the parlor to welcome him he made his errand known without any circumlocution:

"I am wholly and altogether in love with you, and have been ever since I found you at the bottom of the Hudson River struggling for life; will you marry me and let me take you and Bessie with me to my home across the seas? Without you I do not care for existence."

Edith was not wholly unprepared for this, but it had come in an unexpected fashion, and with face suffused and in a voice betraying intense emotion, she stammered:

"Do you mean—mean—now?"

"Yes, I mean now, to-day or to-morrow, as you like. The ship sails the day after in the morning; but I have your answer, my darling." And as she reached her two hands up toward him he caught her in his arms.

In the autumn of 1782 a New York lady writing from England mentions a visit made to the country seat of Lord and Lady Dunbarton, and after describing the perfections of their home and the charms of their hospitalities, says that "Lady Dunbarton is growing more and more beautiful every day, and was the best dressed of anyone at the late drawing-room and ball on the Queen's birthday.

The Joshua of the Sun.

In America corn is king, and over all the land it stalks with golden plume, arrogant and remorseless. Cotton, wheat, oats, rye, mines of the precious metals, products of the dairy are but satellites at the court of the mighty potentate of the fields.

What is the great American hog but bone and sinew and melting adipose furnished of its superabundance by that plutocrat of American products, the many-eared and yellow-plumed maize. When we market 24,000,000 hogs we but confess the power of King Corn, for hogs are corn incarnate. Corn is the one American sovereign. It was the gift of the copper-colored aborigine to the pale face, who now contemplates an annual production of two billion bushels a year of the value approximately of a round thousand millions of dollars. But if corn thus giveth abundantly of its riches it is a tyrant in its sway over the subjects who profit by its royal largess. Like Joshua corn commands the sun, in whose fiercest rays it revels and waxes fat. When it waves its silken tassel it demands that all the stokers of the great central planetary furnace shall bend and sweat and groan at their weary task. If fainting humanity, permitted for a brief span of years to walk the earth sacred to King Corn, offers up wailing petition for relief the celestial answer is that corn has turned on the heat and that until it shall be the royal pleasure of this great American potentate to mitigate the blast mankind has no resource but to take off its flesh and seat itself in its bones, the victim of corn's great influence with old Sol.

And so it is that to enjoy corn's benefits suffering humanity must accept corn weather. That corn may be invigorated and freshened and advanced beyond the possibility of Jack Frost's enmity man must wilt. That corn may spring up to joyous maturity and scatter blessings o'er a smiling land man must hide his head under a cabbage leaf. Man in the majestic presence of the sun-compelling corn is not near so happy as the yellow pumpkin flourishing in the shade of the springing stalks.

But there are compensations. The hymn that attributes moods to omnipotence declares that behind the frowning providence the smiling face is hid. If there is corn weather in dog days there is harvest weather in golden October. When man distributes that billion of corn dollars he forgets how imperiously corn directed the upward movement of the thermometer. There is cash in corn.

Hail, then, to King Corn! He is at times a fearsome master, but what a beneficent subject he is. If his is a torrid it is also a Midas touch.

DIED IN FLAMING OIL.

TERRIBLE RAILWAY ACCIDENT NEAR ALTON, ILL.

Collision of a Passenger with an Oil Train Causes a Fire and an Explosion—Spectators Standing Near the Scene When the Tank Cars Go Up.

A Scene of Horror.

Ten persons were killed outright, five more have since died, and nearly a hundred were fatally or seriously injured in a railroad wreck at Alton (Ill.) Junction and the series of explosions that followed it. The fast through train known as the Southwestern limited on the Big Four Road collided with a train of loaded oil tank cars at the junction with the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy. The engineer of the passenger, Webb Ross, of Mattoon, Ill., did not see the danger until it was too late to avert the accident, but courageously threw on the air brakes, stuck to his engine and was killed in the crash. Fireman White jumped just before the engine struck and saved his life. The other losses of life and injuries came with the explosion of the oil tanks that followed soon after the other disaster.

The total list of dead is as follows:

WEBB ROSS, Mattoon, Ill.
HIRAM CORNELIUS, Iowa.
EDWARD MILLER, Alton Junction.
TWO UNIDENTIFIED MEN.
WILLIAM SHATTUCK, Upper Alton, Ill
HENRY PENNING, Wann, Ill.
WILLIE McCARTHY, Alton, Ill.
JOHN LOCKE, Alton.
EDWARD MAUHIN, Alton.
DANIEL HABERS, Alton Junction.
WILLIAM MANTZ, Fosterburg, Ill.
CHARLES UTT, Alton.
W. H. MILLER, Alton.
CHARLES PARRIS, Alton.
JOHN WILKINSON, Alton.

Of these all but the first six died of their injuries after being removed to the hospital at Alton, except Utt, W. H. Miller and Mantz, whose dead bodies were found near the scene of the wreck the following morning.

The fatally injured are:

OTTO HAGWAN, Alton.
JOHN FRED, Alton.
JOSEPH HERMANN, Alton.
HENRY PILGRIM, Alton.
JOHN LUTTRELL, Alton.
WILLIAM B. RICHARDSON, Alton.
DAVID RICHARDSON, Alton.
A. T. FRAZER, St. Louis.
FRANK BARTH, Brantford, Ont.
FRANK SCULLIN, Alton.
JOHN BURKE, Alton.
WILLIAM MILLER, Alton Junction.
MURRAY, Upper Alton.
ROTOFF, Upper Alton.

How the Disaster Came.

The accident is the most disastrous known in railroad history in the part of the country in which it occurred. An open switch was the original cause of the great sacrifice of life. The limited passenger ran through it, crashed into the freight and the wreck caught fire. In an incredibly short time the freight train was a mass of flames. Fear of an explosion from the oil tanks prevented any attempt to save them. The wrecking train came up from East St. Louis, but could do little or nothing. Half a dozen switch engines were run out from Alton to clear the yards. Traffic on both the Big Four and Burlington was entirely suspended and a special train was made up on the Chicago and Alton to carry the belated passengers to St Louis.

A few minutes past 12 o'clock there was a light explosion of one tank which scattered the debris on all sides, setting fire to the stock yards inclosures. This one blow-up caused the impression that the danger from explosions was passed, and the throng of by-standers rushed in to save the stock yards from destruction. A minute later there was a deafening report that shook the earth for half a minute and spread a sheet of seething, burning oil in all directions. For those within the circle of a hundred yards there was no escape. Some of them were struck dead by pieces of flying iron and scores of them were knocked flat on the ground. Their clothing caught fire from the spreading flames and was burned from their bodies. Those who could rise did so and ran hither and tither making frantic appeals for help. Some of the sufferers ran to the nearest water and plunged in. Others ran through the fields, and a few of them were still missing at last reports.

An utter panic followed for a time after the explosion, and those who were not seriously or fatally injured could do nothing to help the less fortunate. When they finally recovered their senses they set about with a will to relieve the sufferings of the men whose flesh was cooking on their bones. Two barrels of linseed oil were taken from a grocery store and applied to the wounds by several physicians who were summoned to the scene. Every house in the little village was turned into a temporary hospital, and every doctor in Alton and its vicinity was summoned.

Ross Was Boiled to Death.

The burns and bruises of all of the injured were treated as fast as the physicians could attend to them and the bodies of those who were buried in the wreck were extricated as fast as they could be reached in safety. Webb Ross, the brave engineer who lost his life, leaves a widow and six children at Mattoon. The fireman jumped from the cab just in time to save himself from the crash. The crew of the freight train also saw the passenger engine in time to escape from the caboose, which was driven to splinters. Ross' body when found was pinned in between the boiler and tender and covered with oil from the burning tank. He was literally boiled to death.

The Southwestern limited, which crashed into the freight, was running out of St. Louis about thirteen minutes behind time. To make this up she was going at a speed of nearly fifty miles an hour. The passengers were fearfully jolted when the collision came, but none of them were seriously hurt. The force of the collision split two oil barrels wide open and the oil immediately caught fire. An eye witness says that the flames shot fully fifty feet in the air. The passenger engine, the freight caboose and several of the cars were completely destroyed. The passenger cars, however, were beyond the reach of the flames, and were not injured except by the wrecking they received in the collision. No accurate estimate of the financial loss can now be given, but it will doubtless greatly exceed $100,000.

HE CALLS IT ROBBERY.

Conduct of Some Labor Organizations Denounced by Judge Baker.

A number of Lake Erie and Western strikers were before Judge Baker, of the United States District Court, at Indianapolis, charged with contempt, in having interfered with the movement of trains after the Court had enjoined them from such action. Four of the men pleaded guilty, some of the others stood trial, and others have not yet been brought in. "In this case," said the Court to the prisoners, "the evidence shows that a number of men belong to a secret labor organization whose aim is by force, violence and terrorism to compel employers to submit their business, their property, their means of livelihood to the arbitrary demands of the association. In their secret oath-bound assemblies they determine for themselves on what terms they will work for others. They refuse those who are not members of their association the opportunity to labor. Those who will not submit have no more option about carrying on their business than has the belated traveler when the highwayman presents a revolver. If they compel submission, it is robbery. These combinations are infinitely worse than isolated violations of the law, in that they teach general disregard and contempt of law. They teach the fantastic and monstrous doctrine that a man who is hired to labor, and is paid for his work, has some sort of equitable right in the property of his employer together with a right of perpetual employment. I want it to be understood, so far as this court is concerned, that such offenses will not be deemed trivial, and that the law cannot be violated with impunity by any combination of men. It ought to be blazed on the mind of every man who belongs to a labor organization that, while it is lawful and commendable to organize for legitimate and peaceful purposes, it is criminal to organize for the invasion of the rights of others to enjoy life, liberty and property."

NEBRASKA BANK FAILURE.

The State Treasurer Said to Be Involved to the Extent of $250,000.

At Lincoln, Neb., the startling announcement of the failure of the Capital National Bank was made late Sunday night, and with it came the announcement that the State Treasurer was caught in the crash in the sum of $250,000. This news spread rapidly and caused much excitement. The failure is a bad one. The deposits amount to about $625,000, and of this amount between $175,000 and $250,000 are State funds, for which the bond of the Treasurer will be liable. Cashier R. C. Outcalt stated that the assets would protect the depositors, but there is great doubt expressed as to the correctness of this statement. Bank Examiner Griffith demanded the books of the bank. He began examining them at once and soon discovered that something was wrong. A large sum of cash was missing, and the bank officials could not account for it. All they could say was that it had been stolen. The sum is said to reach $200,000.

A meeting of the bankers of the city was immediately held to discuss the situation. It was feared that the trouble would precipitate a run on some of the other banks, and one of the first things done was to make arrangements to prevent it. The Omaha banks were called on and they immediately responded by sending a representative on a special engine to assure the bankers there that every courtesy would be extended and that all needed assistance to meet any run that might take place would be forthcoming.

TOILERS AFTER THE CHINESE.

An Effort Making to Expel Them from the Principal Cities of Montana.

Efforts which promise a success are making in Montana cities to drive out the Chinese. About a year ago labor organizations of Butte, Anaconda and Missoula waged war against employment of Chinese and threats of boycott were made against citizens employing them in any capacity or patronizing Chinese laundries or restaurants. Since then the fight has been kept up by labor unions. Two weeks ago, in Anaconda, a citizens' mass meeting was held, with the result that a committee of citizens, not members of labor unions, was appointed to help drive out the Chinese. Already all but one Chinese restaurant have been closed and half the laundrymen have gone out of business and are leaving town. In Butte the same policy is being pursued with telling results, and Chinese are leaving by dozens. No violence is resorted to, but the majority of citizens have determined that the Chinese must go. Men who are known to patronize laundries or restaurants will not be employed in city works nor by many of the large mining and mercantile companies. Since the movement of Butte and Anaconda has decreased one-third.

ENCOURAGING FOR SILVER MEN

Republican Senators Will Not Push a Repeal Bill This Session.

A Washington special says: The postponed Republican Senatorial caucus which was called to meet at the residence of Senator Sherman was somewhat disappointing to the Senators who had been instrumental in having it called, because it failed to secure the attendance of a quorum. Consequently the gathering partook rather of the nature of an informal conference than of a representative caucus. If there had been any serious intention of pressing the silver repeal question to an issue that intention speedily disappeared under the discouraging circumstances, and after a brief expression of individual views on the subject it became evident that no agreement could be reached that could by any possibility secure the adhesion of all or nearly all the Republican Senators. So the subject was dropped by mutual consent, and it was made apparent that the question of silver repeal will not be made a party issue during the remainder of this Congress.

CANADA'S FOREIGN TRADE.

Statement of Her Commerce for the Past Fiscal Year.

The annual statement of the trade and navigation of the Dominion for the fiscal year ended June 30 has been issued. Compared with the previous year, which was the best business period in a decade, the exports show an increase of 15.71 per cent., and the imports actually taken for consumption an increase of 3 per cent. Based upon these figures, the aggregated trade increased 9 per cent. over the previous year, while if the total imports and exports be taken into account the result shows an increase from $218,384,934 in 1891 of 241,369,433, equivalent to a growth to $22,984,509. The exports and imports were $113,963,375 and $116,778,741, respectively. Exports to the United States last year declined $2,150,668, the volume being $38,988,027. Exports to England increased $15,625,000. The imports from the United States were $53,137,572.

Will Interest Live Stock Men.

The Senate Committee on Commerce, through Mr. Vest, Saturday, reported favorably upon a bill creating a new bureau in the Department of Agriculture. The bill, which was introduced at the beginning of the present session, provides for a "Bureau of Information and Statistics Concerning Live Stock." Under its provisions the Secretary of Agriculture is directed to establish stations for the collection of statistics and information in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, Colorado, Indian Territory, Kansas, Wyoming, Nebraska, South Dakota, North Dakota, Montana, Minnesota, Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, Wisconsin, Illinois, Kentucky, Tennessee, Michigan, and Indiana regarding the amount of live stock to be shipped, the production, and other advantages of locality in each State to be considered in establishing stations.

THE latest theorist whose yearning eye turns toward the north pole proposes to reach the spot by following the wild animals of the Arctic back to Symsonia. An explorer with a firm grasp upon the tail of a polar bear, urging the animal to greater speed, would be something new to science, and doubtless, in the end, would add much to the happiness of the carnivorous bear.

BISHOP DWENGER, of Ft. Wayne, died Tuesday. He was a man eminent in his profession, and well known over the country.

L. Q. C. LAMAR died Tuesday at his home in Macon, Georgia. He was Cleveland's secretary of the Interior, and since then had been one of the supreme justices of the United States.

SENATOR TURPIE was last week, elected U. S. Senator for the second time, receiving the entire 98 democratic votes of the two houses. This was a proper tribute to one of the brightest members of that august body.

THE national Encampment of the G. A. R. meet this year in Indianapolis, and the city has volunteered to donate $75,000 to help defray the expenses. Private citizens will also give a large sum. The legislature will be asked to vote an appropriation of not less than $25,000. This should be done by all means. It costs from $100,000 to $150,000 to hold a national encampment, and this sum has been given in other places. Indiana is able and will keep her place with the best. Let us not be niggardly but vote a reasonable and liberal sum. We believe the legislature will do it.

Obituary.

Aldora Pulver was born near Auburn, May 24, 1867, and died at her home in Garrett Jan 9, 1893, aged 25 years, 7 months, 15 days. She was a member of the Garrett M E. church, a devout christian a faithful wife, a patient mother and was dearly loved by all who knew her. Although her sufferings were intense, she bore them patiently and was made to realize "not my will but thy will be done" and passed away resting in the arms of her blessed Master. She leaves a husband and two children to mourn her departure.

Above her couch we bent and prayed,
In the dimly lighted room;
As the bright hues of woman's life
Sank slowly into gloom.
At last the fluttering pulse was still,
The death chill through her clay
Stole slowly; and as eve came on
Our sister had passed away.
The form remained, but there was now
No soul our love to share,
No warm, responding lips to kiss,
For Aldora was not there.
"Farewell," with grieving hearts we said,
"Sister of our love and care;"
And then we ceased to kiss those lips,
For our sister was not there.

A Visit to Butler in 1854.

In company of an esteemed school mate, we left our home in Eastern Ohio, on the 12th of Dec. 1854 to make our maiden trip "out west". We took the cars at a little town called Bristol, running to Orville, where we changed to the Ohio & Indiana railroad, now known as the Pennsylvania. We passed the towns of Wooster, Loudonville, Crestline, Forest, section 10, now Bucyrus, where we crossed the canal, running between two high artifical banks, the water being abou four feet higher than the surrounding country, which between Forrest and Ft. Wayne seemed to be almost entirely under water. Mansfield, Lima and Van-Wert were small places. We reached Ft. Wayne, a small straggling place, yet the metropolis of a wide territory, but thinly settled. Here our journey by rail ceased, as this was the most western point reached by rail. Considerale excitement prevailed here on account of a recent murder. The murderer was afterward convicted and executed we believe. We soon found a hotel, where we were fairly well entertained, our bill in the morning for supper, bed and breakfast was 62½ cents. We spent a little time in the morning looking over the embryo city, then started for Auburn on foot. Crossing the river we saw a sign board with a finger pointing northward, read "Cold Water 50 miles." The first strange sight to us as we left the city was a flat open country without a hill in sight. We trudged along reaching Huntertown, about noon, where our dinner, a very good one, cost us 12½ cts. We reached Auburn about seven p. m. having traveled several weary miles by moonlight. We found a hotel on the west side of the street where we were well entertained, and being very tired enjoyed an excellent night's rest. Auburn was made up of a scattered number of small frame buildings, not a brick building yet had been erected. The roads were quite muddy, rendering pedestrianism any thing but pleasant. The next morning, the ground was frozen, and we took the now well known Butler road, walking twelve miles to where our friends then lived on the farm owned by Daniel Fry. A couple of small hills here relieved the monotony, and made the place seem a little like home. We think we passed but one frame house between Auburn and our destination. The following day in company with our friends we first saw Norristown as it was then called in honor of Charles Norris its founder. There were perhaps a dozen houses mostly frame, with a few built of logs, the dense forest coming up within a stone's throw of the main corners. There were two or three business houses, one or two saloons then called "groceries". The timber had been cut out of the right of way for the Northern Indiana railroad, the stumps seemed to almost cover the ground The town with the near prospect of a rail road was somewhat lively. An old log school house occupied a point just north across the street from the new M. E. church. It was quite a large building of its kind and stood a little off the road, with its broadside facing the road, a single log was removed and a long narrow window filled in its place. The country seemed very new to me and many of the houses almost all log were often in the center of a few acres of girdled timber. Wheat was scarce, and corn bread appeared on the table of nearly all whom we visited. A deep snow fell soon after our arrival, and prevented us from attempting any work and homesickness also furnished us an excuse, so our friends took us to Ft. Wayne on a load of corn, on a very cold day and we hastily bid adieu to Indiana, which soon after became my adopted state, and where all the best years of my life have been spent, contrary to any preconceived intention.

Helmer Postoffice.

The postoffice at Custer, is to be discontinued, and moved over into Steuben county, on the new Wabash road, about four miles west of Hudson, at the Station called Helmer. All our patrons now getting their COURIER at Custer, will confer a favor on us by sending a postal card, or by other means to let us know where we are to send the COURIER. Most of them, we suppose will want it sent to Helmer, but a few may find it more convenient at Fairfield or Hudson. Please let us know about the matter.

Obituary.

Rebecca Bair was born the 22nd day of December, 1821, the daughter of Daniel and Mary Bair. I was baptized an infant. I thank my parents and the Lord for my baptism! Oh, what a glorious thing it is to have religion! I just feel as if I could fly to heaven. I am ready and willing to go, when the Lord calls for me. In 1840 I was confirmed to the old school Lutheran church, Pennsylvania and Ohio synod; my parents belong to that church I was four years old when my mother was called to her sweet home; I was thirteen years old when my father was called to his home. What was I left to do, no father, no mother, young as I was and no home? I called for help. The Lord heard my prayer; He guided me and found a home for me. I lived with two old people ten years; worked for five shillings a week, for ten long years Then I thought I was rich. Oh, what the girls had to do when I was young. If I think of it I can't express myself. I have only home education I can read Dutch and English and write some. The Lord always helped me for a home. I lived in Stark county, Ohio, till 1859, then I was married to Henry A. Shull on the 7th day of April; moved with him to DeKalb county, Indiana, where I reside now. He had five children, three living, that I helped to raise, now one living The Lord blessed us with nine children, six boys and three girls; three boys living, and one girl. I had twins twice. My twins and my dear Mary are in Heaven. My days are but a few to meet them in Heaven. Daniel, my oldest child lives in Washington Territory on Scow Bay. Josiah and Rebecca live in Phillipsburg, Montana. Oh, my dear children! I hope the Lord will spare my life that I can see my children once more in this world —if not in this world, we will meet in heaven. I was out to Scow Bay in 1886 to see my son Daniel and in Montana to see my son Josiah. Rebecca went with me and staid to teach school. Then she got married and lives out there. It was the Lord's will, my children are called far, far away in the far west, all but my son Peter. Oh, what a glorious thing to meet in heaven! I have eight grandchildren and four step-grandchildren I have another little grand daughter in Port Townsend, Washington, makes nine grandchildren, six girls and three boys. My health is poor, my days are but a few. When I die I want a Presbyterian minister to bury me. Good by, brethren and sisters in the church, and all the friends and neighbors, good by. Lord bless us all. Amen! Amen! Good by, children and dear husband, so good by. The Lord bless you all. Amen.

The farm dwelling of Mrs. Ella Rose, of Franklin township, was destroyed by fire on Tuesday forenoon, of last week. It was insured in the Ohio Farmers Insurance Co., and the loss was adjusted in six days. Mrs. Rose is very thankful to the company for its prompt and fair adjustment, and payment of her claim in full, in less than a week from the time of the fire.

The Auburn Mills have fully established themselves here in the manufacture of the now already famous "Lilly" brand of flour. The story has long been told among the management of the bread departments in the domestic circles in and about Auburn, of the specially good qualities of this particular brand of flour, and Mr. Hilt the present proprietor, is endeavoring by his skill as a miller, and by his reputation as a conscientious business man to keep this favored production up to the standard. It is surely a joy to those who are held responsible for the good or bad bread we are to eat, to know that they can get something reliable.

The Keeley Institute.

The Institute is now fairly at work, as they have some patients now taking the treatment, and are in correspondence with others who are expected to attend. The statement of their work and other information in circulars, are being sent out to all darts of the country, and they are also advertising liberally, as we see, by a number of our exchanges. All this will bring good results. Our people who have met the gentlemen in charge, are favorably impressed by them, and by their honerable and manly ways. They are evidently men of standing and business ability. Last Wednesday, the president of the company was here, Mr. Hoffman, of Akron, Ohio, a very conservative and evidently substantial business man. He and the gentlemen in charge here met, that evening, with our citizens, especially those who had subscribed to the fund raised by way of encouragement to the enterprise. At this meeting, all the matters of interest to the enterprise were talked over. Then a permanent organization was formed by our citizens. Of this, Dr. D. J. Swarts was made president, Geo. Lanning, secretary and C. C. Shaffer treasurer. An executive or controlling committee, was also appointed consisting of Dr. Swarts, T. H. Sprott, M. Boland, J. C. Henry and C. C. Shaffer. They have already selected two of the patients they are entitled to name, one for the drink habit and one for the opium habit. The others will be selected soon. The committee met again last evening.

The Fair Meeting.

At the meeting of the stockholders of the fair, Jan. 19, the following officers were elected for 1893:

Sylvester Kutzner, Pres.; E. F. Metcalf, Vice Pres.; J. J. VanAuken, Sec'y; Geo. L. Lanning, Treas.; and the following 20 persons were elected as the board of directors:

H. P. Strob, D. D. Metcalf, D. D Moody, W. H. McIntyre, M. C. Sheets, John C. Cramer, W. S. Dancer, M. S. Kutzner, W. H. Fair, A. Helmuth, Geo. Hoodlemire, Peter Grogg, Wm Ashleman, F. M. Teeters, S. G. Hoverstock, G. M. Showers, J. G Lawhead, H. N. Coffinberry, T. C. Rakestraw and J. A. Barns.

The reports of the secretary and treasurer were read and referred to an auditing committee, committee to report to the directors at their next meeting. The attendance was fair and a good degree of interest was manifested.

Boiler Exploded.

Last Saturday, Henry McIntyre had been to Nappanee to oversee his electric light plant at that place, but on his return here, received a dispatch that the boiler had just exploded, killing two of the men. The substance of what was learned later, was that Johnson, the man in charge, a brother of John Johnson of this place, was doing something that brought him on top of the boiler, and when it exploded, it thew him into the air, and he fell down into the space where the boiler had been, and his life was saved. The two men in front of the boiler were killed. Mr. McIntyre has had bad luck at that place. In the fall, the great standpipe of the water works burst and now comes this accident. It is believed there was a serious flaw in the boiler.

To The Public.

To the people of Auburn and the surrounding towns and country. In coming before you in the annual entertainment of the successive Junior classes of our High School, it was our aim from the first to secure the very best talent possible, never dreaming, however, that we should be able to secure such a superior combination of artists as the Musin Grand Concert Company. No one who ever heard "Ole Bull," the great violinist of his day, would have the memory of that event blotted out for many times the cost; for not only was he amply compensated by the bewitching music of his wonderful instrument, but he ever has the satisfaction of having heard the great Master of his day. Musin is a master, and in point of brilliancy and execution, he stands to-day without a rival.

Remember we are giving you the extremely rare opportunity of hearing a master, and a combination of artists of the highest order, and that your patronage is in the interest of the High School library and laboratory. In coming before you with such a company we shall surely feel deeply disappointed with anything but a full house.

Literary Note.

Forrest and stream, the sportsman's journal, enters upon its fortieth volume with the first number in January, and celebrates the occasion by donning a new dress of type and a handsome new title vignette. The publishers announce for 1893 a more generous use of illustrations, among which will be reproductions of the Forrest and Stream's prize amateur photographs.

Teachers' Examination.

The schools are all in session in the county, and no need of the usual teachers' examination this month. Hence there will be none and the day usually devoted to the examination will be given to arranging the work for the educational exhibit.

SOME little excitement has been caused by the announcement that one of our consuls in the East has been converted to the creed of Islam, and is about entering upon an active missionary campaign in this country in behalf of that picturesque belief. The spectacle of turbaned and gowned Moslems everywhere in our principal cities, preaching their doctrines, would certainly be curious. We must take care that the seductive side of Mohammedism is not too freely exposed, or it might become popular. It allows, for instance, a man to take as many wives as he can support! How would missionary teaching of that kind go down in this country?

THE difference between the French and American duel is well illustrated by the battle which took place near Fort Worth, Texas, between old man Hargraves and his two sons on one side and Harvey Spears, assisted by a friend, on the other. The meeting was by agreement, and shooting commenced as soon as the opposing parties came within range. One of the Hargraves boys was instantly killed at the first fire and the old man mortally wounded. The latter then lent his remaining son a revolver, with which he advanced on his foes through a shower of bullets and killed them both. The old man crawled to the two dead bodies, fired several shots into them for luck, and died with a genial smile on his face. There was no Clemenceau-Deroulede business in that encounter.

Rural Criticism.

Uncle Comfort Pettingill was a man whose opinions were considered well worth listening to by people of Bushby, and when he returned from a month's visit to his married daughter, who lived "daown b'low" in Boston, everybody was anxious to hear what he had to say about the city. "I want t' know, Comfort," said Mr. Augustus Fawcett, a near neighbor, who "dropped in" the night after Uncle Comfort returned, "I want t' know ef ye passed inter 'Gimp an' Hardtack's' shop, whilst ye was daown b'low?"

"Suttin, suttin — a number o' times," replied Mr. Pettingill.

"Well," said Mr. Fawcett, "I sh'd like t' know ef they didn't set up fer a dry goods store ten years or so back?" Or hev I got th' wrong name?"

"They called themselves a dry goods firm, an' do naow," said Uncle Comfort.

"Well, well," remarked Mr. Fawcett, "haow doos it happen they're advertisin' farmin' tools fer saie? Hes some r'lation died an' left 'em a lot on hand? I see their circ'lar in th' 'Farmers' Guide,' when it come las' night. I was pooty sure thet was th' place where niece Idylly got m' wife's dress-pattern, but m' wife, she said there must be some mistake somewher's."

"Ther' aint any mistake, I cal'late, Gus," replied the returned traveler. "Ye see, times hev changed sence you was t' Boston twenty-five years ago. Gimp an' Hardtack keeps everythin' ye ken think up, fr'm rubber boots t' painted furnitoor sets. It's 'nough t' make a man crazy t' step foot inter their place; an' it's full as big as Square Follet's pasture piece."

"I want ter know!" ejaculated Mr. Fawcett.

"Yes, full as big," reiterated Uncle Comfort.

There was a moment's pause, and then Mr. Pettingill from his seat in front of the fire reached forward, took up the tongs and turned the forestick over, giving it a whack which started up a bright blaze.

"It aint but a few years," he said, turning to his guest with the tongs still in his hand, "sence th' city folks was pokin' fun at th' kentry stores, on accaount o' their keepin' all kinds o' merchandise."

Mr. Fawcett nodded sagely, in acquiescent silence.

"I may be all off'n th' track," remarked Uncle Comfort, in a tone that belied his modest sentiments, "but it appears t' me as ef Gimp an' Hardtack was kinder copyin' after th' kentry stores, naowadays!"

And with that he replaced the tongs, and turned the conversation to the present state of the Bushby crops.

IN SPITE OF TARIFFS

PRICES DECLINE BECAUSE OF IMPROVEMENTS.

Some Facts Demonstrating that There Are Far More Potent Influences than the Tariff Governing the Prices of Commodities—Must Be No Delay.

Some Plain Facts.

In a financial article the New York Tribune states that "in a whole generation of continuous protective duties here and continuous free trade in Great Britain prices of American products have been reduced almost exactly as much, in spite of the addition of duties said to be intolerable to consumers, as prices have been reduced in Great Britain during the same time." This fact demonstrates that there are far more potent influences than the tariff in governing the prices of commodities—a truth which the protectionists obstinately refuse to recognize. In a well-known work Mr. David A. Wells, the eminent economist, has reviewed the causes that have produced the great revolution in trade, the results of which are recorded in statistics of prices.

Chief among these causes are inventions and improvements of labor-saving machinery, discoveries of new materials of manufacture, better organization of labor, and the cheapening and extension of means of transportation by land and sea. These mighty agencies for supplying the wants and increasing the comforts of mankind have overcome in great degree the obstructive methods of tariff-mongering legislation. It would be tedious to recount the labor-saving inventions and discoveries within this generation that have multiplied the products of the factory and field, and vastly cheapened their cost throughout the world in spite of jealous tariff restrictions upon trade.

In further comparing the statistics of prices, the Tribune finds that "greater cheapening of products has been realized by Americans than by the people of Germany;" and it concludes: "Though Germany has prospered greatly under protection, it has neither made such progress in industries as this country, nor realized as great a cheapening of products to consumers." In certain lines of industrial progress, notably in the application of chemical discoveries to manufactures, the Germans have not realized as cheap prices as have people of this country and of free-trade England. Germany has been subject to a corn law system (somewhat mitigated recently) which has much enhanced the cost of breadstuffs and provisions to her consuming millions. In Great Britain, on the other hand, these commodities are free of tax; while in this country the McKinley duties on them, for the sake of protection, are mere futilities. This is what serves to explain the statistical phenomenon in regard to Germany mentioned by the Tribune. It is not pretended that other commodities besides food supplies are dearer in Germany than elsewhere. Let the duties be taken off the bread and meat of the Germans, and the phenomenon would disappear.

For the rest, the fact remains that the tariff makes the cost of textile fabrics of nearly every description, of many manufactures of iron and steel, of earthenware and glassware, and of various other articles too numerous to mention, much greater in this country than in Great Britain, or in Germany. While under the influence of potent agencies of modern civilization the cost of commodities has steadily declined for thirty years or more, the American people do not receive the full benefits of the industrial revolution to which they are entitled. While they supply the world with cheap food, they are obliged to pay exorbitant duties on many of the commodities which they receive in exchange. It is the mission of tariff reform to correct this evil.—Philadelphia Record.

Anti-Tariff and Anti-Monopoly.

A reform must be close at hand when the ministers of the churches dare proclaim it in unmistakable language from their pulpits. The anti-slavery agitation was coming in on the homestretch before ministers, to any considerable extent, took part in the reform which culminated in the freeing of the bodies of the black slaves. Now that both white and black slaves are struggling to obtain industrial freedom from the onerous taxes that shackle industry, cramp body and mind and lead to political corruption, it is an augury that the industrial freedom proclamation may soon be promulgated, to hear a sermon like the one preached by the Rev. John J. Peters, of St. Michael's Church, in New York City, on Jan. 8. He condemned in strong words the politicians who steal from the poor; the officials who take bribes; legislatures that give away valuable franchises without compensation; the party papers, "to whom all that their worst party bosses do is right, provided only they bear the party name," and evil in all places. "Woe," he said, "to the monopolies and trusts, coal combinations, sugar trust, window-glass trust, Standard Oil, men that go to Congress to lobby through a measure, to put a high tariff on steel rails, tin plate, articles of clothing as consumption in order that they may reap enormous profits, joining house to house, field to field, with the money which they filch from the pockets of the wage earners, grinding the faces of the poor."

Canadians Like Cheap Sugar.

Because of the repeal of the duty on raw sugar in the United States the Canadian Government has been obliged to make similar concessions. The opportunity of smuggling necessitated such a policy. As a result there is a shortage of revenue and an increase of Canadian debt. There is no argument for reciprocal commercial understanding between the two countries more impressive than the inability to maintain unequal tax rates on articles of importation. Even our Chinese restriction law is rendered partially abortive by the failure of the Dominion to undertake a similar foolishness.—Philadelphia Record.

Our Blessed McKinley Tariff.

As nearly everybody knows, the transatlantic steamship Umbria broke her shaft on her last voyage in 1892. An officer of the company said that there was a new shaft on the other side of the Atlantic, but as the tariff tax would be half of the original cost of the shaft section they would not have it sent over and put in on this side, but would take the Umbria to Europe and have the repairs made there. There were plenty of mechanics in New York capable and willing to make these repairs, but our tariff laws came between them and their bread and butter.

The New Plate-Glass Trust.

The form of trust adopted by the manufacturers of plate glass on the last day of the old year closely resembles that which has been used for some years by the manufacturers of steel rails, and it may be noticed that the number of factories is very nearly the same in both of these industries. There are eleven plate-glass factories, and three of these are controlled by one company. The nine companies or firms which own these eleven factories have combined by appointing an agent or commissioner who will sell all the glass produced by them and distribute orders among the producers. These orders will be apportioned according to the productive capacity of the several factories. The commissioner will not only regulate production but also maintain a uniform price. In this way competition both in production and in prices is suppressed.

This is not the first attempt to make a combination in this industry. For some years the manufacturers have been experimenting with combination agreements of one kind and another. A few weeks after the enactment of the McKinley tariff the New York Tribune directed attention to these practices in the following telegram:

PITTSBURG, Dec. 25.—A meeting of the manufacturers and jobbers of the plate-glass trade will be held in this city in the near future. At the recent New York meeting it was decided to advance prices 30 per cent., but since then Western men have made a stand for a 25 per cent. advance. The avowed intention of the fraternal combination is to keep plate-glass prices at the highest figure possible, and at the same time keep them low enough to shut out all importations.

This object can be attained more surely by the plan now adopted than by the verbal promises of the manufacturers. When all orders must be addressed to one Commissioner, who is bound to exact a uniform price, there will be no room for variations and secret underselling.

The leading manufacturer recently said that the domestic product had come to be 90 per cent. of the entire supply. The fact that 10 per cent. of the supply, if that be a correct estimate, is still imported in spite of very high tariff duties indicates that by means of combination agreements the selling price of domestic plate glass has been maintained far above a normal level. This may also be indicated by the large profits of the industry. The leading company paid a dividend of 34½ per cent. in 1889, and the new tariff has made the importation of plate glass more difficult in the last two years, although the specific duties on the leading sizes were not changed. The duties on the two specified sizes larger than 24 by 30 inches are 25 and 50 cents a square foot, respectively, and these were equal in 1891 to 66 per cent. in the first case and 105½ per cent. in the other. Such are the imposts under the shelter of which the manufacturers combine to exact ring prices from the people who gave them the "protection" which they abuse.

It was supposed that by means of the Federal anti-trust law the people could reach these unlawful associations, but the affiliation of the Harrison administrations have prevented the enforcement of the new law. The combination of plate-glass manufacturers and many other combinations will not be overlooked, however, in the coming revision of the tariff.—New York Times.

No Delay, Trimming or Cowardice.

Every argument and pretext for delay in reaping the fruit of a Democratic victory is a concession to the demands of the defeated party. Only those who are cowardly, or wavering, or mercenary will give to the pleas for procrastination any consideration. To stop the wheels of a beneficent revolution is to join the reactionists and to become an enemy of progress. The people voted for reform—not the mere idea of tariff reform, but for actual, efficient, radical reform. They voted for that method of reforming a great abuse and evil, which is to destroy it. They did not vote for that spurious method of reform which would tolerate further the abuse and evil, postponing the day of reckoning and arresting final judgment. The demand for reform was as emphatic in relation to the time as in relation to the principle which was to be enforced. As in many cases at law, time is the essence of the contract into which the Democratic party entered with the country in its platform and at the ballot-box.

There is no necessity nor excuse for procrastination. Two or three campaigns of education have been fruitful. The people of this country, all men who read and vote, are as well instructed now on the tariff question as they will be at any time in the perceptible future. Congressional committees can find out nothing new on the subject of the tariff. A tariff commission could not extricate from any possible mass of testimony a single fact in regard to the commerce and industries of the people which would add a ray of light to the common intelligence. Every feature of tariff legislation and its practical effects has been elaborately discussed, and no further period of deliberation is necessary or desired. Every hour of delay beyond the period at which the new Congress can assemble and obey in its legislative capacity the mandate of the voters is an hour of cowardice. The people have no time to wait. They do not propose to stand in the vestibule and cool their heads, while their representatives in the inner halls are considering the advisabibity of obeying their command. If the Democrats in Congress shall fail to administer at once and effectively the commission with which they are charged they will have disobeyed and forfeited it. For this infidelity to duty they will be held accountable. No cowardice, no trimming, no paltering, no delay, is the demand made at the ballot-box. It is the recorded will of the voters.—Chicago Herald.

Steel Rail Trust.

The American Manufacturer is protectionist in the strictest faith; it is, however, one of the best organs of the iron and steel industry. From its annual review of the trade for 1892, we extract the following:

"There was nothing of an up and down character in the steel rail trade during the past year, at least so far as prices were concerned. Ever since the price of standard heavy section rails was established on a basis of $30, Pittsburg, Feb. 1, 1891, that figure has been maintained in the face of a demand lessened by the high prices charged and with more or less friction within the Steel Rails Association over the question of the distribution of orders. There is no question but that the steel rail trade was much smaller than it would have been had the price been placed even arbitrarily at a lower figure, and through the rail trade almost all other branches of trade were affected. At the beginning of the year 1892 it was predicted by parties prominent in the rail business that the requirements of that year would exceed those of 1891 by 500,000 to 750,000 tons. This was based on the expectation that the railroads of the country would make extraordinary efforts in the way of improving and increasing trackage to be able to meet the enormous traffic consequent upon the World's Fair. While this expectation has been realized in a measure, the cause cited above has prevented its full fruition. The production of heavy section rails in 1891 amounted to 1,089,000 tons, and for 1892 a little under 1,300,000 tons, the official figures not having been announced. This shows the increase for 1892 to have been only about 210,000 tons, or far less than was expected, or at least hoped for, by the rail-makers. The association has decided to make the price, of rails for the present year on a basis of $29, Pittsburg. If this figure is adhered to, with soft steel getting nearer to $20 apparently, and if railroads restrict purchases as much this year as last, the bond of union holding together the various steel rail concerns in the association will be subjected to a crucial test. It is the opinion of many that were this branch of trade placed on a footing of open competition it would be beneficial, not only to the steel rail business, but the direct and moral effect on all other lines would be great."

It is expected that the next Congress will gratify the wishes of the manufacturer by putting steel rails on the free list. There will then be open competion, with all of its attendant blessings to other branches of trade.

Wool-Growers Are All Right.

So it seems the wool-growers were deceived all the while when told that free wool would be the death of them. Now that free wool is seen to be inevitable, the alarmists of other days are telling the farmer that he is all right, tariff or no tariff. The Chicago American Sheep Breeder asserts that "the most intelligent thinkers do not apprehend any such dire results as the calamity-criers would have us believe," and says the "mutton-raisers have nothing to fear," as "the consumption of mutton is on the increase," and "the mutton business is paying better than any other branch of live-stock raising," so much so that sheep, "without a pound of wool," are leaving "a golden track," and are "mortgage-payers." Even more striking are the added comments of the Boston Journal of Commerce:

"Sheep husbandry and wool production will be an important occupation in this country for generations to come, either by itself or in connection with general agriculture, whatever the tariff policy of the United States may be. The style of sheep husbandry may change somewhat, from the merino to the English type, in case of free wool, but it is bound to play an important part in the vocation of the farmer. The merino sheep is but a pioneer sheep at the best, and is always succeeded by the mutton sheep with the advance of the higher forms of agriculture which accompany the progress of population. In a thickly settled locality no farmer can afford to raise merino sheep in preference to mutton sheep. These conditions affecting sheep husbandry are not disturbed by the tariff policies of the government."—New York Evening Post.

ISN'T it most singular that not one person in five hundred ever consults a physician except when overtaken by illness. If every man and every woman, even in perfect health, would every sixty days consult a skillful physician, submitting to such examination as may be deemed necessary, the results would be most salutary in preventing the slow and almost imperceptible inroads of disease. Preventive work should be by far the most valuable service of the true physician to any mortal. Yet all avoid consulting him except for curative treatment. Give your physician a chance to keep you in good health, and not stupidly wait till you are ill, and probably hopelessly so, before you ask his professional services.

THE Associated Press said recently that Yonkers would have a new carpet factory. Yonkers now has the largest carpet factory in this country; but, of course, with free wool in prospect new factories must go up to supply the great demand for carpets that will follow general prosperity and cheap carpets—but these items are hard blows for the McKinley "demnition bow-wow" prophets.

DOINGS OF CONGRESS.

MEASURES CONSIDERED AND ACTED UPON.

At the Nation's Capital—What Is Being Done by the Senate and House—Old Matters Disposed Of and New Ones Considered.

The Senate and House.

For almost an hour Monday morning the time of the House was consumed in the consideration of a resolution to which there was not the slightest opposition in any quarter, and which was finally adopted without objection. It was one calling upon the executive departments for information as to the number and amount of war claims allowed or disallowed by such departments. Then a motion to suspend the rules and pass a bill to settle the claims of Arkansas and other swamp-land grants failed to secure the necessary two-thirds vote, and was defeated. The motion to suspend the rules and pass a joint resolution for a constitutional amendment for the election of United States Senators by popular vote, was carried without a division. Three prepared speeches were read in the Senate. The first was by Mr. Morrill (Vt.), against the McGarrahan bill; the second by Mr. Peffer (Kan.), in favor of a constitutional amendment limiting the Presidential office to one term; and the third by Mr. Call (Fla.), in defense of the constitutionality of the anti-option bill. After a quorum was procured as the result of a call of the Senate some considerable progress was made on the anti-option bill. An amendment was agreed to fixing July 1, 1893, as the time when the bill is to go into effect. The resolution offered on Saturday by Mr. Wolcott (Col.) instructing the Committee on Foreign Relations to inquire as to the expenditures in and about the construction of the Nicaragua Canal since the accounts of expenditure rendered two years since, was agreed to.

In the Senate the anti-option bill was debated Tuesday for nearly three hours and then went over without action. Sweeping denunciations of the measure were made by Senators Hoar (Mass.), Vest (Mo.) and Platt (Conn.), as being in utter contravention of the constitution of the United States and in violation of the rights of the States. Mr. Platt yielded to many interruptions and was, therefore, unable to finish his argument. The McGarraghan bill received its death-blow for this session in the Senate, the affirmative vote falling eight short of the constitutional majority. The following bills were passed: For the abandonment of the Fort Bridger military reservation in Wyoming. House bill to authorize the construction of bridges across the Hiawassee, the Tennessee, and the Clinch rivers, in the State of Tennessee. In the House, a few private measures were passed, and the Committee on Judiciary having, under a prior order, the right of way, called up some bills of secondary importance. The one of most public interest was that providing for punishment of offenses by passengers on the high seas, which was passed. On motion of Mr. Chipman (Mich.) a resolution was agreed to making provision for the joint meeting of the two houses of Congress on Wednesday, Feb. 8, to count the electoral votes.

The Senators gathered at the Capitol early Wednesday morning, conferred together, and decided that the Senate should adjourn immediately after the reading of the journal, as a token of respect to the memory of ex-President Hayes. The House, as a mark of respect to the memory of the dead, also adjourned.

In the House Thursday a bill was passed to meet the requirements of the interstate commerce law relative to the testimony of witnesses. Mr. Wise (Va.) called up a Senate bill concerning testimony in criminal cases growing out of the interstate commerce act with a substitute providing that no person shall be excused from attending or testifying before the Interstate Commerce Commission on the ground that the testimony or evidence may tend to criminate him. The substitute was agreed to, and the bill as amended was passed without objection. Mr. Boatner (La.) offered an amendment requiring all railway common carriers to accept from connecting lines loaded cars or trains to be hauled to the point of delivery at a rate not exceeding that they charge for similar service over their own lines. Agreed to, 85 to 58. The bill was then passed. The bill for the establishment of a national quarantine was called up, but the opponents of the measure filibustered against it and finally forced an adjournment. The discussion of the anti-options bill was continued in the Senate from 2 o'clock until the time of adjournment, but no action was taken on the bill itself or on Mr. George's amendment to it. In the morning hour Mr. Peffer (Kas.) concluded his speech in favor of a single term of the Presidential office. Mr. Cullom (Ill.), from the committee on commerce, reported a bill appropriating $29,500 for establishing buoys on the water front of Chicago. Passed.

The Senate Friday paid an additional mark of respect to the memory of ex-President Hayes by adjourning without transacting any miscellaneous business. The House also adjourned out of respect to the memory of ex-President Hayes. The general deficiency appropriation bill was reported and placed on the calendar. Mr. Warner (Dem.), of New York, from the Committee on Manufactures, presented a report on the sweating system, and it was placed upon the calendar. Mr. Dearmond (Dem.) of Missouri, from the Committee on the Election of President, etc., reported a bill to repeal the sections of the Revised Statutes concerning supervisors of elections.

The new Columbian postage stamp was vigorously attacked in the Senate Saturday by Mr. Wolcott, of Colorado. After transacting routine business, Mr. Wolcott called up the joint resolution introduced by him some days ago to discontinue the sale of the Columbian postage stamps. He was at a loss to understand, he said, why those stamps had ever been manufactured. He noticed that the Postmaster General suggested in his annual report that he expected to receive $1,500,000 extra profits out of their sale to stamp collectors. That was a trick that might suit some of the little Central American states when they were a few thousand dollars "shy," but the United States was too big a country to unload a cruel and unusual stamp upon stamp collectors. The feature of the session of the House was the consideration of the national quarantine bill. It was ushered in by an eloquent speech from Congressman Rayner, of Maryland, who depicted the danger which was imminent to the people of this country from unrestricted immigration, and who urged upon the House the necessity of agreeing to some national law which would protect the United States from an invasion of its most deadly enemy—cholera.

"Quantics."

"This aspiring youth wanted to become a mathematician; and he had heard that at the topmost summit of the mathematical tree stood a mysterious subject known as the doctrine of 'quantics,' a calculus of calculi, only to be grasped by the furthest stretch of the abstract mathematical faculty. So he came and asked to be taught 'quantics.' It was in vain that Professor Sylvester suggested simpler preliminary geometrical and algebraical studies; the young man wanted to learn 'quantics,' and nothing but 'quantics' would he have."

This anecdote is intended to show that Americans are in to get on, and are not disposed to submit in patience to the training requisite for the highest success. This is true. It is the fault of hopeful, eager youth who see great opportunities opening on every side, for fame, for fortune, for usefulness, for enjoyment. They aim at the best without always attaining to it. They see the rapid advancement which civilized society has made in the domain of a new continent, and they unconsciously participate in the rapid movements of the times in which they live. How could it be otherwise in a land like this—especially if it be true that this century (as Dumas, the French physicist, has said) is to be known in history "as the age of electricity." * * *

We do not know whether the story about Professor Sylvester is true or not, but it bears the mark of verisimilitude, Yet, after all, it is no discredit to the country or the youth that there is such a pre-eminent professor of mathematics among us, and that his presence is inspiring even to those who are but tyros. We can tell a story which is suggested by that of the St. James. A few years ago a young schoolmaster of Pennsylvania, sharing, though more wisely than the tyro, the American enthusiasm for the best things, and especially for quantics, went to Baltimore to study with Professor Sylvester, with this result: that before long the writings of that young man were used as a text-book in the University of Cambridge, England. —The Century.

Kindness Its Own Reward.

Good and friendly conduct may meet with an unworthy, with an ungrateful return; but the absence of gratitude on the part of the receiver cannot destroy the self-approbation which recompenses the giver. And we may scatter the seeds of courtesy and kindness around us at so little expense. Some of them will inevitably fall on good ground, and grow up into benevolence in the mind of others, and all of them will bear fruit of happiness in the bosom whence they spring. Once blest are all the virtues always; twice blest sometimes.

Preventing Future Misery.

If there is, in this vale of tears, a more prolific source of misery than the rheumatic twinge, we have yet to hear of it. People are born with a tendency to rheumatism, just as they are with one to consumption or to scrofula. Slight causes may develop this. As soon as the agonizing complaint manifests itself, recourse should be had to Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which checks its further inroads and banishes the rheumatic poison from the system. This statement tallies exactly with the testimony of physicians who have employed this fine blood depurent in their private practice. There is also the amplest professional and general testimony as to the efficacy of the Bitters for malaria, liver complaint, constipation, indigestion, kidney trouble, nervousness, and loss of appetite and flesh. After a wetting, whether followed by a cold or not, the Bitters is useful as a preventive of the initial attack of rheumatism.

Rather Too Previous.

A party of young ladies visit the Observatory to have a peep through the monster telescope at the new comet. The astronomer conducts them to the instrument, and the ladies look through in turns.

"Oh, Laura, isn't it charming, heavenly, enchanting, wonderful?" and so on ad libitum.

After awhile the sly astronomer observes—

"Now, ladies, I will remove the cover and place the instrument in position, if you will allow me."

Ministers as a class are afflicted with head and throat troubles, and catarrh seems more prevalent than ever. We cannot recommend Ely's Cream Balm too highly."

Soil Matter.

If the nutritious matter of the soil is carried down below the roots of some plants the plant-food may be unavailable. But all plants do not feed alike, as some reach down far into the subsoil and bring up the plant-food again, which is stored in the stalks and leaves. It is in this manner that clover performs such excellent service; and the fact that explains why clover always leaves the land in the better condition than before, when a clover sod is turned under.

The Farmer and the Grocer.

A grocer would not pay a farmer the price of a ten-pound turkey for one that weighed but seven pounds.

Why should a farmer pay a grocer the price of the Royal Baking Powder for a baking powder with 27 per cent. less leavening strength?

The Royal Baking Powder is proven by actual tests to be 27 per cent. stronger than any other brand on the market. Better not buy the others, for they mostly contain alum, lime and sulphuric acid; but if they are forced upon you, see that you are charged a correspondingly lower price for them.

Transfer of Music Through Beams.

The following beautiful experiment, described by Prof. Tyndall, shows how music may be transmitted by an ordinary wooden rod. In a room two floors beneath his lecture-room there was a piano, upon which an artist was playing, but the audience could not hear it. A rod of deal, with its lower end resting upon the sounding-board of the piano, extended upwards through the two floors, its upper end being exposed before the lecture table. But still not a sound was heard.

A violin was then placed upon the end of the rod, which was thrown into resonance by the ascending thrills, and instantly the music of the piano was given out in the lecture room. A guitar and harp were substituted for the violin, and with the same result. The vibrations of the piano strings were communicated to the sounding board, they traversed the long rod, were reproduced by the resonant bodies, the air was carved into waves, and the whole musical composition was delivered to the listening audience.—American Register.

Unexpected.

Lives there a man who loves to listen to a long sermon? Anecdotal history records the opposite tendency. An English clergyman recently officiated for a brother clergyman. Being anxious to know what impression he had made, he asked the clerk:

"Was my discourse pitched in too high a key? I hope I did not shoot over the heads of the people."

"No, you didn't do that, sir."

"Was it a suitable theme?" asked the clergyman.

"Yes, it was about right."

"Was it too long?"

"No, but it was long enough."

"I am glad of that, for, to tell you the truth, the other day, as I was getting this sermon ready, my dog destroyed four or five pages, and that has made it much shorter."

"Oh, sir," said the clerk, "could you let our vicar have that dog?"

Only a Score of White Rhinoceroses.

From a letter addressed by that renowned sportsman, Mr. Selous, to the Field, it appears that that curious and rare animal the white rhinoceros has not yet gone the way of the dodo and the great bustard, though some have ventured to give Mr. Selous' authority for saying that he is extinct. It is to the occupation of Northern Mashonaland, which has kept the native hunters to the west of the Umniati River, that this gentleman attributes the fact that in this part a few specimens still survive the constant persecution which in less than twenty years has utterly exterminated them in every other portion of South Central Africa. "There may yet," Mr. Selous adds, "be ten or even twenty of these animals left, but certainly not more, I think, than the latter number." London News.

A Six Years' Series of Cribbage.

"How the cards will run," is well illustrated in a series of games of cribbage during six years played between a gentleman and his wife of Belfast.

In the last six years they have played 12,800 games together, and last Monday evening they were two games apart, that is, one had a lead of two games in the series, and last week they were even games.

At no time during these years has either one had a lead of over seventy games, and on one evening the lady won thirteen straight games.

Now after six years of playing one is two games ahead. It all shows that luck or chance at cards evens things up in the long run.—Belfast Age.

The Arab Mother's Advice.

When an Arab damsel gets married her mother gives her the following advice for securing her future happiness: "You are leaving your nest to live with a man with whose ways and habits you are unfamiliar. I advice you to become his slave if you wish to become the absolute mistress of your husband. Be satisfied with little; endeavor to feed him well and watch over his sleep. For hunger begets anger, and sleeplessness makes a man cross-grained. Be dumb as to his secrets; do not appear gloomy when he is merry, nor merry when he is sad, and Allah shall bless you."

One Rat's Experience Was Enough.

A certain grocery in Buffalo was overrun with rats. One day a barrel half full of molasses fell apart, or, at least, the bottom fell out and the molasses ran over the floor. In some way one of the biggest rats in the vicinity got into the molasses, and, bedraggled and discouraged, was seen creeping laboriously away from the premises. Every rat disappeared at the same time and not another one, or any evidence of one, has seen about the place.—Buffalo Courier.

After the Grip

"I was very weak and run down and did not gain strength, like so many after that prostrating disease. Seeing Hood's Sarsaparilla highly recommended, I began to take it, and was more than pleased with the way it built me up. I think it has made me better than before I was sick. I have also been delighted with HOOD'S PILLS, and always prefer them to any other kind now. They do not gripe or weaken. I am glad to recommend two such fine preparations

The Question

Of how to visit the World's Fair without great inconvenience and loss in securing comfortable hotel accommodations at reasonable prices is one that interests everybody. This problem has been solved so far as subscribers to THE SATURDAY BLADE and THE CHICAGO LEDGER are concerned. All annual subscribers to either of these papers now receive certificates which entitle them to the privileges of the "W. D. Boyce World's Fair Bureau of Information," operated solely by W. D. Boyce, publisher of THE SATURDAY BLADE and CHICAGO LEDGER. When certificate holders reach Chicago they go at once at any hour of the day or night, to the office, 115-117 Fifth avenue, where they register. Here receptions rooms are provided for both ladies and gentlemen, where mail can be directed, correspondence attended to, baggage and parcels cared for, and where correct information can be obtained about the various ways of getting around the city and to and from the fair grounds. Some trustworthy and competent person will also accompany each certificate holder in search of a boarding place and secure for them rooms at whatever price desired. BLADE and LEDGER subscribers will be guared against all sorts of impositions during their visit at the World's Fair. For these services no charges will be made; they are absolutely free. Subscription price of either of these papers is $2 per year. Sample copies sent free. Address the publisher, W. D. BOYCE, 115-117 Fifth avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Just the Thing.

This is an impression the traveling public generally use when they find something that is exactly what they want. This expression applies directly to the Wisconsin Central Line, which is now admitted by all to be "The Route" from Chicago to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Ashland, Duluth, and all points in the Northwest. Their double daily train service and fine equipment offers inducement which cannot be surpassed.

This is the only line running both through Pullman First-class and Tourist Sleepers from Chicago to Pacific Coast Points without change.

MERCURIAL Mr. J C. Jones, of Fulton, Arkansas, says of S.S.S.

"About ten years ago I contracted a severe case of blood poison. Leading physicians prescribed medicine after medicine, which I took without any relief. I also tried mercurial and potash remedies, with unsuccessful results, but which brought on an attack of mercurial rheumatism that made my life one of agony. RHEUMATISM After suffering four years I gave up all remedies and began using S. S. S. After taking several bottles I was entirely cured and able to resume work. S.S.S. Justice to All.

It is now apparent to the Directors of the World's Columbian Exposition that millions of people will be denied the pleasure of becoming the possessors of

World's Fair Souvenir Coins

The Official Souvenir of the Great Exposition—

The extraordinary and growing demand for these Coins, and the desire on the part of the Directors that equal opportunities may be afforded for their purchase, have made it necessary to enlarge the channels of distribution. To relieve themselves of some responsibility, the Directors have invited

THE MERCHANTS

Throughout the Nation to unite with the Banks in placing Columbian Half-Dollars on sale. This is done that the masses of the people, and those living at remote points, may be afforded the best possible opportunity to obtain the Coins.

THE FORTUNATE POSSESSORS

of SOUVENIR COINS will be those who are earliest in seizing upon these new advantages.

Deserving Praise.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. Robbins & McCords druggists. 1

Successful Always.

The New Great South American Kidney Cure.

The acknowledged superior cure and immediate relief for all derangements, painfulness and decay of the kidneys or bladder, Bright's disease, diabetes or any complaint that hurts or despoils either of these delicate organs. This new remedy has been thoroughly tested by learned physicians and found far superior to any medicine yet discovered for quickly relieving all weaknesses, aches, pains and distresses arising from disease of any part of the urinary passages. It gives great relief for the old, middle aged and children, male or female. It relieves at once retention and pain in passing water, and it is very effective in relieving prostate troubles in the old, and for nightly incontinence of water in children, or others, caused by weakness of the bladder. It may be worth to many a hundred times its cost. This is a remedy of great value to ladies, because they are very liable to weakness and pain peculiar to their sex. CORRESPONDENCE.

WATERLOO.

Robert Patterson Sundayed at Decatur, at The New Burt, Dell Locke, proprietor.

Effie Locke has spent a few days at Decatur visiting her brother and his wife there.

The club dance at the opera house house Friday evening was well attended, many coming from Garrett, Auburn and other places making with Waterloo people a large crowd.

An alarm of fire a few evenings since was caused by an oil stove at Shaver's. Mrs Shaver attempted filling it while lighted, hence the trouble. Mr. S. picked it up and threw it out doors.

The fire bell rang again on Tuesday This time too, the trouble was caused from an oil stove or lamp, at Robinson's through some one attempting to fill while lighted. Fortunately no danger was done.

The item published last week stating that Mrs Ida Daniels was coming the same week to visit her father's family was incorrect Your correspondent received the information as stated, but the informer was in some way mistaken, or understood perhaps next week when next month was meant.

There will be no lack of ice next summer. Large quantities are being put up everywhere. Several squads of men are at work at different points on the creek getting out ice for different parties. They find it good, clean and clear—not six feet thick such as they are taking out at St. Paul, but eighteen inches.

Thursday afternoon a brakesman named Ilen received a terrible injury up near the station, by being caught between two cars. Something like fifty stitches were taken, we did not learn by whom The next morning he was taken to Toledo, and placed in the railroad hospital there. Dr. Darby accompanied him.

Friday evening of this week the Knights of Honor give a reception to invited guests They will have interesting exercises at their hall. Mattie Maxson will play while the quartet does the singing. Afterwards a fine banquet will be partaken of at the opera house, The Presbyterian ladies prepare this—which is as much as to say, it will be excellent.

The members of the L. M. C. went Tuesday afternoon by invitation, to hold their regular session with Mrs. Emma Jackman, whose home is several miles this side of Hamilton It snowed all the afternoon, nevertheless twelve ladies braved the snow and had no reason to regret. After the regular exercises and lessons the time was spent in pleasant chat until an inviting and appetizing supper was served, to which full justice was done Such delicious yellow butter, plenty of rich cream for the fragrant coffee, and without exception, every article prepared so perfectly and served so daintily, it could not be improved upon. After supper the tongues flew faster than ever, until the time compelled taking the homeward way. Several of the members were obliged to remain at home on account of sickness in their families.

In a letter from Mrs. Locke she says they like their new home very much, but that it will be no sinecure, since it involves much hard work. She looks back to their life at Waterloo as very pleasant, but almost play as compared with the present. Yet she resolves to be happy and contented. They employ nine girls and six boys. They have met with kindness from the people, and made some pleasant acquaintances. Bert Butler of this place is day clerk. A "menu" for that day, compares favorably with some of the fine hotels in large cities. Among the luxuries for this season of the year we note new tomatoes sliced, sirloin of beef, with larded mushrooms, young chicken fried, asparagus on toast, strawberry short cake and sliced pineapple.

BUTLER.

Henry and Jacob Dohner, sons of Henry Dohner, who left here in 1866 and have since resided in Iowa, are here visiting old acquaintances and friends after their long absence.

Bro. Downey of the Review has a new power press that well nigh raises the roof of the little coop of an office that he occupies. Look out for something nice when it commences to throw off its 2,500 impressions an hour. Bro. Smith of the Record, seems a little sleepy sometimes but he is only playing "possom." He also has a new press and will also make marked improvement in his paper.

Mr. Rose living about six miles west of Butler suffered the loss of his residence by fire last week, cause not stated. We learn that he had some insurance in the Old Ohio Farmers Insurance Co. Another fire took place Sunday morning 1½ miles east of Butler on the Williams, Brown, Tintsman farm now owned by A. N. Aldrich. The fire was perhaps caused by a defective flue. The house was a total loss, value about $500. We have been unable to learn whether it was insured or not. It was occupied by a tenant who saved all his effects.

The saddest event of the past week was the death of Mrs. Nancy Worth which took place Friday at the home of her son in Columbia City, where she had been called to care for him during his serious illness that threatened an early and fatal result. The cause of her death was of a paralytic nature. She was brought home to Butler where her funeral took place from the M. E. church Sunday. Rev. Mr. Tedrow of the U. B. church officiated assisted by Rev Mr. Stone and Rev. Mr. Lovett. The house was filled to overflowing. Mrs. Worth as she has been so well known was born in Tuscarawas Co., Ohio, sixty two years ago She came to Butler with her husband and small family when the town was in its infancy and has been a well known resident ever since. Her children two sons and three daughters survive her. Mrs. Worth was one among the noble mothers of our place. Untiring in her deeds of mercy, ready night and day to answer the calls of distress. Her christian virtues blossomed and bore fruit wherever the wasting hand of disease was felt or the tears of sorrow flowed. Her memory will live green in the minds of our people for years to come.

I. H. N. Coffinberry, Auditor in and for said County of DeKalb, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and complete list of all the lands and town lots in said county returned delinquent for the taxes for the year 1891, with the delinquent tax, penalty and interest, and also the tax for the year 1892, to the best of my knowledge and belief.

Notice is therefore hereby given, that so much of the foregoing lands and town lots as may be necessary to discharge the taxes, interest and penalty, and charges due thereon or due from the owners thereof at the time of the sale, will be sold at public auction at the court house door, in the town of Auburn in said county, on the second Monday in February, A. D., 1893, (the same being the 13th day of said month,) unless such taxes, penalty, interest and charges are previously paid. Sale to commence at 10 o'clock a. m., on said day and continue until all have been offered for sale.

H. N. COFFINBERRY, Auditor.

Auburn, Ind., Jan. 16, 1893.

ST. JOE.

County Superintendent Merica visited our schools the latter part of last week.

Geo. Swinford has been visiting under the parental roof for the past few days.

L. S. Saylor went to Garrett Wednesday to see his mother-in law, Mrs. Nancy Hoffman, who he reports very sick.

C. C. Walters had a big crowd at his sale last Thursday. Every thing sold remarkably good owing to the season.

Prof. Coe of the Auburn schools delivered a lecture before the literary club last Friday night. Subject: Man's relation to things around him.

M. T. Bishop has sold his store room and lumber business. The building we are informed will be moved on to the corner opposite the Big 4 store.

Several of our farmer friends met last Friday in the G. A. R. hall and organized a Farmers' Mutual Benefit Society. Who the officers are we are not informed.

Rumor has it that Ben Hamilton, Milas Rhodes, D. J Baker and Jack Kager have formed a partnership and will bring to St. Joe a big stock of lumber, lath, shingles and lime in the near future Let them come, the more the better.

Our old friend, Bill Simonton, tells a pretty good story and here is one that he tells upon himself and Ben Moffatt of Jackson Center. Bill says that some years ago when he was a good deal smaller than he is now and a great deal more courageous, he with his family and Ben with his family, lived in the same house, a double log house, in the then wilds of Jackson township. And during the long winter nights the time hung heavily upon their hands. In those good old times it was the custom of the neighbors to do at least a part of their visiting after dark. During one of the darkest nights, the two families took it into their heads to pay their neighbor Perry Martin a visit. All who know Ben and Bill and good natured Perry, will know that time would not hang heavily on their hands. About midnight after partaking of a bountiful supper supplied by the good Mrs. Martin, Bill and Ben went into the yard and happening to cast their eyes toward their own residence, discovered what they supposed was a light in the part occupied by Bill. Of course the first thought was burglars and away they went. On the way Bill remembered, having left a corn cutter along the fence this he gathered in as they sped on their way. When nearing the house, they stopped to hold a council of war (meantime the light had vanished) Bill declaring that there were burglars in the house and that he was going in and take them dead or alive. Ben was all the time urging caution, to wait till they came out and they would pay the whole lot with one full swoop, but Bill would not have it that way, and with a drawn sword (corn cutter) he marched bravely in expecting every moment to be his last. In order to get to where the lamp and matches were, he had to cross the room, these he reached and struck a light. Bill says his heart beat so loud he thought there was two clocks, but there was no burglar. About this time Ben poked his head in at the door and wanted to know if he had him. Bill says that everything was just as they had left it and of course there had been no light there; the supposition is that the two had eaten something for supper that made things look double.

CONCORD.

Mrs. Rose Phillips is better.

G. W. Morr was in Garrett Thursday.

Will Baker was at Chicago last week.

Mrs. Sherm Rickett's is on the sick list.

Dr. Bowman and wife passed by Monday.

Dick Ervin and wife were away Sunday,

Charlie Koch drove to Hicksville, O. Thursday.

D. D. Dove and family spent Sunday with Mrs. Mat Hay.

A. J. Ralston of Auburn, drove down to Concord Friday.

Alice Draggoo, Anna and Dellie Baker drove over to Auburn Friday.

Rumor has it the Rehoboth widower will take one from our midst shortly.

Stella Burrier of Hall's Corners was the guest of Dellie Kline over Sunday.

Will Smurr, G. W. Wade and Sherm Ricketts are hauling butts to Ft. Wayne.

John Geisinger and wife of Rehoboth visited the latter's parents last Sunday.

T. J. Ricketts and Bert Jackson are sawing several cords of wood for G. W. Draggoo.

R. B. Clear of Churubusco came down on business Monday. Reports his family well.

Daniel and Mary Rohm of Waterloo, visited in the family of their aunt Josie Morr Sunday.

Mrs. T. S. Murray and daughter, of Spencerville are visiting with her daughter Mrs. C Brown.

Gerry Wasson and Bertha Hennessey drove to St. Johns Sunday to visit their aunt Mrs. Emma Groves.

Mrs. Emma Gibford for a sleigh ride drove over to St. John Sunday taking her son Cormie to his school.

G. W. Draggoo, Wayne Scott and J. B. Draggoo are hoarding up ice. A very essential thing for the farmers.

Will Draggoo of Rome City, and Frank Draggoo of Auburn, came home Sunday to see little sister Ruth.

Fred. Jenkins and wife and Ed. Leighty and wife of St Joe, were the guests of Tell Elson and family Sunday.

D. W. Baker is hauling shingles for Robert Culbertson to re-roof his house and barn on his farm. D. W. will do the work.

Dr. Ed. Showalter is reported very sick. Fears are entertained of his recovery. The attending physicians are Murphy and Bowman.

G. W. Draggoo and daughter drove to Auburn Saturday. Coming home his horses got a hustle on them for a few rods.

After a pleasant visit of six weeks with relatives and friends James Draggoo returned to his home near Frankfort, Mich. It will be remembered he and his good wife were once residents of DeKalb.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

You will remember the condition I was in five years ago, when I was afflicted with a combination of diseases, and thought there was NO HELP FOR ME. I tried all kinds of medicines, and scores of eminent physicians. My nerves were prostrated, producing dizziness, heart trouble and all the ills that make life miserable. I commenced to take DR. MILES' NERVINE and in three months I WAS PERFECTLY CURED. In my travels each year, when I see the thousands of physical wrecks, suffering from nervous prostration, taking prescriptions from local physicians who have no knowledge of their case, and whose death is certain, I feel like going to them and saying, "GET DR. MILES' NERVINE AND BE CURED." In my profession, where there are so many sufferers from overwork, mental prostration and nervous exhaustion, brought on by the character of the business engaged in, I would recommend "MILES' NERVINE" as a sure cure for all suffering from these causes.

MESSRS. DULLAM BROS.—Gentlemen: For over 4 years I have been afflicted with an eruption of the skin, which became very troublesome and I could get no relief. I was also troubled very badly with constipation, which nothing I tried gave any permanent relief until I took Dullam's Great German blood, liver, stomach and kidney remedy and since taking I have been entirely cured. For a tonic, blood purifier and general health restorer I can heartily recommend it. $1 a bottle.

My daughter has been afflicted with female trouble for over six years and I have paid out over $750 in vain trying to find relief for her. A lady friend advised her to secure a bottle of Dullam's Great German Female Uterine Tonic and she has been completely cured by it. We gave it a fair trial and the results were wonderful We cannot recommend it too highly to all ladies who are afflicted.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Victor Hugo said to the atheist who affirmed that the proof that he would not exist in the future was that he did not exist in the past: "You do not believe in the doctrine of surviving personalities for the reason that you do not recollect your anterior existence. How can the recollection of vanished ages remain imprinted on your memory when you do not remember a thousand and one scenes and events of your present life?"

In the endeavor to recall the Auburn of 1868, the truthfulness of Hugo's answer is vindicated and its force is felt. Let any resident at that time attempt from memory to picture the town as it then was, name its prominent professional and business men and the events of that date and most strikingly will it be borne in upon his mind how closely oblivion follows upon our footsteps.

The buildings then conspicuous have disappeared, where were vacant tracts, new, pleasant homes frankly face the streets and every change has been for the better. Year after year without ado, all over the town the work of bettering condition has proceeded till the town has expanded outward beyond the old Wheelock mansion to the railroad, eastward to Eckhart's carriage; works and electric lights blaze where cattle pastured and fields were tilled.

As the Lilliputian park where stood the old academy is to the broad grounds occupied by our high school edifice, as the town house to the present county jail, and as the old narrow wooden walk to the beautiful cement pavement, so contrast the Auburn of 1868 with the town of 1893.

The buildings reflect something of the features or characteristics of the builders as nationality is indicated by dress and and in this light we see unpretentious dwellings with massive frames, slight display and great strength.

The residence symbolizes the poverty or prosperity of the occupant and by this, the wealth of Auburn people is safely measured. Very few of those who comprised the population in '68 are still residents. Very many felt the desire to better condition and hoping to do this elsewhere, they have been lost to sight and memory too, as they have scattered far and wide. Little if any sentiment attaches to the homes where our people have passed their lives and where their children have been born. The old house is removed to make way for the new. There is building and re building, and the time worn structures of '68 have no cherished remembrances and they disappeared without regrets but in that time they were the homes of our people, comfortable and substantial and in them, families did not watch the clouds and seek cellars when winds blew high.

Turning to the town record we find a brief but suggestive story from which glimpses are presented of those days—the darkest before the dawn of prosperity. On January 6th, the Board of Trustees of Auburn met at the office of the Woolen Mills with T. D. Gross, J. L Davis and Hugh Watt present. S. B. Ward handed in his report and resignation as fire warden. The report was accepted, filed and H. E. Altenberg was appointed in his stead. Of the board, C. S. Hare was clerk and T. D. Gross president.

We can read and recall with a degree of satisfaction the constant but apparently hopeless efforts of the citizens of the year '68 to maintain their standing and that of the town, since losses have been more than made good, credit has been won, threatened dangers have been averted and population increased so greatly; but that was a period when the "loveliest" might have become the "deserted" but for the courage and constancy of the few.

On the night of January 16th, a fire broke out in a building west of the public square and leveled to ashes the entire wooden row between Eighth and Ninth streets to the Case block. In this fire were swept away the Davis hardware store, C. S. Hare's shoe shop and Eldridge's saloon. The brick building narrowly escaped destruction. A second newspaper office went up in flame and smoke as the Democrat was published in the second story of the Eldridge building. Howard Coe was out of a job; again Auburn was without a home paper.

The proprietors of the burned buildings with notable and creditable courage, promptly cleared away the rubbish and entered upon the work of reconstruction and so energetically was the building pushed that by the last of May a new brick block, two stories high with business rooms below and offices in the second story was nearing completion. The result was the handsome, solid and valuable row of buildings now standing, and what was individual loss became an actual town improvement.

The resources now and for years made available were known to exist but there were none to lay hold upon them. One of the advantages possessed in a remarkable degree was the facility with which a manufactory for making staves and headings could have been operated. Towering massive trees of white oak, ash and elm stood within easy access and were of unsurpassed quality, and there was only needed experience and some capital to awaken the people from the lethargy by which they had long been enthralled, to place the county seat on an equal footing in manufacturing interests, with others that have long been prospered by the gainful yield of a commodity, greatly inferior to their own.

Wide awake citizens of Waterloo were the first to see and make available the facilities for utilizing this timber. Early in February, Mr. Dickinson of that town had a factory in full operation and the demand for the manufactured product kept the machinery running night and day. bringing farmers many a needed dollar from their wood lots, not otherwise obtainable. The factory soon had staves and heading material manufactured to the value of $20,000 and James Bowman at the same time, although only a few weeks in the business, had staves and bolts on hand representing $5,000. It was estimated that these two firms during the year, would do from $35,000 to $40,000 worth of business.

The Sandwich Islands.

As noted in our editorial columns, the revolution at Hawaii is the subject of most exciting interest in government circles, and is being discussed for and against, everywhere, The most of our people would like to see the Islands annexed to the United States, though a few are opposed to it, because, they say, that would be pushing our interests outside of the mainland of the American continent, a thing our government has always avoided. The friends of annexation, on the other hand, say it would give us a naval station and coaling station in the middle of the Pacific, which would be a great advantage.

Real Estate Agency of AUBURN, IND.

RICKEL & SPROTT, Props.

We present in this column a list which has been selected from our choicest properties, and are the best and cheapest.

TOWN PROPERTIES.

An elegant two-story frame dwelling with all necessary out buildings, small fruits and all the modern conveniences which go to make a beautiful and pleasant home. Will be sold cheap for cash, or will accept two-thirds cash; balance in one year,

A very desirable residence property on North Van Buren street. This property has good, almost new buildings, well, cistern and some fruits, and a price that will astonish you.

A vacant lot on West 7th street.

A nice residence on Seventh street right handy to schools and churches, and within a two-minutes' walk of the Court House.

A most desirable residence on south Jackson street, which we offer at a bargain, and will give the purchaser the privilege of paying out in monthly payments, if he so desires. Terms, $500 cash; balance in monthly payments.

FARMS.

We offer, first, a splendid Seventy acres in Union township, well tiled, good fences. Land that cannot be beat for gardening and for small fruits. Will sell cheap for cash, or on the most favorable terms on long time. Lays within three miles of Auburn.

Eighty acres of good land, within one mile of Newville. Good buildings, orchard, and, better soil cannot be found in DeKalb county. Easy prices, and terms to suit the purchaser.

We have a number of farms and town properties on our books, which we are not allowed to advertise, because of the simple fact, that they are offered so cheap that were it known the public would draw the conclusion that the owners are hard up for ready cash, which we all know would be a mistake.

We are agents for those lands in Kansas and Nebraska, which can be had on the most favorable terms ever offered, to-wit: The purchaser makes a small cash payment, just enough to show that he is in earnest, then yearly, thereafter, he pays (delivers at the nearest market) one-half of the crops raised on the land. If crops are unfavorable and he raises no crop, then he makes no payment that year, but is carried over until next year, and so on, until he pays out. Shall we have your application for one of these farms?

We shall be pleased to see you at any time and show, Free of Charge, any of the properties we have on our lists. Write or call on us for any information regarding rates, time of trains to any place on "God's green earth," and remember that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad pays the hack fare to all points in competition where the fare is $2. or more.

Natural Gas Oozing Through the Ground in Jay County, Ind.—Colored People's Grand Jubilee—Died in the Flames—Train Goes Through a Bridge—Small Pox at Akron, Ohio.

Strange Phenomena.

A very peculiar natural phenomenon can at any time be seen on the farms of Charles Roue and Daniel Pensinger, in Green Township, Jay County, Ind. Ever since last August natural gas has been coming up in various places on the farms mentioned, and even through the heavy snow it had such force as to blow the snow away. The gas comes up over a ract of land which covers at least forty acres, and when lighted will burn to a hight of several feet. A number of drillers have said that at least 6,000,000 feet of gas finds its way through the ground and goes to waste every day. They also say that it is not shale gas, or the supply would be exhausted, but it comes direct from the Trenton rock, through fissures caused by internal explosion.

Archbishop Feehan Ill.

Chicago special: Archbishop Feehan has been lying dangerously ill at the Archiepiscopal residence on State street for two weeks or more. The illness of the eminent churchman has been known to but a few of his household and two of the priests at the Catholic parish rectory until the latter part of last week, when his brother, Dr. Feehan, a prominent physician of St. Louis, was summoned to the bedside of the Archbishop. The trouble grew out of a severe cold, aggravated by stomach ailment. The crisis is now believed to have been passed, the only danger feared being that arising from a possible relapse.

Profit-Sharing.

Congressman C. G. Conn, proprietor of of the Conn band instrument factory of Elkhart, Ind., made his annual distribution of dividends on the profit-sharing basis the other evening at the Opera House. The Walter Emerson Company gave a concert, after which money amounting to $14,000 was distributed among 103 employes. The five managers elected from among the employes received as their share of the dividend alone, independent of wages, $1,010 each, while the remainder was distributed among three classes in sums of $60 and $90 and $150 each.

Died in the Flames.

The dwelling house of James Addison, at West Newbury, Mass., was burned. Mr. Addison, aged 40, and William, aged 16, probably perished in the flames. Addison's wife died two years ago. Since her death he has lived alone, his son being with him part of the time. There is a possibility that the son was not at home, but the probabilities are that he was. The house was in a sparsely settled locality with only a few neighbors near. How the fire originated no one knows, as when first seen by a neighbor the house was all in flames

Colored People's Grand Jubilee.

The Joint Committee on Ceremonies of the World's Columbian Exposition have set apart a day in August, 1893—probably the 17th—for the use and pleasure of the colored people of the United States. And they propose to have a day of praise and thanksgiving. There will be at least 100,000 present. Their best talent in oratory and music will take part. The afternoon will be entirely devoted to music. There will be a large chorus of 2,000 voices, an orchestra of 100 Afro-American instrumentalists and a male chorus of fifty voices.

A Drunken Veteran Frozen to Death.

John Hamlin, an inmate of the Soldiers' Home, at Quincy, Ill., was found in a cellar of an unfinished building on Hampshire street. He fell into the cellar while intoxicated. When found the body was frozen stiff and his face was almost eaten away by rats. Hamlin had been in the Home since 1887.

Chopped His Child.

John Hojda, a Bohemian ex-priest at Baltimore, while demented, secured an ax and chopped his three weeks' old child to pieces. He also seriously wounded his 3-year-old son. He then leaped from a three-story window, but was uninjured. He left the church to marry one of his congregation.

Death of a Prominent Citizen of Toledo.

Horace S. Walbridge, one of Toledo's oldest residents and a prominent citizen, died recently after only a day's illness. He was largely interested in mines in Wisconsin, and had interests in Toledo banks and various manufacturing concerns. He was 65 years of age.

Through a Bridge.

A freight train on the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad fell through a bridge crossing Spring Creek, near Atherton, Ind. Nearly every man of the train crew received injuries more or less severe, but none were fatally hurt.

Small Pox at Akron, Ohio.

Small pox took a new start in Akron the other day, six cases of the disease being reported. Thus far nearly fifty cases and ten deaths have occurred. All the cases reported are in quarantined houses.

Anti-Option Bill Passes the Senate.

The anti-option bill has passed the United States Senate by a vote of 40 to 29. The provisions of the bill tends to suppress gambling operations on boards of trade.

Killed by an Icicle.

Thomas Pearson, 17 years, was instantly killed at Kokomo, Ind., by a huge icicle falling upon him from the roof of the Opera House. The block of ice weighed over 1,000 pounds, and fell a distance of sixty feet.

Death of a Well-Known Californian.

Dr. T. M. Leavenworth, one of the prominent figures in the history of California, died at his home in Santa Rosa, Cal., at the age of 90 years.

DO WE WANT IT?

Washington special: An interview between Secretary of State Foster and Dr. Mott Smith, the Hawaiian Minister, continued for some time in the diplomatic room of the State Department. At its close Secretary Foster went over to the White House and had a conference with President Harrison.

While of course no statement of the policy to be pursued by the United States in the matter will be made, at least until after the arrival of the commissioners from Hawaii who are to present the request for annexation to Hawaiians will hardly be successful if the purport thereof has been correctly stated. Aside from the innovation upon the policy of the Government since its organization which the annexation would be, the interests of other countries in the Sandwich Islands are too large to permit on the part of the Government of those nations an acquiescence in such annexation. It would involve consequences that the United States would not care, and which its long settled policy forbids to assume.

LAID TO REST.

Funeral of James G. Blaine at the Nation's Capital.

Washington special: Mr. Blaine could not have a private funeral. Every effort was made to comply with his own understood wishes and with the expressed desires of his family in this regard, but the surging wave of public interest swept over the barriers imposed, and made his private funeral one of the most impressive of public demonstrations in honor of the dead.

The most eminent men in the nation stood around his bier. All business in the Nation's Capital was suspended during the period when the funeral services were in progress. The presence of the President and Cabinet and Supreme Judges and high officials of Congress and the Diplomatic Corps was not more significant than the homage of the waiting crowds, who in respectful silence lined the streets through which the funeral cortege passed.

The Presbyterian Church of the Covenant, where Mr. Blaine was a pewholder, had been surrounded by a rope to exclude all not specially invited. The relatives and pall-bearers occupied the first eight rows of seats in the main aisle. Behind them were seated the President, Vice President, Cabinent officers, Speaker Crisp, and members of the Supreme Court, with their families.

After the services, conducted by Rev. Dr. Hamlin, the remains of James G. Blaine were borne away by a solemn cortege to the grave on a sunny slope at Oak Hill Cemetery in ancient Georgetown.

THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

The President and Congress in Favor of Annexation.

Washington special: There are some important developements in the Hawaiian situation.

First, it is pretty clearly indicated that the administration is not in any way lukewarm in the matter as was at first supposed.

Secondly, the action of the commander of the Boston against which Great Britain is about to file, or has filed a formal protest, has received the official approval of the President and his cabinet.

It has been reported that President Harrison is in favor of the annexation. There is in support of this statement the President's well known policy of Americanism, which has for its object the enlargement of the sphere of usefulness and activity of this nation. His action upon the part in the revolution by the United States officials and forces may also be regarded as proof of the correctness of the report.

In the Senate there is a distinctively American feeling on the Hawaiian question, which is not confined to any party. There can be no doubt that a majority of the members of the Foreign Legation Committee look with favor upon the establishment of American domination upon the islands, but in just what shape is a matter of detail that has not yet been considered.

POWDER EXPLOSION.

Henry Horne Killed and Three Others Badly Injured.

Cincinnati special: A terrific explosion occurred the other morning at the Deihl fireworks plant, in Reading, a suburban village, eleven miles from this city. The charging house was completely shattered and blazing timbers shot into the air setting fire to the surrounding buildings. Henry Horne, aged 18, was instantly killed; Gus Gerwin, aged 24, fatally injured. Ollie White and Tillie Matt, both of them about eighteen years old, were seriously burned. Many others were more or less injured. The cause of the explosion is not known. The men and women employed in the charging house had been at work but a short time when the powder let go. The works are owed by the Consolidated Fireworks company of North America, of New York. Fifty persons were employed at the plant.

Indiana's Gerrymander Case.

By the action of the Indiana Supreme Court in its decision in which opinions are rendered by Justice Coffey and Judge Howard, the apportionment (gerrymander) case, Benjamin S. Parker vs. State ex rel. Simon T. Powell, is at an end. The petition for a rehearing, filed by Attorney-General Smith and Morgan Chandler is rejected.

It now becomes the duty of the Legislature, by the act of the Court, to reapportion the State for legislative purposes. The decision of the Henry Circuit Court was that the present apportionment of senatorial representatives is in conflict with the constitution and invalid. The Supreme Court decided that the act of 1891 was invalid by reason of unconstitutionality, and the act of 1879, under which the plaintiff asked relief in the case, was also invalid for the same reason. These acts being invalid, and the last possible step in the courts having been taken, it remains for the legislature to make a new apportionment.

Chilian Indemnity.

The Navy Department has refused to make payment of the Chilian idemnity to any one except the sailors of the Baltimore themselves and—in case of the two deceased sailors—their legal heirs. As far as the department officials are concerned the beneficiaries will be under no obligations to pay attorney fees. The department considers the indemnity in the nature of a present to the injured sailors and not as the payment of the claims originally filed in the State Department by San Francisco lawyers. The sum of $10,000 each is the amount recommended by the Naval Board to be allotted to the legal heirs of the two deceased sailors.

The American Flag.

New York special: With the inauguration of the new American line service between New York and Southampton, in February, the steamships City of New York, and City of Paris will be transferred to the American flag, in accordance with the act of Congress, and the old trade name of Inman Line will be dropped for this express service. The words "City of" will also be dropped from the names of the steamships, and thereafter they will be known as the New York, the Paris and the Chester. The American line has adopted as its house flag the American eagle in blue on a white flag.

A Husband's Vengeance.

A highly sensational double murder occurred near Pikeville, Ky. Isaac Moore, a wealthy lumber merchant, shot and killed William Kelly and then sent a ball through the body of his (Moore's) wife. Moore had gone home and found his wife with Kelly. The latter ran Moore out of the house. In the yard the fleeing man stopped, turned on his pursuer, and sent three pistol balls through him. Mrs. Moore then attacked her husband with a butcher knife and received a ball in her abdomen in return. Moore surrendered and is in jail.

Gresham for Secretary of State.

A Chicago special says: It is settled almost beyond the shadow of a doubt that Judge W. Q. Gresham will be Secretary of State in President Cleveland's Cabinet. For several days past New York dispatches stated that negotiations have been pending between President-elect Cleveland and Judge Gresham. These negotiations have been going on for over a week. They are finally concluded. Judge Gresham has decided to accept the premiership. The fact is known to only a few of the very intimate friends of the distinguished jurist.

Killed His Wife.

Coroner Clayton, of Miami County, Ohio, held an inquest at West Charleston on the body of Mrs. Jefferson Shank, who was mysteriously murdered while asleep at her home the other night. Her husband claimed the atrocious deed was done by robbers while he and his wife were asleep in the same bed. A large gathering of country people attended the trial and evidence was so strong and direct against Jefferson Shank, the murdered woman's husband, that he was sent to jail at Troy charged with murder in the first degree.

Sanitarium Burned.

Dr. J. B. Holmes' private sanitarium at Rome, Ga., including the main building, surgical ward, and drug store, with all their contents, were destroyed by fire. There were seventy-five inmates in the building when the fire broke out, and the flames spread so rapidly that they barely escaped in their night clothes. It is believed the fire was the work of an incendiary, as the building was fired in three different places. The total loss is $100,000, with $60,000 insurance. The sanitarium will be rebuilt.

School House Fire.

The Detroit High School Building, corner of Griswold and State streets, Detroit, was completely destroyed by fire. The building has long been denounced as a tinder box, and the way in which the flames spread showed that the denunciations were well deserved. The loss is $100,000. The origin of the fire is supposed to have been the explosion of chemicals stored in the basement. The watchman is missing and it is feared he perished in the flames.

Fatal Collision.

A collision occurred on the Erie road at Wallace, N. Y., between passenger train No. 113 and a freight train. Matthew Roisenger, fireman on the passenger, was crushed to death, and William West, fireman on the freight, lost a leg. The freight was standing on a side-track, the switch to which was left open. The passenger train dashed into the freight partially wrecking the passenger engine and a portion of the freight train. None of the passengers were injured.

Kentucky's New Senator.

All the candidates for United States Senator from Kentucky, to succeed Mr. Carlisle, have withdrawn, leaving the field clear for Judge Wm. Lindsay. The new Senator is a typical Kentuckian in manner and appearance, about fifty-five years of age, a lawyer by profession; served on the State Supreme Bench, and has for years been a State Senator as well as Kentucky's Commissioner to the World's Fair.

Crushed His Skull.

Ray Clemons, a switchman on the Detroit, Lansing & Northern railroad, met a sudden and horrible death at Grand Rapids, Mich. He was coupling cars in the yard and stepped between two cars loaded with lumber. The lumber was piled so that the ends projected over the ends of the cars. When the cars came together his head was caught between the lumber and crushed beyond all recognition.

Vain Fight for Life.

At Columbus, Ohio, Perry Juengst, a boy of 12 years, was drowned in the Scioto River, and his brother Harry, about the same age, narrowly escaped a similar fate. The boys were crossing the stream on the ice. They broke through, and after a desperate struggle for life Perry succumbed to the icy water. Harry managed to cling to a cake of ice until rescued with a boat.

A Young Girl Foully Murdered.

The body of Ella Ford, a comely young colored girl was found murdered in the cellar of the house at 809 Locust street, Philadelphia, occupied by herself and her aged lover, George Morris. The body was buried face downward and the head had been battered in with a hammer. Morris is 60 years of age, and as he cannot be found he is believed to have committed the crime.

Her Head on Fire.

Burglars searched John Katus' house at Mendota, Ill., and finding no money went into a room occupied by a blind daughter, stripped her of all clothing, and set fire to her hair. Her neck and shoulders were badly burned and the unfortunate young lady is prostrate with fright and suffering.

Small-Pox in Chicago.

A case of small-pox was discovered at the Chicago House of Correction, locally known as the Bridewell. There are 1,100 prisoners in the institution.

AMERICA MOURNS HER BRILLIANT DIPLOMAT.

Story of the Life and Achievements of the Son of Pennsylvania—His Prominence in Maine and National Politics—The Peer of the World's Greatest Political Students—Story of His Brave Fight for Life.

Will Live in History.

Blaine is dead. The end of his long illness has been reached, and his struggle for existence, so heroically made, has come to its inevitable conclusion.

James G. Blaine, the brilliant Republican leader in Congress and for three terms Speaker of the House of Representatives, then a member of the Senate for the State of Maine, subsequently Secretary of State in the Cabinet of President Garfield, and the man to whom the nation turned with the greatest confidence in the gloomy weeks that intervened between the shooting and the death of Garfield, next the nominee of the Republicans for President of the United States, and again Secretary of State from March 4, 1889, to June 4, 1891, has passed to the beyond.

Mr. Blaine's illness first took a serious turn in the summer of 1891, after a period of intense mental labor incident to the seizure of the Chilian steamer Itata and the preliminary negotiations regarding the Behring Sea controversy. Mr. Blaine relinquished the active direction of the State Department until early last spring, when he returned to Washington still in an enfeebled condition. He resumed his official duties, however, and in their performance displayed something of his old force. He had, however, several spells of severe indisposition, once being attacked while at a public dinner from which he had to be conveyed to his home very much prostrated.

During early winter the dispatches made frequent reference to Mr. Blaine's condition, but until recently these references were of a general and indefinite nature, the only fact apparent being that he was not as well as he had been during the summer. Two months ago, after having kept to his room for a week or more, he went out for a drive. The day was cold and a chill was the natural result to one in his debilitated condition. In spite of the family's aversion to and efforts to avoid publicity in the matter, it came to be generally understood that there was practically no hope of Mr. Blaine's recovery, and that his death might occur at any time.

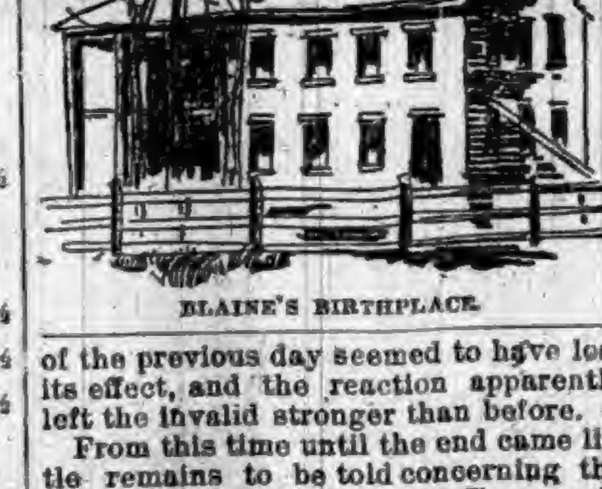
An Organic Disease.

The statement given out by Dr. Johnston was the first admission from any authoritative source, however, that Mr. Blaine was suffering from an organic disease. In all of Mr. Blaine's previous illnesses it has been denied that the sufferer was afflicted in any way that permanently affected his system, and it has been always asserted by those in a position to know that his ailments were due to temporary causes and local conditions which yielded readily to medical treatment. The careful concealment of the real condition of Mr. Blaine's health both by the family and the physicians in attendance induced the general public to believe that he would get well, and the rallies that the naturally vigorous constitution of the invalid had made from all former attacks led most of his friends to expect his recovery upon this as upon all previous occasions.

On the morning of Dec. 18 he had a slight attack of hemorrhage of the lungs, resulting, it is claimed, from the severe cold, and this was followed by a sinking spell, such as afflicted him during his Bar Harbor sickness and upon the occasion of his serious illness in New York some time ago. So severe and so prolonged was this attack that it was believed Mr. Blaine was dying. It continued until 1 o'clock, and at that hour the patient, apparently in his last earthly moments, was surrounded by his family. It was believed even by the two physicians present that he was dying, and the family, giving up all hope, gathered for the final farewell. Suddenly he rallied, and within half an hour he was apparently much better.

The cause of these sinking spells or spasms has always been mysteriously kept secret by the physicians and family, though the public and press have frequently attributed them to Bright's disease of the kidneys; at other times brain trouble was alleged, but the most frequent conclusion was that Mr. Blaine was suffering from kidney disease of some sort. It is now asserted that the disease which has so long and so insidiously undermined his constitution and destroyed his health is what is known as waxy degeneration of the kidneys. To its ravages is attributed the general break-down of his physical system, his remarkable paller during the past few years, and his occasional attacks of illness marked by severe fainting spells.

The following day Mr. Blaine seemed to be considerably better. He sat up up for a short time and talked with members of the family in a very cheerful frame of mind. The sinking spell of the previous day seemed to have lost its effect, and the reaction apparently left the invalid stronger than before.



BLAINE'S BIRTHPLACE.

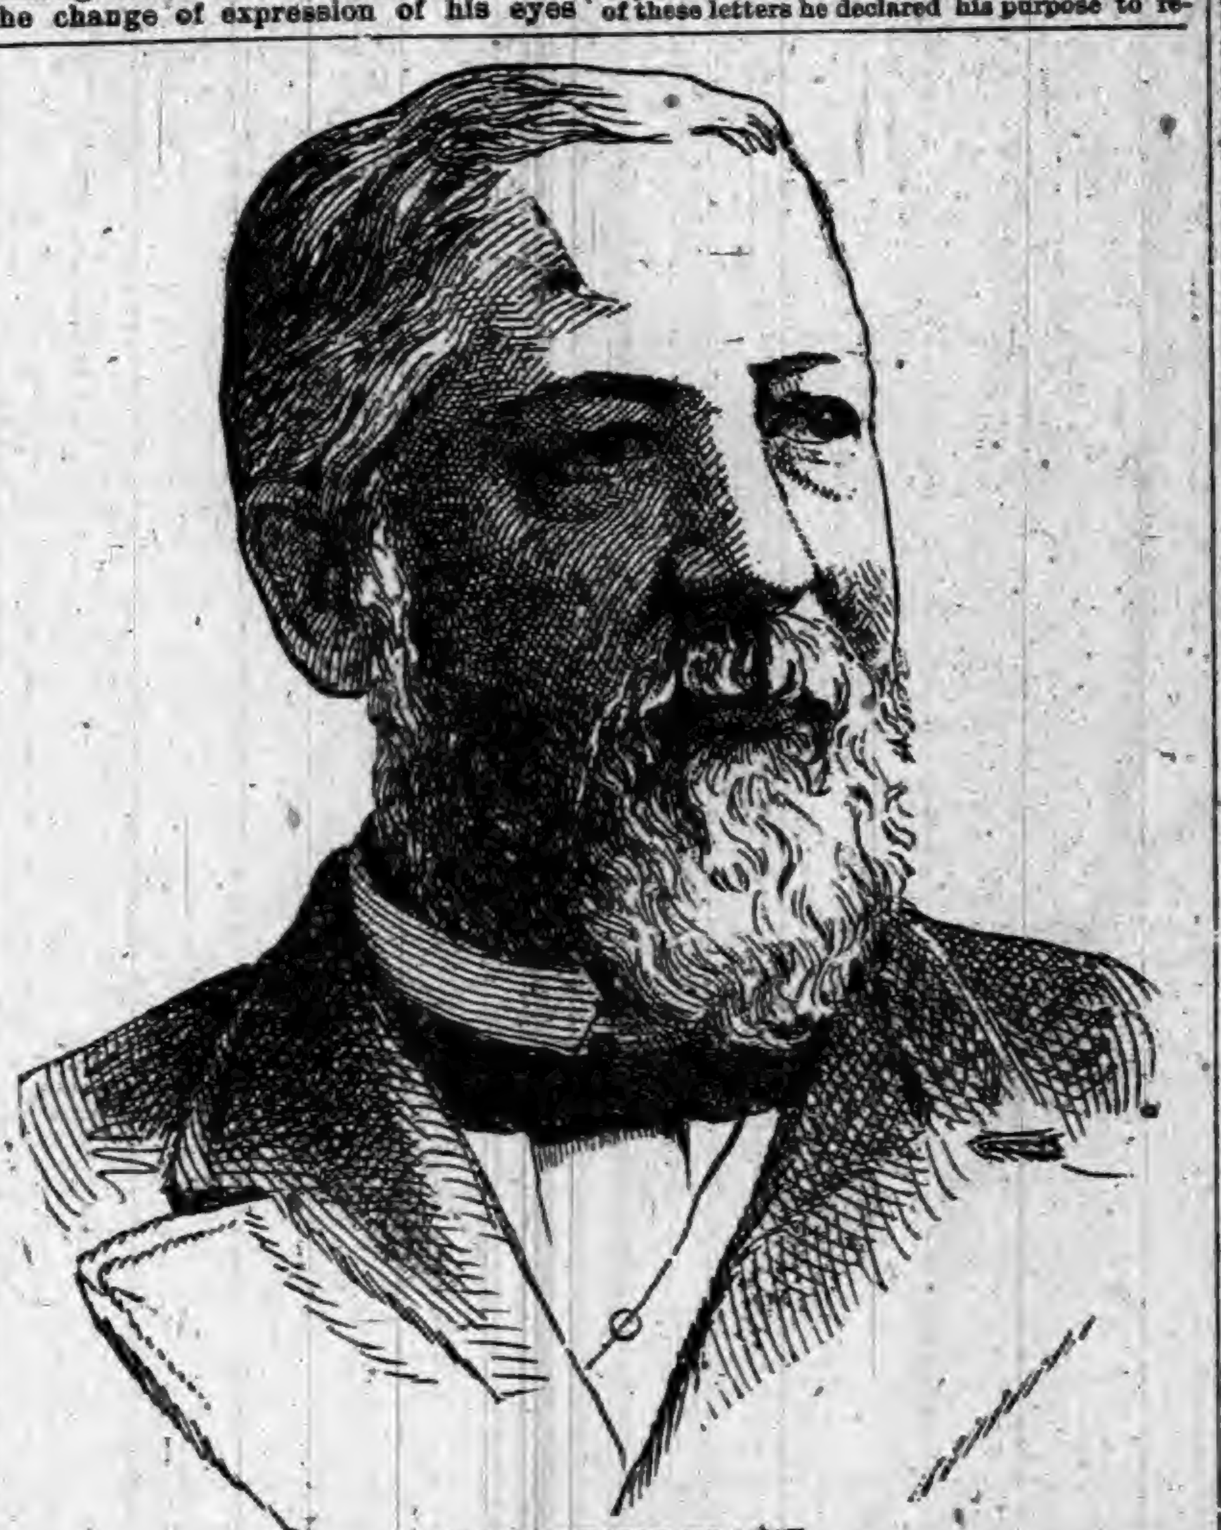
From this time until the end came little remains to be told concerning the great statesman's illness. For nearly another month he lingered on the very brink of the grave. The ablest physicians were almost continuously at his bedside, but their attendance was of no avail other than to make restful the sufferer's last days, for it was well known that he was beyond the aid of medical skill. It was a constant struggle with death, and grim, unconquerable death was the victor.

Breathes His Last

The end came at 11 o'clock Friday morning. Surrounded by his sorrowing wife and family he ceased to live, and the soul of one of the greatest statesmen the world ever knew passed beyond the veil and made its entry into the realm of the unknown.

Throughout Thursday night the end was hourly expected, but the man who had achieved so much in his life seemed ready to give death a battle, be it short and against him. The devoted physicians remained until the end. Ready to administer any stimulant that would extend his life, they found themselves baffled by the insidious disease. When the extraordinary strength of will Mr. Blaine has shown began to succumb to coma, the last of fatal symptoms to manifest itself, efforts became hopeless. Nothing but the original vigor of Mr. Blaine's constitution and his powers of vitality protracted his life so long. As is usual in such cases, he passed away peacefully as one sinking into a profound sleep. Little by little the poison crept through his brain, benumbing his faculties. It was only by constant watching for the cessation of the breath and the stopping of the enfeebled heart that the moment of death could be determined.

To those who were with him at the last he was unable to give any sign of recognition at the end. Shortly before sinking into the fatal and final sleep the change of expression of his eyes showed that he recognized Mrs. Blaine and the physicians. But he was unable to give any further sign.



JAMES GILLESPIE BLAINE.

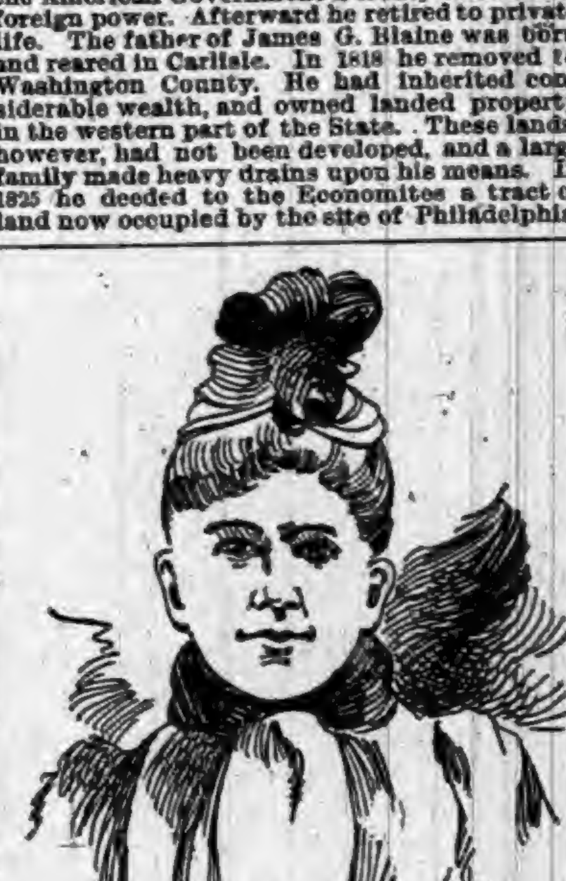
CAREER OF JAMES G. BLAINE.

Striking Features of the Life of the Famous American Statesman.

James Gillespie Blaine, second son of Ephraim L. and Maria Gillespie Blaine, was born at the Indian Hill Farm, Washington County, Pennsylvania, Jan. 31, 1830. The old stone house in which he was born was the first structure of the kind ever erected west of the Monongahela River. It was built by the great-grandfather of Mrs. Gillespie Blaine in 1778, and it now stands within the city limits of West Brownsville.

From his father the son inherited the hardy, energetic qualities of a Scotch-Irish ancestry. Ephraim Blaine, his great-grandfather, was Commissary General of the American army from 1778 to the close of the revolution in 1783. This great-grandfather was possessed of ample means, and during the trying times of deprivation in Valley Forge the continental army was materially aided from his private purse.

The grandfather for whom young Blaine was named, first chose a political career. A protracted stay in Europe, after he had finished his studies, estranged him from his early ambition. He returned to America in 1793, and as a special bearer of dispatches, delivered to the American Government a treaty with some foreign power. Afterward he retired to private life. The father of James G. Blaine was born and reared in Carlisle. In 1818 he removed to Washington County. He had inherited considerable wealth, and owned landed property in the western part of the State. These lands, however, had not been developed, and a large family made heavy drains upon his means. In 1825 he deeded to the Economites a tract of land now occupied by the site of Philadelphia.



MRS. BLAINE.

Other lands, since found rich in minerals, were sold for almost nothing. Mr. Blaine's mother was a woman of strong character and superior intelligence. She was a devout Catholic, but the son adhered to the Presbyterian convictions of his paternal ancestry.

The son James received every advantage of education. In 1842 Mr. Blaine's father was elected prothonotary of the County Court of Washington County. The father was then in poor circumstances and his removal to the county seat enabled him to send the son to college. James entered the freshman class of Washington College in November, 1843. At the age of 17 years and 8 months he was graduated in a class of thirty-three, sharing first honors with John C. Hervey, who was afterward Superintendent of Public Instruction at Wheeling.

Beginning of His Career.

Soon after graduation Mr. Blaine became a teacher in the Western Military Institute at Blue Lick, Ky. Here he met Miss Harriet Stanwood of Maine. Miss Stanwood was a teacher in a seminary for young ladies at Millersburg, and the two were shortly afterward married. Mr. Blaine returned with his wife to Pennsylvania and became a teacher in the Institute for the Blind at Philadelphia. Instruction was chiefly oral and the young teacher was given charge of the higher class in literature and science. For two years Mr. Blaine was associated with the school. In 1854 he moved to Augusta, Me., where he has since made his home. He purchased a half interest in the Kennebec Journal and became its editor. He had a ready faculty for the work, and within three years was a master spirit in State politics.

He engaged ardently in the formation of the Republican party. In 1856 he was a delegate to the first national convention of the Republican party which nominated John C. Fremont for the Presidency. It was shortly afterward, at a public meeting, when he first claimed attention as a public speaker. At this meeting he rendered an official report, stammering in confusion at the outset. But as he proceeded he gained confidence and wound up in a manner which called attention to him as a public orator. In 1857 he broadened his newspaper field by assuming the editorship of the Portland Advertiser. His political genius, however, had eclipsed the journalist within him.

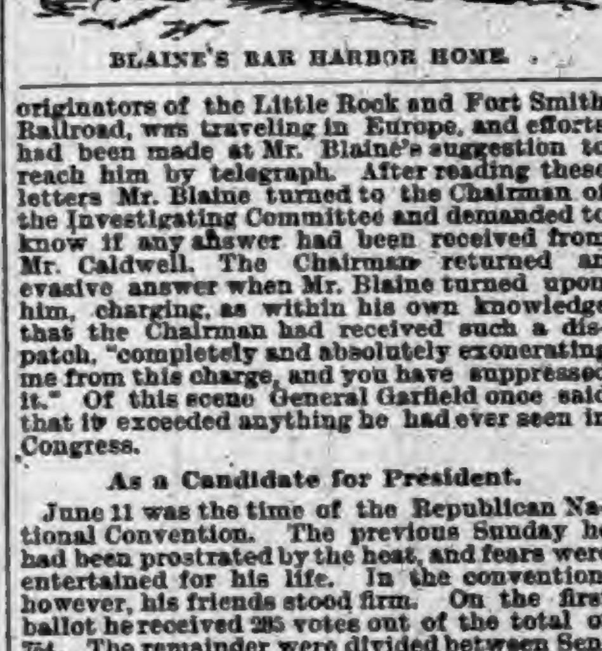
In 1858 he was elected to the State Legislature and was afterward successively chosen for four years. The last two years in the House he served that body as Speaker. At the beginning of the civil war Mr. Blaine gained distinction in the debates which grew out of that crisis. At the time of his election to the Legislature he was made Chairman of the Republican State Committee, and for twenty years he held that office. During this time he led and shaped every political campaign in the State of Maine. He was elected to Congress in 1862 and for a period of eighteen years he was a member of one or the other houses of Congress. His growth in political strength and influence was rapid as it was unbroken. During his first term in Congress he made only one extended speech. This was an argument in favor of the assumption of the State war debts by the general government and contending that the North was able to carry on the war to a final conclusion. He broadened in this argumentative field, however, and gained a reputation as an effective debater.

His Career in Congress.

His career in the National Congress was an eventful one. His antagonism to the Stevens reconstruction bill in 1867 created a stir in the nation, and after a seeming defeat his amendment modifying this proposed military law in the South was carried through both House and Senate. In 1869 Mr. Blaine was elected Speaker of the House, acting in that capacity for six successive years. His career in the House has always been regarded as exceptionally brilliant. The political revulsion of 1874 placed the Democracy in power in the House and Mr. Blaine became the leader of the Republican minority. Preceding the Presidential contest of 1876 the session of the House was a stormy one, and in the general amnesty bill, removing the disabilities of participants in the rebellion, Mr. Blaine stood up for an exception in the case of Jefferson Davis. One of his most notable speeches was made at this time under the spur of opposition from Mr. Hill, of Georgia.

In 1876 he was called upon to defend his political character against charges of bribery from the Union Pacific and other railroad companies. The Mulligan letters were produced and the stormy scenes of May and June of that year followed. June 5 Mr. Blaine, rising to a personal explanation, denied the right of congress to compel the production of his private papers. He expressed his willingness to stand any examination, and having possessed himself of these letters he declared his purpose to reserve nothing. He stood up in the house holding the letters in his hand. "Thank God," said he, "I am not ashamed to show them. There is the very original package. And, with some sense of humiliation, with a mortification I do not attempt to conceal, with a sense of outrage, which, I think, any man in my position would feel, I invite the confidence of forty-four millions of my countrymen while I read these letters from this desk."

At this time Josiah Caldwell, one of the originators of the Little Rock and Fort Smith Railroad, was traveling in Europe, and efforts had been made at Mr. Blaine's suggestion to reach him by telegraph. After reading these letters Mr. Blaine turned to the Chairman of the Investigating Committee and demanded to know if any answer had been received from Mr. Caldwell. The Chairman returned an evasive answer when Mr. Blaine turned upon him, charging, as within his own knowledge that the Chairman had received such a dispatch, "completely and absolutely exonerating me from this charge, and you have suppressed it." Of this scene General Garfield once said that it exceeded anything he had ever seen in Congress.



BLAINE'S BAR HARBOR HOME.

As a Candidate for President.

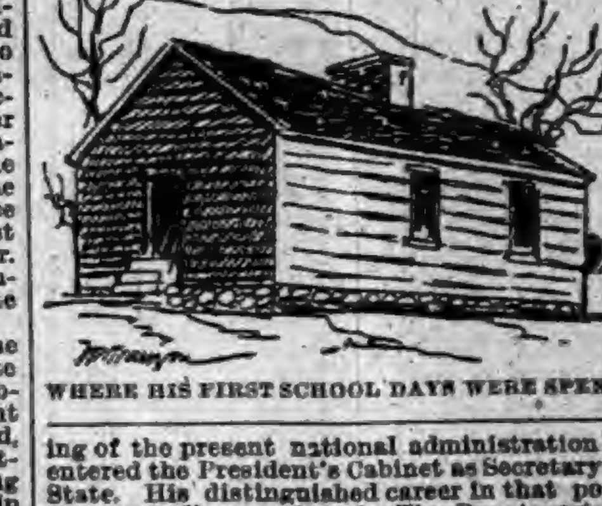
June 11 was the time of the Republican National Convention. The previous Sunday he had been prostrated by the heat, and fears were entertained for his life. In the convention, however, his friends stood firm. On the first ballot he received 285 votes out of the total of 754. The remainder were divided between Senator Morton, Secretary Bristow, Senator Conkling, Gov. Hayes, and others. On the seventh ballot his vote rise to 351, lacking only 28 of a nomination. A combination upon Hayes, however, defeated him.

Mr. Blaine entered the Senate some months later. Again in 1880 his friends of four years before stood by him in the national convention. The first vote stood: Grant, 304; Blaine, 284; Sherman, 93; Edmunds, 34; Washburne, 30; Windom, 10, and Garfield, 1. On the final ballot, however, the Blaine forces united on Garfield, who was nominated. After his election Mr. Blaine was made Secretary of State. He was in the Cabinet ten months. After Garfield's death Mr. Blaine retired from the Cabinet. On his retirement he was for the first time in twenty-three years out of public station. He took up his well-known historical work, "Twenty Years of Congress," and issued the first volume in January, 1884. In this year he was again before the Republican Convention for the nomination to the Presidency. On the fourth ballot he received 541 of the 813 votes and was nominated. President Arthur was his chief competitor. This campaign was a peculiarly bitter one. The result hinged upon New York, which went Democratic and elected Grover Cleveland. He returned at once to his history and completed the second volume in 1886.

Later he traveled extensively in Europe, his health being much broken. At the time of the Republican Convention in 1888 he refused to accept the nomination, cabling from Scotland to the Chicago gathering to that effect. Several months earlier he had written a letter refusing to be considered a candidate.

As Secretary of State.

He worked for the success of Mr. Harrison in the succeeding campaign and at the beginning of the present national administration he entered the President's Cabinet as Secretary of State. His distinguished career in that position is well remembered. The Pan-American Congress, the reciprocity treaties, and other striking incidents, rendered his work remarkable. Owing to personal differences with the President he resigned his position in the Cabinet a few days before the meeting of the Nation Convention of his party. Though a short time before he had declined in set terms to be a candidate before the convention he permitted his friends to use his name. On the first ballot, however, President Harrison was renominated. Though in bad health Mr. Blaine wrote a letter and made a speech for his party during the campaign lately closed.



WHERE HIS FIRST SCHOOL DAYS WERE SPENT.

HERCULILE, the new French explosive, is so powerful that half a pound of it, in a recent test, displaced a stone weighing thirty tons.—Peoria Journal.

INDIANA LEGISLATURE.

Senator Gage's bill, increasing the price of convict labor to ninety-five cents per day, was, Monday, referred to the Committee on Labor.

In the House the "Age of Consent" bill, changing the age from 12 to 14 years, was passed. The House after much debate, passed the Hench bill, punishing persons who bring stolen property into the State.

Several amendments were reported by the Committee on Constitutional Amendments. Among them were making the terms of all County officers four years, and rendering the incumbents ineligible for reelection for eight years; enabling the State to tax gross and net receipts of corporations; to increase the regular legislative session to 100 days.

A judiciary ripper bill, cutting the number of circuits from fifty-four to forty-four, has been prepared. The committee investigating the Prison North affair, return with nothing but praise of the management. At a caucus it developed that the Cullop bill was unpopular and will be defeated. It provided for the appointment of boards for public institutions by the Governor.

BOTH branches of the Legislature spent their time Tuesday discussing small bills, and the Senate was entirely without feature. The House passed a bill to limit the powers of township trustees and another exempting parsonages from taxation, while it killed one limiting the jurisdiction of justices of the peace, and another adding insanity to the statutory grounds for divorce. Mr. Dalman introduced the same bill brought into the Senate the day before, appropriating $200,000 to the School for Feeble Minded at Fort Wayne. Of this $110,000 is asked for a new building and $60,000 for the purchase of a farm.

In the Senate a bill making it obligatory on county commissioners in towns of 5,000 inhabitants to establish work-houses where no city work-house exists, and authorizing the commissioners to purchase property, erect buildings and pay for the same, was passed. The Committee on Railroads recommended the passage of Senator Chandler's bill asking that passenger trains stop at all county-seats.

THE House, Wednesday, passed the Cullop bill, increasing the jurisdiction of the Appellate Court, sending to it all cases involving $3,500 or less. After a long argument it killed McMullin's bill, requiring that school boards be elected by the people, instead of by the city councils, as at present, and, after a long controversy, it killed Magenity's anti-prize fighting bill, which imposes heavy penalties on all concerned, but defined prize fighting as "fighting with less than two-ounce gloves."

The Senate Special Committee to redistrict the judicial circuits of the State reported its gerrymander, of the courts, and, after a long argument, the report was accepted. The Senate passed a number of minor bills and one important one, extending the term of munincipal officers to four years instead of two, as at present.

Representative Sulzer of Madison, introduced a concurrent resolution in the House Thursday, setting forth that the law was being constantly violated by the Roby Race Track Association, and that the officials of Lake County were conniving thereat. The resolution called for a special joint committee of investigation and suggested a line of inquiry. No action was taken, a reference being made to the Committee on Rights and Privileges without debate.

The House passed the Union Label bill, introduced at the instance of organized labor. This bill is designed to protect labels and by authority of labor unions from use by unauthorized parties.

Among the new bills was one leaving it optional with County Commissioners whether they issue a license to sell intoxicants in the County or not.

There was also a bill to prevent the piping of natural gas outside the State by limiting the pressure in mains to 200 pounds per square inch.

The Senate spent several hours discussing McLain's bill conferring upon the Governor the appointment of the Benevolent and Penal Boards. The bill was ordered engrossed. Mr. McLain styles the bill as "an act to prevent legislative log-rolling."

BOTH branches of the Legislature, Friday morning, adjourned until Monday out of respect to the memory of ex-Secretary James G. Blaine.

The Telephone in Spain.

"The American managers of the telephone have not given your people the full benefit of their invention," said Seraphino Yglesia of Madrid. "Now, we in Spain have a much better system than you have here, and we use it to a better advantage. We have a grand park there—the Retiro. In it we have all the amusements—theaters, toboggan slides, carousals, bull fights, operas, everything. It is of the opera that I want to speak particularly. If you will sit in the stalls close up to the stage you will see just in front of each footlight a little tin box. You will wonder what it is there for. Well, if you have a telephone at your house you can communicate with the Central Exchange and your telephone will be connected with one of those boxes on the stage of the opera house, and if the weather is bad you can sit there at home and listen to every note and hear as plainly as though you were in the opera house. You don't have to hold the receiver to your ear. Oh, no. The system in use there does away with that. The receiver and transmitter are combined in a little shelf of corrugated metal. You talk to it and the sound goes over the wire; you listen and the sound comes from it. Thus you may read your book and listen to the opera too. Isn't it better than your system?"—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Girls and boys, especially girls, don't allow yourselves to get into the habit that many grown people have of, when called upon for an opinion of somebody or something of whom or which they inwardly disapprove, drawling out, "v-e-r-y n-i-c-e." The attempt to hide disapprobation, envy (a fault to which poor human nature is sadly prone), and several other disagreeable things under the thin veil afforded by these two words is most transparent. Better tell an honest falsehood, if I may use the expression, and accord an emphatic approbation than to employ this weak, halfway one, which is so easily seen through. Or, better yet, come out boldly with the truth. 'Twon't sting a bit more than "v-e-r-y n-i-c-e."—Detroit Free Press.

Expenses of Royalty.

The Queen of England is allowed in one form or another the sum of $1,929,000 annually. The Prince of Wales receives $200,000, his Princess $50,000. Prince Albert Victor received $50,000; the Crown Princess of Russia, $40,000; the Duke of Edinburgh, $125,000; the Princess Christian, $30,000; the Duke of Connaught, $125,000, and the numerous others various sums, the grand total reaching the enormous sum of $2,834,000.

A good story, even when the same man continues to repeat it, has a tendency to grow like a rolling snowball. An instance is furnished by a German paper.

"So our friend Bushler went to the top of Mont Blanc?" said one man to another.

"Not at all."

"But he said so."

"True. Two months ago, when he returned from Switzerland, he said he had been at the foot of Mont Blanc. Since then he has gradually lied himself to the top."

ROASTER & BAKER
FOR MEATS, FOWL, FISH, ETC., AND FOR BAKING BREAD, CAKES AND PUDDINGS.
BEST
AND CHEAPEST

THE STEAM produced by the process of cooking cannot escape, is absorbed by the article in the roaster, and acts as a basting. There is no evaporation, no drying up or burning; hence no shrinkage or loss of weight, and all the flavor and nutritious qualities of the food are retained. Tough meats are made tender, and any article roasted or baked will be sweeter, healthier and more digestible. Put the food in the roaster, place the roaster in a well heated oven; the roaster will do the cooking. It requires no attention. Can only be bought from dealers, the trade supplied by:

ROCK ON ELMWOOD HILL.

An Irish-American Romance, Written for This Paper.

BY WILLIAM J. FLORENCE.

CHAPTER I.

A BIT OF IRELAND IN AMERICA.

The town of Elmwood used to be a farming suburb of New York City. Now its boundaries are obliterated, and it is a section of the city lying between Central Park and the Riverside Drive, and nearly built up with fine residences. Between the time of these two conditions it had a period of occupation by small gardeners and others, who lived in the humbler kind of homes, some of which were mere huts on the rocks. The grading of the streets left some of these structures at a conspicuous elevation, and the artists of the magazines and other illustrated periodicals were fond of sketching these picturesque views. The poorer shanties were occupied by squatters, but the next grade better yielded ground rent, however slight it might be, to the owners of the land. But there came a point in the extension of the city's building limits when, by means of a city ordinance, these objects were swept out of existence.

The early moon of an August evening was shining on Elwood Hill and was favorably lighting it up as a remarkably close resemblance of a rural scene in Ireland. On the shelving rock stood two cabins, composed of a miscellaneous collection of materials, yet formed into a rude semblance of cottages. Vines covered some of the lack of architecture, and the moon was not severe in exposing the points of ugliness. They leaned against each other, back to back, as though for mutual support, each being conscious of its own structural frailty. A pig-sty was close by, and a pen for goats, while small patches of garden had been made of the soil which covered a portion of the stone. Up the ledge a stairway led, by means of an interspersion of rock-hewn and board-built steps, from the street to the cabins. Up this ascent climbed a policeman in uniform. He had been detailed to serve notices of ejectment to the inhabitants of Shanty Town, as the neighborhood was commonly called, and his day's task had reached into the evening, ending with this visit to the homes of the O'Rourkes and the Beggs. The occasion was, indeed, like that of an eviction in Ireland. There had been plenty of warning, however, and when Phelim O'Rourke, smoking in front of his door, saw the officer approaching, he knew the errand before it was delivered. The visitor simply handed a paper to him, and delivered a similar one into the adjacent premises of the Beggs. O'Rourke put on a pair of iron-bowed spectacles, shielded the flame of a match with his palm, and by the flickering light slowly read the formal notice. A learned man in his way was O'Rourke. He had once taught school in his native Ireland, and his head was full of book learning which had no practical value to him in actual utility. He was a vague dreamer, an inventor of wildly impracticable theories, and altogether a man entirely unsuited to earn a living in a city where adaptability is the first element of personal success. Instead of making and realizing simple plans for the support of himself and his wife, he gave his thoughts to almost if not quite irrational philosophizing.

It was different with his son, Donnell O'Rourke, a handsome young fellow, who joined him. His hair had the auburn of Ireland in its close-cropped efforts to be curly; his face bore the open good-humor of his race; in a peasant costume, instead of the clothes of a New-Yorker, he would have looked like a veritable "broth of a boy"; but his tongue had lost the brogue of his native land, for he had emigrated in childhood. Even his father's Irish speech was but faintly characteristic, as he handed the document to Donnell and asked him what he thought of that.

"I think it is time we quit the shanty and the rock, anyhow," was the spirited reply. "I'm earning $12 a week as a lawyer's clerk, and in a year I'll be a lawyer myself. If you can somehow bring in as much, father, we can afford to live in better quarters."

The one lacking thing to complete the Irish-American scene agreeably was a pretty colleen, and she came into it from the residence of the Beggs. Wide-open gray eyes, with dark lashes, had Nora Begg, and the clear white of her cheeks was freckled like the stipple of an engraved face. She seemed younger by two or three years than Donnell, who was 20, and like him she had been brought across the ocean too early in life to leave the brogue of Ireland on her tongue. A modest girl, and a neatly dressed one, was this New York colleen of Elmwood Rock. Close dwellers there had she and Donnell been, and closer yet had their hearts become. When she was told that the eviction was a certainty, and thereupon Donnell asked her to walk with him, she blushed a little, but took his arm, and it was evident that their conversation would relate to the question of a future home. Even the abstracted Phelim O'Rourke vaguely understood that, as he watched them out of sight.

While Phelim O'Rourke was still meditating upon the document, his neighbor, Micky Begg, zigzagged up the stairway. Micky was a sad example of intemperance, and he had just returned from the "berren" of old Pete McGlathery. As the bottle was passed around very freely after old Pete was put under the ground, Micky was full to the back teeth. To show his sobriety he called upon O'Rourke to see him jump from the three-legged stool, which stood by the doorstep, to the bottom of the washtub. He put himself in position and said: "See me lep, and then say if I'm dhrunk. Hurroo!"

"Are you comin' in, Micky?" came in a woman's feeble voice from within, for poor Mrs. Begg was a helplessly, hopelessly bedridden invalid.

"Divil a step till O'Rourke sees me lep from the tub to the stool. I can lep like a goat, me darlin!" And giving a spring in the air Micky came down with a thud, nearly crushing a goat that was comfortably sleeping near the cabin door.

"A nice example you are, Micky," said O'Rourke, solemnly, "to come from a funeral as drunk as a piper. Get up, Micky, here comes the priest."

Sure enough, Father Hanley, who was returning from old McGlathery's funeral, came along. Micky had picked himself up, brushed the mud from his clothes, and put himself on the stool before the Father came up.

"How are you, Phelim?" said the priest. "And the children? Well, I hope, God bless them!"

"Yes, Father, they are well and can eat as well as any childer on the rocks. I wish you would spake to Micky, Father. He wants looking after. To-morrow morning he has to be up bright and airly, for we're going to be evicted. Look at him as drunk as a fiddler."

"Yes," said the priest. "I watched him at the funeral. The death of old McGlathery should be a warning to him. That sinner did not draw a sober breath for many months. Do you hear me, Micky?" said the priest, shaking up his stupid parishioner.

"Don't you want to buy him, Father?" replied Micky. "He's as fat as butter."

"He's thinking of selling the pig," said O'Rourke apologetically. "It's got to be made a riddance of, and he's drunk enough to fancy he's back in Ireland—bound for a fair with the porker."

"Listen, Micky," said the priest. "You see how that toper McGlathery died, did ye not? What can you expect to gain by this constant inebriety? Think of McGlathery's end, my man!"

"He'll roast like pipe clay," replied Micky, in a maudlin manner, his eyes now half opened, and tears running down his cheeks. "And," he continued, "if it wasn't for the black spot on his belly he'd bring more'n I'm axin."

"Oh, you are incorrigible, Micky," said the priest, as he roared with laughter at his parishioner's answers.

A shout of laughter was heard as three pretty, bright-faced children came up the hillside, and, with hands filled with wild flowers, came running toward th priest, who received them with a kiss for one, an embrace for another, and taking the smallest in his arms held her high in the air till she laughed with childish glee. They were O'Rouke's youngsters, and had stayed till dark in Central Park, thus getting home by moonlight.

"Well, darlings, I'm glad to see ye this blessed summer evening. You are all as pretty as the flowers, and reflect great credit on your loving mother, who takes such good care of you."

It is something to be remembered, the fondness the Irish children have for the priest. The appearance of "The Father" in an Irish village is the signal for a general assembling of the children, who run toward the good man, and, climbing around his legs, with shouts of welcome, hug and kiss him in token of their love and veneration. The rocks of Elmwood presented the same characteristics.

"Run into the house, my darlings," said Father Hanley. "I want to speak to Mr. Begg on a matter of business. Come here, Micky; you are sober enough to listen to what I have to say. Lady Maud Tennisom, from the big house at Kilrona, where you came from, has written me a letter. She was very fond of your Nora before you emigrated. She has lost her own daughter since then, and she writes that she constantly thinks of her dead pet's foster-sister, Nora."

"Yes, father," said Micky, now perfectly sober from his short nap. "Her ladyship was always fond of Nora, and Nora seemed quite taken wid her, too. She is a true, good lady, and a Christian woman. Sure, didn't she put a beautiful stone over the corpse of ould Carolan in Kilrona Abbey, at her own expense, the darlin', and ain't she loved by the poor people from one end of Loch Dermid to the other. God bless her!"

"Listen to me, Micky, if you're sober enough to comprehend. Lady Maud writes that she will adopt Nora as her own daughter, if she can get a complete and legal release from her parents. I suppose it's Oonah that I must see about it."

"Yes, yer reverence. It's the mother that decides."

"Is she able to see me?"

"Plaze come in and try."

The priest entered the cabin and found the bed-ridden Oonah Begg lying awake on her couch. She was feeble with an incurable malady, which had been caused by a street railway accident a year before and which was sure to result in her death at no distant day. He gave her a priestly blessing and then delivered his errand—very gently and considerately, for he knew that no true mother could at once tolerate the suggestion of giving away her daughter. When he had at length read the letter to her and she fully comprehended it, she cried:

"Oh, I couldn't do it, Father. I couldn't. It would kill me."

"It is a pity it isn't Dolf that somebody wants," the priest exclaimed, "and not the daughter that is a comfort to you."

"Don't say one word, if ye plaze, against me boy. May be he isn't what he ought to be, but I am in hopes he will come around in time."

"Well, I hope so," and the priest indulged in the frankness of advice common to his profession in dealing with the poor and ignorant of their parishes; "but he'll have to mend a deal to become a good boy. I see him too much with the toughs and the gangs. But there, don't cry, Oonah. We'll try to reform Dolf; and as to Nora, think the matter over. Remember, she will receive a good education and become a grand lady. Won't that be a satisfaction to you, for you know that you haven't long to remain with her. Think it over, Oonah."

Father Hanley emerged from the cabin to find Phelim O'Rourke and Micky Begg engaged in a dialogue in which the talk is all being done by Phelim. That learned and erratic man was discoursing upon a subject which, so he was telling, he had elucidated in a speech on the previous evening before the Kosmic Klub. That was a body which met in the back room of a saloon, and was composed of a dozen all but irrational theorists, each one of whom consented to listen to the whimsicalities of the rest for the sake of being heard patiently when his own turn came. They were so thoroughly at variance with all established things that they wouldn't even spell the name of their club in accordance with the dictionary, and at times they took to adopting long resolutions directing how the affairs of the universe ought to be conducted. Phelim O'Rourke was about the oddest of them all. The address that he had delivered, and about which he was talking to the befuddled Micky, he had forwarded as a theory which, even to his companions, seemed singular indeed. It had kept them so interested that they had neglected the convivial function of the club. Their beer glasses had been empty for a quarter of an hour before he finished, but upon his conclusion the mugs were quickly filled, and the overtopping foam ran down their sides to the table.

"Here is to the hope," said one, "that Mr. O'Rourke's theory may never be tested on O'Rourke's self." That was drank with noisy laughter, so O'Rourke confessed in his account to his neighbor. And yet he declared that he had impressed his fellow-members immensely.

"You've brains enough and to spare, Phelim," said the priest, after listening to enough of the concluding narrative to understand that O'Rourke was full of some new, strange and impracticable doctrine of his own invention. "Why don't you use your education sensibly, as your son Donnell does? He'll be a successful lawyer one day, for he's strengthening his head by good work, while you're addling yours with your philosophical rubbish."

While the priest was speaking Dolf Begg came up the stairway, gave to the priest a none too respectful "good-evening," and slouched into his humble home. He was not an ill-looking fellow, but his manner betrayed bad habits and a reckless disposition. The three men conversed a few minutes about the impending eviction. Then they were startled by an outcry. It was the feeble yet shrill voice of Oonah Begg, and they hurried into her cabin to find out what was the matter with her. She lay with her eyes closed, and exhaustion expressed in her thin, wan face. Dolf Begg, her hulking son, sat in a chair tipped back against the wall, with his arms folded hard, one leg crossed stiffly over the other, and his scowling brows so lowered over his eyes that only half their evil light was visible.

"What is it?" Father Hanley asked, taking a seat on the edge of the bed, and holding one of the invalid's hands. "Has the boy been doing anything to you?"

"That's right!" Dolf exclaimed. "Ask her—don't ask me. Of course, she'll tell you the truth, and I won't."

"Did he strike you?" the priest asked, seeing a red mark on the woman's wrist, as though she had warded off a blow.

"He didn't strike me," she responded. "He tried to rob me. He knew my hundred dollars had been drawn from the savings bank, that I had it here under my pillow. It's part av what the railroad folks gave me fer the accident and now we've got to use it fer the hirin' of a place to live in. When he thought I was fast aslape, he comes in on tiptoe, and feels fer it. But I was awake, and I screamed with all me might, which wasn't much. I'm sorry to tell it av him, but, sure, the priest ought to know it. And I had to call fer help, fer he'd have stolen me money."

The priest patted the woman's hand, and said soothingly: "Never mind it—never mind it." But turning to the young man, he addressed him with bitter emphasis: "Dolf, I knew you were a brute. How it came to be so I don't know, for your dying mother here is a good woman, and your father's one fault is the drink. I have known of your striking your poor, helpless mother, and that is both ferocious and cowardly. Now you've turned thief—a most contemptible thief—for you'd steal the very money that she received in payment for her life. Dolf, take my warning. You'll come to some bad end if you don't reform yourself."

Dolf said nothing, but sullenly unfolded his arms, uncrossed his legs, picked up his hat and slouched out of the cabin. He stamped down the stairs to the street, and bent his steps toward the groggery, where his gang congregated, bound to get drunk if whisky could be obtained without money.

Micky Begg was sober by this time, and his customary affection for his wife manifested itself in the exclamation: "I'll thrash the devil out of him—that's what I'll do."

"Don't do that," Oonah said. "Lave him to Father Hanley. May be he'll be sorry when I'm dead, and do better." She closed her eyes and was silent for a minute; then she said, with a sad smile: "There's pleasant news. Anyhow, it's pleasant to me. The doctor was here. He said I wouldn't live longer than six months at the most. There, Micky, don't be sorry. Af I thought me sufferings—me days and nights av dreadful, dreadful pain—was going to last longer I'd be in despair. But the doctor is certain about it. He says I'll die within six months."

"And there's no possibility of your recovery?" Phelim O'Rourke inquired, with a singular manifestation of interest. "You've got to lie here, and do nothing but suffer, and wait for death?"

The priest and the neighbor bade the Beggs good-night, and departed.

CHAPTER II.

MICKY AND THE WITCH.

At daylight next morning Micky started for the stockyard at the river's side underneath Washington Heights, driving the pig before him. He felt full of Irish patriotism, for was he not almost taking a pig to the fair? And wasn't the proceeds to go to pay the ground rent of his doomed cabin, before the eviction of the family, and the demolition of the structure? Micky lighted his pipe, and as he trudged along the road would whistle a bar or two of some reel or jig between the whiffs of his "dudheen," while his mind was filled with Lady Maud's request to bring up Nora as her own. "Why not?" thought Micky. "Heaven knows we have as much as we can do to bring up the little wans, and if one was gone there'd be more for the rest;" and then, as if ashamed of this selfish view of the matter, he muttered: "No; give away me own flesh and blood? No; better starve foorst." And then the idea of Nora becoming a fine lady and riding in her carriage, while people would take off their hats to her, took possession of Micky's brain. "Why not, indade? Sure, she's as pretty as Lord Lorton's daughter, and maybe I'd get a chance to be a gatekeeper or roadmaster on the estate. Begorra, Nora can go! We'll all be rich one of these days."

"G'long there, ye divil," as the pig tugged at the rope around his neck, and with the natural disposition inherent in pigs to go the wrong way, he darted between Micky's legs, upsetting him. The rope slipped from his neck, the pig started back the road he had come. Micky picked himself up and ran in pursuit with many a wild and wicked oath. "Bad luck to ye as a racer; but I'll pay ye off for this when I catch ye," said Micky as he ran for dear life after the porker. When he captured the pig, which he did after a long chase, he struck upon a new idea. "I'll put the rope around his waist," said he, "and then, begorra, I can drive him either way."

The stockyard was reached in an hour, and Micky sought a purchaser, but no one seemed inclined to buy a single pig. He saw them in the pens by the thousand, but they had come by car loads from the West, and there was nobody to buy one lone pig. Noon passed without giving poor Micky an opportunity to dispose of his charge.

"Come here, avick," said he, addressing a little ragged boy. "Hould this darlin' while I go to take a bite. I'm hungry and must eat, or I'll drop with the waitin'." And giving the pig in charge of the boy, Micky skipped off to a shebeen, where he disposed of two great pieces of bread and took three noggins of whisky in the space of half an hour.

"Ah, ha, Tommy! how are ye, me bould buck? Come, have a noggin wid me," said Micky.

And another drink was the result. Now, Tommy took a turn at treating, and down went two more glasses. By this time Micky was half drunk, and the thought of the pig took possession of him.

"Hould hard, Tommy," said he, refusing another glass; "I'll drink no more till I sell the pig."

And he zig-zagged back to the yard.

"Here is the owner," said the boy, who by this time had got tired of his charge, and was talking to a well-to-do looking man; "here's the man as owns de pig."

"Do you want to buy him?" asked Micky, addressing the man, who was an overseer.

He laughed at the proposal first, but seeing that Micky was in earnest he listened to it. A bargain was struck and the pig transferred to the custody of the new proprietor, while Micky returned to the shebeen to spend the "luck penny" with his old friend, Tommy Kane. Drink after drink was now the order of the day, until Micky had spent a dollar of the money he had received for the pig, and was so drunk he could hardly stand. Tommy had dropped in a dark corner of the shebeen and gone fast asleep.

It was quite dark when Micky started homeward, and with much difficulty he picked his way through the park skirting the Hudson and toward his cabin, two miles away. Micky was not so drunk as to forget the letter from Lady Maud and her desire to adopt little Nora, and as he staggered from one side to the other he would hiccough out: "Me little Nora will be a foine leddy, and me, her feyther, will be a gentlemin, begorra."

He was now approaching a deep cut at the foot of 104th street. This was a place which Elmwood tradition said was peopled by fairies. But Micky was filled with courage, for the whisky had fired his blood, and he did not care a straw for man or devil. So, with an effort to steady his pace, and wrapping his long coat around his legs, he boldly plodded on. He had not proceeded more than a quarter of a mile before the whisky began to die within him, and he felt impelled to sit down on a rock by the wayside.

Strange music was heard, as if from afar; so soft and distinct that the faintest sound came to Micky's bewildered ears. Nearer and nearer it came; now a trifle louder, now dying away in the distance. Suddenly the grass at Micky's feet became strangely illuminated with tiny glass lamps, which hung like lighted dewdrops from each blade of grass, while hundreds of little figures, little men and women dressed in spangled green, danced and leaped about, keeping time to the fairy music. These tiny creatures were not larger than pins, yet were perfect in form and features. They were a merry set, and clapped their hands with glee, as they laughed and shouted in the moonlight. Presently from their midst came one, a queer-looking old fellow, with a large red nose and the most comical of faces. His little eyes had a merry twinkle, and though he was no bigger than Micky's little finger, he pushed aside his companions, who seemed to hold him in great esteem, for they ceased their dancing and shouting at his approach, and bowed most respectfully to him as he climbed up Micky's leg and took a seat on his shoulder.

"Oh, bedad, but this is a quare party I've got into," said Micky, as he glanced at the little old man on his shoulder.

"How are you, me darlin'," chattered the old man, while the myriads of tiny creatures at his feet peeped from their shelter behind stalks, blades of grass and grains of sand, as if intent on Micky's reply.

"Would you like a drink of whisky, me darlin'?" again queried the leprachaun, for the old fellow was none other.

"I would indeed," said Micky. "My mouth is as dry as a lime burner's heel."

"Come along, then," said the old man, jumping from Micky's shoulder to his knee and with another jump to the ground. He led the bewildered Irishman across the road to a cabin, well lighted and warm, in strong contrast to the dark pathway. Thousands of little fairies, each with his little lamp lighted up, were in front of him.

"Across the road! By the powers, I'm afraid I'll step on some of yer friends here and crush a few thousand of them wid me feet."

"Never mind them," said the old man, "they can take care of themselves; they will leave us at the door."

And sure enough, the moment Micky and his companion reached the door of the cabin the tiny guardians flew away, their lamps shining like myriads of fireflies in the darkness. Micky and his conductor entered the cabin. Across at the back stood a little bar or drinking stand, on which were arranged bottles of various colors. With a bound the old fairy jumped upon the counter, and dancing a tattoo with his heels summoned a fearfully wrinkled old lady with pointed chin and weazened face.

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

Dancing Birds.

The love of dancing is found throughout the animal world, shown more conspicuously in butterflies and other insects, but also in large birds and even in beasts. The "Naturalist in La Plata," has lately added some very curious instances to those accumulated by Darwin and others, showing the delight certain birds take in moving together on the ground after a set fashion, which does not vary.

The Janaca, a lar[illegible] rail, with very long toes and beautiful greenish-gold feathers under the wings, stops feeding every little while, rushes to one spot to the number of six or a dozen, and then all move about in a cluster with wings raised. The Ypecaha, a true rail, does the same, but prepares smooth places beforehand for the dances, as our prairie chicken is said to do. Both these birds scream loudly while dancing. The most novel as well as the most singular performance is that of the spun winged lapwings.

These have a ceremonial for the reception of a visitor. They live in pairs, but often one lapwing will leave its mate and approach a pair. The latter advance to meet it, and place themselves side by side behind their guest. All three begin to march in that order, the leader emitting loud notes at regular intervals, the pair keeping up a stream of sound like the roll of a drum. Then all three stop. The leader raises his wings and stands erect and motionless, still uttering loud notes; while the other two, with puffed-out plumage and standing exactly abreast, stoop forward and downward until the tips of their beaks touch the ground, and sinking their rythmical voices to a murmur, remain for some time in that position. The guest then departs to its mate, and they in turn receive a visitor with the same ceremonies.

Short-lived Anger.

In recounting his experience, a pearl diver says that one of the strange effects of diving is the invariable bad temper felt while working at the bottom of the sea; and as this usually passes away as soon as the surface is reached, it may be supposed to be due to the pressure of the air inside of the dress, affecting the lungs and through them the brain. A diver often becomes so angry at some imaginary wrong-doing on the part of those in the boat above that he gives the signal to be pulled up, "with the intention of knocking the heads off the entire crew," only to forget what he came up for when the surface is reached.

AN AWFUL FALL.

It Was Two Miles, but the Faller Was Not Hurt.

The experimenter was Lieut. Mansfield, of the Royal Naval Reserve, says London Invention. He made his ascent from the Victoria Gardens recently, sitting upon a trapeze immediately beneath the balloon, to which was also attached a parachute of a new fashion. The whole rose to a height which rendered even the big balloon itself scarcely visible in the cloudless sky. It was now, as appears from this brave seaman's narrative, at an altitude of 11,400 feet, or more than two miles, commanding a vast horizon, but the voyager's hand were so numbed that he was becoming unable to feel the cords. "Then," says Lieut. Mansfield, "finding my apparatus all clear, I took the balloon ring in my right hand, drew myself clear of the trapeze and dropped down into space." After descending with terrible velocity for some distance the parachute began to open. At 10,200 feet he was falling at a great speed, but was fully able to control the apparatus. At 10,000 feet he was sailing down calmly into space. Then he drifted to and fro in various counter currents, and at 1,000 feet exactly felt the heat from a long, red, iron chimney. Now comes the more remarkable part of the narrative: "Steering my parachute," he continued, "to the eastward, I dropped her rapidly to clear the buildings ahead, and, seeing nothing but houses to descend on, I selected the flattest I could find and dropped gently down on it." A spectator who watched the voyage from the gardens gives a vivid account of straining the eyes till he was just able to discern a tiny white speck on the blue sky. After what seemed a terrible length of time, Lieut. Mansfield became visible swinging under the parachute and working the valve lines so as to insure a safe landing when he chose to make it. "Such a complete master of the air," says the eye-witness, "has never been seen before in this country." The balloon fell, as was intended, in the sea, where, being fitted with cork belts for the purpose, it was easily recovered. Lieut. Mansfield, who looks for great advantages from his manageable parachute in naval operations, has announced that his next ascent will be with an entirely new apparatus, specially adapted to military warfare.

COLUMBIAN STAMPS.

Souvenir Postage Will Be the Thing During '93.

The new souvenir stamps can be had in all denominations. There are 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 10, 15 and 30 cent stamps, and also $1, $2, $3, $4 and $5 ones. Each series has a picture representing the leading events in the life of Columbus, and each is of a different color. The $5 stamp is black, and has a portrait of Columbus, the same as on the souvenir coin. The stamp, of course, which will be most commonly used is the 2-cent, and is the handsomest in design and color of any in the lot. It is of a maroon color and presents a miniature engraving of the famous painting, "The Landing of Columbus." At the top it bears the dates 1492 and 1892, as do all the others, over the line "United States of America." Below that is the line indicating the value of the stamp, and then the picture, under which is the line to designate the incident it illustrates.

Pilatre de Rozier.

The first aeronaut who fell victim to his desire of exploiting the upper air was Pilatre de Rozier who, a few months after the balloon had been invented, declared his purpose of ascending in one and allowing it to take him whither it would. The French king, however, frowned upon the project, and sent Pilatre word that the experiment should be made by sending up two condemned criminals. But Pilatre indignantly refused this offer. "What!" said he, "shall vile criminals have the glory of being the first to navigate the fields of air? Never, while Pilatre de Rozier draws breath!"

He agitated the subject until the entire court became interested in his favor, and then, at last, the King yielded, and Pilatre, in November, 1783, made a perfectly successful ascent. Benjamin Franklin was a witness of the spectacle, and said, when some one asked his opinion of it, "I have seen a child born which may one day be a man."

Two years after, another aeronaut crossed the Channel from Dover to Calais, and Pilatre, spurred on by jealousy, declared his purpose of crossing it in the opposite direction.

His friends endeavored to dissuade him from the project, believing that the machine had not been sufficiently perfected, but nothing could calm his enthusiasm.

In June a balloon was ready, but it may easily be seen that Pilatre was not very confident of success, since he pushed back an army officer who would have stepped into the car with him, saying, gently:

"Monsieur, in our present enterprise we are sure of nothing. I cannot accept you, if I would have my conscience at peace."

The balloon rose majestically and tended at once toward the sea. Presently it turned, but again drifted back in the direction of the water. Then it is probable that Pilatre endeavored to descend, in order to reach a more favorable current of air, but in opening the valve, according to one account, he unfortunately made a rent in the balloon itself. Instantly he was dashed to the ground, a distance of several thousand feet, and was found there, dead and frightfully mutilated.

He is still one of the heroes of France, and an inscription to his memory may be read on the spot where he made his fatal attempt.

Notice of Hearing of Ditch Petition.

In the matter of the petition for a public ditch by Henry Frick, of Smithfield township, DeKalb County, Indiana, notice is hereby given that a petition has been filed with the Auditor of DeKalb county, state of Indiana, and viewers have been appointed who have viewed and reported said view which is on file in my office. The hearing of said petition upon its merits will be on Tuesday, the 7th day of March, 1893, the same being the second day of their March term, 1893, of Commissioners' Court.

The prayer of said petition is that a ditch be constructed on the following route to-wit:

Beginning in the northwest quarter of section thirty-four (34) Smithfield township, at a point 300 feet north of the east and west quarter line of said section and 455 feet east of the east boundary line of the right of way of the Fort Wayne and Jackson branch of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad, all in DeKalb county, State of Indiana, and from thence as follows:

No.	Course.	Distance
1	north 68 degrees west	100 feet
2	north 78 degrees west	100 feet
3	south 73 deg. 30 min west	300 feet
4	south 52 degrees west	100 feet
5	south 39 degrees west	100 feet
6	south 28 degrees west	100 feet
7	south 11 degrees west	100 feet
8	south 33 degrees west	500 feet
9	south 11 degrees west	100 feet
10	south 25 degrees east	300 feet
11	south 10 degrees west	475 feet
12	south 13 degrees weest	625 feet
13	south 15 deg. 30 min. east	700 feet
14	south	100 feet
15	south 13 degrees west	100 feet
16	south 45 degrees west	100 feet
17	south 53 degrees west	200 feet
18	south 30 degrees west	300 feet

Ending 612 feet and 848 feet east of the north west corner of section three (3) Grant township, DeKalb county, State of Indiana.

This proposed work will affect the lands of the following persons:

Henry Frick, Fort Wayne Jackson & Saginaw railroad now leased and operated by the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railroad, Albert J. and Sarah E. Beard, Malinda Hevel, DeKalb County, William and Mary Getts, Orlando Seery and Jacob Hevel.

H. N. COFFINBERRY,
Auditor DeKalb County.

Notice to Sell Real Estate.

Notice is hereby given that on Saturday the 25th day of February 1893, at the law office of J. E. & J. H. Rose in the town of Auburn in DeKalb county, state of Indiana, by virtue of an order to me directed by the DeKalb Circuit court, state of Indiana, I, Sylvester Kutzner, administrator with the will annexed of the estate of Frederick Groscop, deceased, will offer for sale at public vendue the following described real estate of said decedent to-wit:

All of the southwest quarter, and the west half of the southeast quarter, all in section eighteen (18) in township thirty-four (34) north range thirteen (12) east, in DeKalb county, state of Indiana, except one hundred and sixty acres off of the north end of the two tracts above described, also the northwest fourth of the northeast quarter of section nineteen (19) in said township and range, also the east half of the northeast fourth of the northwest quarter of section nineteen (19) aforesaid, also a piece of land twenty (20) feet in width off of the east side of the southwest fourth of the northeast quarter of said section nineteen (19), aforesaid. Said land will be sold for not less than two-thirds of the appraised value thereof, upon the following terms to wit: One third cash in hand, one-third in twelve months and one-third in eighteen months, from date of sale, said deferred payments to be evidenced by interest bearing notes, secured by a mortgage on said real estate. Said sale will begin at 2 o'clock p. m. of said day.

A Charming Winter Climate.

"One of the chief delights of America," a famous foreigner recently said, "is the remarkable diversity of climate and altitude. Every taste can be suited there." The rigor of our Northern winters tell on a great many constitutions and such people are obliged to "winter South," or to move there altogether. To this large and increasing class North Galveston offers peculiar advantages at prices within the reach of the most modest purse. This new and coming commercial point offers business openings for the merchant; work for the laboring man; homes for the delicate; rich harvests to the fruit-grower—profit and pleasure for all. In no place in America is there better opportunity for safe investment. All classes of persons, therefore, are interested in the development of North Galveston and any inquiry will be promptly answered and full information furnished by Rickell & Sprott, Auburn, Ind., the local agents of the North Galveston Association. 3

DEMOCRATS have forty-three U. S. senators now. Forty-five is a majority. Forty-four is a tie but with a democrat is vice-president it will make a majority with his casting vote.

BILL to elect U. S. senators by a vote of the people, has already passed the house, and has been sent to the senate. Such a law would save the trouble several states are now having.

JOHN W. HOLMES, a wealthy and prominent republican, of Medora, Ind., was last week convicted trying to bribe voters, and sentenced to ten days in jail, fined $25 and disfranchised ten years.

BROWN county, this state, is to have a railroad at last, and it will then cease to be mentioned as the only county in Indiana that has none. But it also has no one in its jails, and no prisoner in the state prison.

CANADA has a new daily paper that favors the annexation with the United States. We believe in the doctrine of "Manifest Destiny," and that the world will yet see this nation running up to the northern sea.

THE total value of railroads in the United States foots up 9,829-millions. The total number of men employed, is 784,285. Those who want the government to buy up and run all the railroads should study these figures.

SMALL POX prevails in various localities over the United States, and many deaths are reported. This is especially the case at Akron, Ohio, near Ann Arbor, Mich., and at Chicago. It is feared it may spread over the country.

ALUMINUM, the new, white metal made from clay, was worth $100 a pound in 1855. It has steadily gone down to 70 cents. And the tariff don't make it cheap, either. The decline, as in other cases, is due to improved methods.

HAWAII had a revolution Dec. 27, and deprived the Queen of her throne. A provisional government is running things with S. B. Dole, an American at the head. They have sent men here to ask for annexation to the United States. It is doubtful if this will be done as so many foreign powers own property in the Sandwich Islands.

THE legislature will re-apportion the state in senatorial districts of 11,020 voters, and representative districts of half as much. This ration is found by dividing the total voters of the state, 551,000 by 50 the number of members in the senate, and by 100, the number in the House. Of course they can only make the districts as near to this number as possible.

BLAINE died Friday, Jan. 27, at 11 a. m. He had passed a comfortable night but about eight in the morning, grew worse and sank rapidly. Thus ends the eventful life of a man who has filled a great place in public attention for many years. He had some elements of greatness, but his selfish ambition led him into mistakes and improprieties that offset his good qualities and cost him his prestige and the presidency.

GOV. CHASE, in his closing message admitted frankly that the new tax law was a just one, and then spoke of each of the states, charitable institutions, praising their condition and management in the highest terms. This has proved a bitter dose to republicans who, all through the late campaign, made especial attacks on these points. Now, they want to read Chase out of the party.

JUDGE JOHN MARTIN, democrat, has been elected to the U. S. senate from Kansas, by a combination of democrats and people's party members. There will be a struggle however, to keep him out of the senate on the ground that the Kansas House of representatives was not legally organized. If seated, he will serve out the unexpired term of the late senator Plumb, to March 4, 1895. B. W. Perkins is now serving it by appointment of the governor just after Plumb's death.

Helmer Postoffice.

The postoffice at Custer, is to be discontinued, and moved over into Steuben county, on the new Wabash road, about four miles west of Hudson, at the Station called Helmer. All our patrons now getting their COURIER at Custer, will confer a favor on us by sending a postal card, or by other means to let us know where we are to send the COURIER. Most of them, we suppose will want it sent to Helmer, but a few may find it more convenient at Fairfield or Hudson. Please let us know about the matter.

The Richland Sunday School Institute

The fifty-eighth Sunday School Institute of Richland township, was held in the M. E. church of Corunna, Saturday, Jan. 28, 1893. The president, L. W. Treesh was at his post as usual and called to order promptly at the appointed time of commencement. The devotional exercises consisting of the reading of the 4th chapter of Hebrews, with songs and prayer, were led in an earnest, spiritual manner by H. W. Fretz. The welcome address by Rev. F. G. Fried was worthy of the beautiful response it received at the hands of Mrs. Ella Grate of Sedan. Rev. Mr. Graham of Corunna, very ably discussing "Week day work of the S. S. Teacher" and was followed in general discussion by a number of spirited speeches by different members of the Institute. Rev. A. B. Lilly gave us a very earnest and impressive talk on "Results from good home training". Rev. G. V. Walker of Fairfield Center, was also present and with his usual zeal and interest for the Sunday School work discussed "The importance of punctuality." The speakers to whom the other subjects were assigned being absent at the time they were called, their places were promptly supplied by the president. Our entire program was carried out with the exception of the lecture on Friday evening and the children's meeting on Saturday evening, which were abandoned on account of a series of protracted meeting being held in the church at the time. We are glad to note a deep and growing interest in our Sunday School work in this township.

Report of committee on resolutions.

Since it has pleased our Heavenly Father during the past quarter to remove from our midst and from the number of our faithful Sabbath school workers in this township, brother B. A. Chaffee and sister Nancy Farrington, who have both been long identified with the Sunday school of this township. Therefore

Resolved: That we as a township institute express our heartfelt sympathy for the friends of the deceased and while we bow submissively to the Divine will who doeth all things well and that ought to admonish all of us to be diligent, for the night of death cometh.

We also hereby extend to sister Mary Chaffee our tenderest sympathy in her manifold sorrows, and pray our Heavenly father to comfort and sustain her amid them all.

Resolved: That we desire to put ourselves on record as Sunday school workers against the fearful and terrible destructive curse of intemperance and that we ask all our Sunday school workers to do all in their power to extirpate it from our community, state and nation, and that we earnestly ask all our Christian voters to vote as they pray.

Resolved: That we hereby express our appreciation of the interest manifested by all present to make this Sunday school institute a success.

Free Scholarships.

The young men and young women who aspire to obtain academic or college educations, and whose parents cannot afford them that expense, will be interested in the work of The Cosmopolitan Magazine, which has offered for the year 1893 one thousand scholarships at any of the leading colleges or schools of the United States, upon the condition of introducing a magazine into certain neighborhoods. Yale, Vassar, Harvard, Ann Arbor, Chicago, the Southern colleges, the great schools of art and medicine, are all alike open to the ambitious boy or girl who is not afraid of a little earnest work. The Cosmopolitan sends out from its New York office a handsomely printed pamphlet to any applicant, telling just what is necessary in order to secure one of these scholarships. The scholarship itself includes board, lodging, laundry and tuition—all free.

Mrs. George Lanning entertained a number of young friends Tuesday evening in honor of a friend, Miss Mallory, of Reading, who was visiting her. The young people report a splendid time, and think Mrs Lanning has no superior as an entertainer.

John Husselman will have a sale of personal property, at his home, the Geo. W. Husselman farm three miles northwest of Fairfield Center, on Saturday, Feb. 11. There will be a large number of horses, cattle, sheep and agricultural implements sold. 5 6

Harry Swarts and Ev. Watson have gone into the livery business at Warsaw. Mr. Watson is well posted in the business, and Harry, though he has always been in the telegraphing line, is also a young man of good business ability. They are in a good town, and we not only hope they will succeed, but believe they will.

A sleigh load of young people from Butler came over here last Friday evening, and were the guests of Miss Flora Hoffman. Of course they had a pleasant visit. They were, Miss Nellie Scoville, Maud Potter, Edith Fay, Mamie Greenamyer and Lou Harding; Mr. Lyston Harding, Ralph Kinney, Frank Stuart, Will Heth and McLain Hunter.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Rush have issued invitations to their golden wedding, which is Feb. 16. This worthy old couple have lived together half a century, and are still, we are glad to say, in fair health. The Golden Anniversary comes to but few of the human family, and we hope Mr. and Mrs. Rush may find it the most enjoyable of all the days that have come before it.

Ashley Times: William Clark, eldest son of our townsman, J. W. Clark, returned from Auburn to his home here, to take charge of his father's new hardware store. Young Clark has been for some time in the employ of John Davis, hardware merchant, of Auburn, and has shown himself to be a young man of remarkable ability, and will surely make a success of the business here.

J. Beuret has made some very important changes in the appearance of his hardware store. He has taken out the old shelving and put in new on the north side, while a part of the room is to be used for the store department. A neat little office apartment looms up in the back end. These improvements have been needed and are an evidence of Mr. Beuret's business enterprise.

A letter from Ben. Goodman, at Wallace, Kansas, gives a world of interesting matter in regard to things in that section. He says they were, at that date, Jan. 17, still sowing wheat, and they had not had much weather as cold as zero, but mostly warm and nice. He thinks the prospects there are good for the coming year. He speaks some of coming east for a visit if all goes well, but is not certain as to that.

Mr. Albert Favorite, of Arkansas City, Kan., wishes to give our readers the benefit of his experience with colds, He says: "I contracted a cold early last spring that settled on my lungs, and had hardly recovered from it when I caught another that hung on all summer and left me with a hacking cough which I thought I would never get rid of. I had used Chamberlain's Cough remedy some fourteen years ago with much success, and concluded to try it again. When I had got through with one bottle my cough had left me, and I have not suffered with a cough or cold since. I have recommended it to others, and all speak well of it. 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord. 4

Mr. and Mrs. Hellmer of Elsworth Maine, and Miss Stella Friend of Ft. Wayne, have been visiting Mr and. Mrs. Ehrlich. Mrs. Hellmer is a niece and she and her husband were on their wedding tour. Miss Friend is Mr. Ehrlich's sister. Friday, Mrs. Ehrlich entertained the Ladies' Whist Club in honor of her guests, making a very pleasant party.

Charles Ober, at the Church Furniture factory, had the fingers of both hands badly cut with a buzz saw, Monday. The first and second fingers on the right hand, and the third and fourth on the left, were cut and torn at the ends, and pieces had to be removed. Drs. Casebeer and Matheny dressed his wounds, and we are told he is getting along all right.

Harry Trentman, the gentlemanly carrier, who has control of the Ft. Wayne morning dailies here, reports the Daily Journal very popular with Auburn readers. He has a list of 50 for the Journal to 20 of the Gazette. That speaks well for the Journal, which by the way, is growing rapidly, not only in popular esteem, but in point of news, good reading, and in editorial ability. We are glad to see the Journal prospering.

Dr. Henry Johnson, now at South Bend, has again received a flattering call to go to another point and become pastor of a church. This time it is to the First Presbyterian church at Duluth Minn. They offer him a salary of $5,000 and a bonus of $500 for the trouble and expense of moving. They have a new $75,000 church, and a strong congregation. Of course this is a very tempting offer, and we think no one would blame him for accepting. Still the people at South Bend are greatly opposed to losing his services there.

Mrs. Mary Kehrer of Butler was here Tuesday, to attend to matters connected with the settlement of the estate of her husband the late George Kehrer, she having been appointed administrator. Mr. Kehrer, as was announced in the COURIER of Jan 5, died at El Paso, Tex., where he had gone for his health, Mrs. K. and their son, Frank, were then on their way to see him, when a dispatch overtook them, announcing his death. They went on, and reached El Paso, and brought the remains home. It was a sad journey. Mr. Kehrer was a prominent druggist of Butler, and we learn the business will probably be carried on by Frank Kehrer, who is well posted in the business.

It is truly a wonderful medicine. For sale by Robbins & McCord.

Rice, the Photographer, has been taking a great many pictures of teachers recently as they are being prepared for an exhibit at the World's Fair. One is the entire school at Mooresville, of which Miss Maxwell is teacher. Another group has a photo of nearly every teacher in the county, as well as of the County superintendent. All are fine and will make a good display.

There was a sudden thaw Saturday. There had been some sleet Friday, and on Saturday morning a warm wind came on melting the ice on the trees overhead, and sending down small showers of rain that seemed strange, striking as it did, on icy ground walks and that had not yet begun to thaw. But by night much snow had melted leaving the middle of the roads very poor for sleds. At night it froze again, and so remains.

We have received the report of the Fifth Annual Conclave of the Knights Templar of Washington of 1892. All the names are strange to us, except that of Harry Rush, the grand commander for that year. It contains an excellent likeness of him on its title page, and we must say he looks every inch a knight. The book also contains his address, as well as the speeches of other high officers. The book contains 431 pages, and its compilation is a credit to the far western templars.

An Old Citizen.

J. G. Raub was in to see us last Friday. He had just been to call on his father, Peter Raub, who resides with a daughter, Mrs. L. B. Powell, at the Junction. The old gentleman was born Feb. 22, 1801, and will therefore be 92 in a short time. He is still in fair health. He came to DeKalb county in 1855, and though he had cleared one farm in Stark county, Ohio, he largely cleared up the George Walker farm in Richland township a few miles from Auburn. He is now probably, about the oldest citizen of this county. What a history he could relate if he could remember all the important events that have transpired since 1801. The First Napoleon, was then the most powerful man in Europe, and in the world. The United States was, except a row of states along the coast, mainly a wilderness. We were having trouble with France, that at times threatened war. That same winter saw in substance the death of the old federal party, and the rise of the democratic-republican party, for Jefferson had been elected president. At the date of Mr. Raub's birth, John Adams, second president was in office. At the election of the previous autumn, Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr, had each received 73, of the electoral votes of the states and there was no choice. The House of representatives had to decide it. Mr. Raub has lived to see the number of electoral votes grow from 138 to the 444 of 1892, while the population has increased four times faster. The Sixth congress was in session; and at that date the U. S. had only the territory belonging to the original states. Thousands of things might be called up in this connection had we time or space to give it.

Resolutions.

Newville, Ind., Jan. 18, 1893.

As the general encampment of the G. A. R., was voted and proclaimed to be held in the capital city of our state, we the members of O. S. Blood Post 143, in regular session assembled do hereby adopt the following resolutions:

First. We unanimously petition and pray that you, our honorable representatives from this district unite with and work and vote with the other representatives of our state for an appropriation of at least fifty thousand dollars out of the state funds to be used to assist in defraying the expenses of said encampment.

Second. That we urge that this matter receive early attention by our representatives that we may feel proud of our state and the order which we represent.

Respectfully submitted,

A NEW trust has been formed that ought to have on hand a large stock of one material heretofore found essential to the success of these thrifty combinations. The latest is a brass trust.

CERTAIN parts of Mexico are having an epidemic of typhus fever. The principal mode of cure is said to be a diet of spiders. However efficacious this may be it must have merit in a tendency to reconcile the patient to death.

SUSAN B. ANTHONY believes that womanhood is on the verge of an era of single blessedness. Susan herself is so far beyond the verge as to excite wonder that she should be able to discern what may be occurring there.

THE gentlemen engaged in securing models for World's Fair silver statues would be wise to discard the white metal for brass. They have enough of the latter in their own composition to make several statues of heroic size.

PLANS for capturing "Kid," the renegade Apache, seem to lack principally the co-operation of that individual. Otherwise they are quite admirable. However, they are not wholly useless, for they serve to amuse Kid.

ANALYSIS of the vote in the case of Rev. Briggs indicates that his name must go thundering down the ages as that of the man who never could learn whether or not he was a heretic. At least, so far as it should go thundering, this must not be the excuse for it.

ACCORDING to Mexico the United States is responsible for all the loose morals that lend to life along the Rio Grande the charm of uncertainty. Sentiment on this side of the border, so far as it has found expression, is that this country has sins enough of its own.

A MARRIAGE of physical wrecks is reported from Tom Green County, Texas. The groom had come out of the war minus one leg, one arm and one eye, which the rebels had shot away; while the lady had lost one arm in a fight with the Indians, and had dropped a leg in a railroad accident.

THERE are, it is computed, 30,000 female cyclists in the United States, and the number is swelling rapidly. Let the women gyrate as much as they please. Their power to turn men's heads is so great already that no perceptible increase thereof will result from any additional circumvolutions.

A SAN FRANCISCO amateur actress stabbed and killed the author and hero of an amateur play during the performance the other night. Leading ladies and authors have been at swords' points since the drama did exist, but fortunately their differences rarely result as sadly as on this occasion.

IN Mexico lately a nephew of President Diaz was killed in a duel, and the man who snuffed out his candle of existence is to be tried for murder. Hot bloods in greaserdom should have more sense than to exterminate relatives of a gentleman who has a life-long grasp upon the dictatorship of his country.

A MISSOURI minister has been swindled out of $2,000 by the antique gold-brick method. This chastening and educating experience will teach him the futility of laying up treasure where bunco men talk smoothly to his undoing. Also it will impress upon him the wisdom of subscribing for his county paper.

A FAMOUS soap manufacturer was once asked why he did newspaper advertising altogether, and did not follow in the footsteps of other manufacturers, putting up sign-boards, printing almanacs, etc. He replied that in his experience he found that the man who did not read the newspapers never used soap.

A NEW YORK paper offered a prize of $5 a week for life to the winner in a guessing contest, and the plum was captured by a 14-year-old girl. The proprietor of the paper is now figuring out the value of his premium at compound interest with a view to discovering whether it wouldn't be cheaper to give her the paper.

THE dynamo does not, as many suppose, make or manufacture electricity. It simply collects it, draws it from the vast supplies of Nature, just as the mill dam collects together the waters of a hundred tiny streams that empty into it and conducts them all in one sturdy stream to the mill wheel for effective work.

THE Gould executors want to dodge "the inheritance tax" on the $5,000,000 given to George Gould with the plea that "it was a debt." It is just as easy to suppose that Gould owed debts to Helen and all the rest as to the plethoric George. But George is evidently "a chip of the old block," and doesn't want to pay a tax.

A WOMAN in Russia has been sent to prison for a year, with no allowance for good behavior. She had not said anything unpleasant about the royal family. She had merely killed 100 babies, so far as counted. When the count has progressed to the second 100, lovers of justice hope she will be fined a few kopecks in addition.

AN Eastern physician has instructed his daughter not to touch paper money for fear that bacteria may be lurking in it. The young lady therefore has her maid handle all cash that comes in this objectionable form. If the maid escapes contagion the paper is to be reckoned wholesome. The test is probably not seen at its best from the standpoint of the maid.

THE late Jay Gould is receiving credit for a long-cherished intention to found and endow a school. It was an excellent intention, and well adapted for paving a thoroughfare leading to a place not unmentioned in connection with the wizard. It is greatly feared that the excuse of forgetfulness will not delude the recording angel, who must by this time have humanity sized up fairly well.

IN the olden times what is now known as "typhus fever" was known by the names of "jail fever," "putrid fever," and "spotted fever." Its present name is from the Greek word "typhus," which means "a mist," and refers to the great stupor which is one of the symptoms of the disease. It is an eruptive disease, highly contagious, and formerly much more fatal than now. Persons infected can be removed into clean, healthy quarters, where the air is pure, and be nursed to health with comparatively little danger to the attendants. It only breeds where there are impurities.

AS RESCUES from peril are being credited to Providence, a recent case at Victoria becomes of particular interest. A man fell into the water there, and a rope was thrown to him, by which he was pulled ashore and saved from drowning. Nevertheless, the man was lifeless, as the rope that kept him from drowning had choked him to death. The exact relation of Providence to this melancholy episode forms a nice study, and why Providence should have striven to have kept a man from perishing one way, and at the same time slaughtered him by other means, only adds to the complications.

CUPID flies everywhere. He hovers in and out among the kitchen pots and kettles as merrily and as often as ever, and around the etageres and grand pianos in a drawing-room. In Pennsylvania he has just distinguished himself by tossing a love romance of most sensational character into the lap of a humble cook. She is a poor girl who works hard in a hotel restaurant—cooking ham and eggs and chasing up cockroaches with alternate swiftness. A few days ago she takes an outing on a train, meets a two-millionaire who says she looks like his first wife, and insists on marrying her forthwith. Tableau. She will spend the two millions, and Cupid will go smiling on his prankish way.

DOES the microbe lurk in the greenback? Is the dread peril of contact with bacteria affronted when one grasps the few wisps of greasy green paper which represent his weekly wages? Must we send our salaries to be washed every week before daring to put them into our vest pockets, or to hand them over to our wives? Must we exact a guarantee from Uncle Sam that he shall not give forth contagious diseases with his issues of legal tender? These are questions which are asked on all sides. Most people will grab all the greenbacks they can get, even if the money be scaly with microbes; but meantime the Government owes us security from infection. The Treasury Department must borrow a chemist and a bug hunter, and learn to send forth bills innocent of harm.

Our Yankee Dialect.

Many so-called "Yankeeisms" are dialect words straight from the English counties. A little poem called "A Lincolnshire Tale" is an excellent illustration of this. I quote a few characteristic lines merely:

"And git thee sen (soon) made smart and pretty.
Wi' yallar ribbons round the waist,
'And I'll go fetch my sister Bess.
I'm sartin sure she's up and ready.'
* * * * * *
And brother Joss,
A-shoutin to the folks as passes."

The pronunciation of "git" for "get," "yallar" for "yellow," "sartin" for "certain," the syntax in "I'm sartin sure she's up and ready," comes to our ears with the familiar ring of the "Biglow Papers" or of "Sam Slick." "Guess," as in "I guess it is so," for "suppose," was once, as Chaucer shows, standard English. "Of twenty yeer of age he was, I gesse." "Gumption," for "wit" or "sense," "spry," for "lively," "cute," for "shrewd," are all English terms. Grammatical peculiarities also abound, such as the use of the double for the single negative, constructions such as "I had ought," or the possessive form "hisn," "of yourn," "of hern," etc., and the frequency of constructions with the verbal noun, as "a-getherin," "a-turnin'."

OMAHA bakers have been having a merry war. The ammunition was the ordinary five-cent loaf which hurtled through the air in a manner designed to wreck the enemy. The public has not been heard to complain. When thirty-six five-cent loaves can be purchased for a dollar the wolf does not need to be chased from the door. He turns tail voluntarily and scoots.

BENEFIT OF COMMERCE.

RESTRICTIONS ON TRADE KEEP NATIONS DOWN.

Democratic Representatives Should Get Down to Business at Once—McKinley on Raw Materials—Figures Speak for Free Wool—The Bowl or the Jug.

Reciprocity a Poor Makeshift.

Congressman William J. Coombs talked about "Foreign Commerce" before the Brooklyn Ethical Association, on Jan. 1. He followed the history of commerce from the destruction of Carthage up through the centuries. Commerce was controlled, he said, "now by one nation, now by another." As soon as one nation became weak, on account of the accumulation of wealth in a few hands, the supremacy passed to a new people. After citing England's commanding position in illustration of the benefits of free and direct exchange of surplus products, and referring to the railroads, steamships, and cables, that make communication and transportation easy, he said:

"The legislative machinery of government is too slow and too uncertain in its action to warrant its use in the regulation of commerce. Its only useful field would seem to be the facilitating of communication, the removal of restrictions where they exist, and the maintenance of the integrity of the currency. Laws can be of no permanent help where the natural conditions are against us. Since nearly every nation produces more than it consumes, and since all depend on foreign markets for a portion of their prosperity, intercourse should be as natural and untrammeled as possible.

"If the statement of economists is true that the price of the great products of our country is fixed by the price at which we are able to sell our surplus abroad, it is manifest that the encouragement of any foreign demand for our surplus is not solely in the interest of the merchant, but primarily in the interest of the producer, for whom, in the present organization of business, the merchant is only a broker or agent.

"I make this statement because I found that in many of the debates in Congress representatives from the agricultural sections of the country were apparently jealous of any concessions which were suggested for the encouragement of commerce.

"I do not favor Government subsidies for ocean commerce. The best subsidy it can give to us is to open to us the possibility of securing return cargoes. Without return cargoes for our vessels, while our competitors have them, we can never succeed, even with the largest possible subsidies. Our laws have heretofore stood in the way of this indisputable factor in building up our mercantile marine. The people, by their recent decision to remove the duty on wool, have cleared the way toward more favorable conditions.

"The agriculturist, by sacrificing a fancied advantage in the duty on wool, has gained a real advantage in making a better and more accessible market for his other products. After cheap production, the most important factor is cheap transportation, both inland and by sea. Each is dependent on the other. With cheap transportation the producer can better compete in the foreign market. With abundant freight to transport, the carrier can reduce his rates so as to bring him in a minimum of profit. Profits should be gauged by the capital employed, and not by fictitious capital.

"If Government touches this question at all it should be in this direction.

"The great skill of our mechanics and the ability of our manufacturers will soon—if they do not already—lead the world in the quality and cheapness of our productions. I have no sympathy with a policy founded in a distrust of our ability to meet other nations on equal terms. Aside from its antagonism to the advancing liberal sentiments of the age, such a doctrine is lowering in its tendency, and breeds distrust where there should be the greatest confidence. Had our manufacturers proper confidence, and would they but use a tithe of the enterprise and ability they display at home, they could create a foreign demand and reap enormous profits. To do this we must be liberal in our policy. We must interpret in a broad way the well-known maxims of political economy. We must realize that no well-established trade can exist and be permanent in its character when there is a constant depletion of one of the circulating mediums by the other. There must be a real, reciprocal transfer of commodities.

"We have an inviting chance with the republics of North and South America. Especially is this the case with Mexico since she has been connected with us by railroads. So far, the Government reports have made no account of our exportations to Mexico by rail. I found on investigation that two-thirds of our exports there go by rail. We are Mexico's best customer, and we took $45,000,000 of her $63,000,000 of exports.

"The same healthy conditions will exist with all the other American republics when communication is made easy. But let us avoid the appearance of hard bargaining. They are poor in revenue, and cannot afford to sacrifice any of it in order to meet our demands.

"While the reciprocity treaties with the Spanish West Indies and Brazil have had a temporary effect in increasing our transactions with those countries, no one who is acquainted with existing conditions believes that they will be permanently beneficial. The reciprocity treaties with other countries so far are illusory and unsatisfactory. It is not possible in these days to make so narrow and selfish a theory the corner-stone of the commercial policy of a great nation.

"1. That we cannot afford to compete with foreign nations on equal terms.

"2. That they can afford to reduce their revenues.

"3. That it is a matter of indifference to us whether or not we have their products.

"4. That other commercial nations will quietly submit to discrimination against their trade.

"I have no doubt that astute statesman, the author of reciprocity, considered it a temporary expedient to palliate an otherwise unpopular measure.

"The foreign trade of the United States is not in its infancy. Already the products of our factories have penetrated to all quarters of the globe. Every year we make new inroads on foreign competitors. Our trade in industrial productions has all risen in a generation. So great has been the decline of prices in the last quarter of a century that we may look forward to the time when men can live well without exhaustive labor. This will certainly happen unless these advantages are diverted into the hands of the few.

"No man who has been engaged in business with foreign countries during the last twenty years can have failed to notice the gradual disappearance of the peculiarities of and the differences between the nations and the marked approximation of all to the same ideas and customs."

Wool Facts vs. Wool Croakers.

The biggest change of duty proposed by the Democratic party is the putting of wool on the free list and the reduction of the greater portion of the duty on woolen goods. If there is any truth in the promise of Republican calamity howlers made before, and even since they felt the land sliding under them on Nov. 8, the two industries that now should have ruination staring them in the face are the wool growing and wool manufacturing industries; and yet the markets indicate no such situation.

The prices of wool, which had been declining almost up to the very day of election, have since remained steady and now begin to wear a firmer aspect. The American Wool and Cotton Reporter of Jan. 12 says of the Boston wool market:

"This market since Jan. 3 has shown a very considerable improvement. More wool has been sold than previously for many weeks. There has been increased inquiry for both domestic and foreign stock; in fact, the sales of the latter aggregate considerably larger than in any previous week of the season. In fact, all kinds of fleece wool are very firm, and are taken gladly at dealer's prices. There is no quotable change, but what with the increased inquiry and the limited supply, an early advance would surprise no one."

Nothing blue in this! But perhaps the woolen goods industry is on the verge of destruction; if so there is also here no indication of impending catastrophe, except from a few left-over croakers who have not yet had time to change their habits. The same authority quoted above says, in an editorial on "Trade and the Change in the Tariff:"

"Trade to-day is enjoying what may be designated as an immature boom; there is every indication of a booming business without the demoralizing elements of an actual boom. Demand is large and supply in safe proportions to it; and it is only here that any indication of the coming change in the tariff is manifest, it is in the conservatism of manufacturer and buyer, in the close adherence to the actual requirements of their trade, in the absence of any speculative trading. At the same time, trade is of such proportions that the woolen manufacturer is fully employed and has a business in sight that will provide employment for months ahead. The prosperity of the country is on a solid foundation, and no shrewd or sagacious business man will permit himself to be controlled by any fear of an imaginary disaster to come from tariff legislation."

These are the results reached by a study of facts and markets. They are totally at variance with the conclusions reached by Judge William Lawrence, who is quoted at length in another part of the Wool Reporter. Judge Lawrence is president of the Ohio Wool Growers' Association, and is one of the "three political shepherds" who framed the schedule in the McKinley tariff bill, a schedule that, to the surprise of every wool grower, dealer and manufacturer, placed a duty of 400 per cent. upon common goat hair.

During the last thirty years, while duties have been going up almost as fast as prices have been going down, this Judge has been declaring with great vehemence and positiveness that what was needed to build up the declining industry was higher duties. Of course consistency would neither permit this friend of the sheep to change his theories nor to remain silent in the face of his victorious opponents. Hence it is amusing, to those not too sympathetic, to read the Judge's speech delivered at the annual convention Jan. 11. After arriving at the conclusion that we could and should raise as much wool as we consume, rather than one-third as now, and after proving the crying and bleating need for prohibitory duties on wools, he continues to say that if free wool comes he believes in "waging a war of political extermination against those who would exterminate our sheep." In view of the threatened ruin of the wool industry by free wool, the wool growers of the United States have no alternative but to accept the issue made against them, and in self-defense make an aggressive political warfare. * * * Our enemies bid us defiance in the field of political contest. They shall find in us foemen worthy of their steel. Protection builds up; free wool and free trade would be more destructive than fire, and sword and desolation of all the armies of Europe turned loose against us."

There are a few croakers left among the woolen manufacturers, but none who can "hold a candle" to the chief of the political shepherds from Ohio in their stubborn defiance of facts and figures and in their imperiousness to the lessons of experience.

Figures Speak for Free Wool.

The largest wool-growing State in the country is Texas, with a clip of 35,281,225 pounds, and Texas gave the largest majority of any State for Cleveland. The next largest wool-producing State is California, with a clip of 26,543,016 pounds, and this State, for the first time since 1880, cast her electoral vote for a Democratic candidate. The third wool-producing State is Ohio, with a clip of 22,340,435 pounds. In this State, the home of McKinley, the Republican party was dealt a staggering blow, its majority having dwindled to almost nothing.—Boston Globe.

McKinley on Raw Materials.

After Judge Lawrence had expressed regret, at the recent meeting of the Ohio Wool Growers' Association, that he had neglected to insert in the wool schedule of the McKinley tariff a duty on cow hair, Gov. McKinley himself made some remarks, in the course of which he said: "I do not believe in free raw material. I do not believe in having commodities free at one end of the factory and tariffed at the other end."

Gov. McKinley appears to have forgotten some of the provisions of his tariff bill and the arguments by which he and other leaders of his party defended those provisions. For example, that bill transferred from the dutiable to the free list manila, sisal, sunn, jute, and jute butts, which are the raw materials of the manufacturers of cordage and certain other products. This was done against the protests of the growers of hemp, and revenue amounting to about $2,000,000 was surrendered in order that the manufacturers of cordage and twine might have their raw material free of tax. At the same time, large duties on cordage were imposed. Here were "commodities free at one end of the factory and tariffed at the other end," and it was repeatedly asserted by Governor McKinley and the Republican "spellbinders" and organs in the recent campaign that these charges had been beneficial to the people.

The Governor seems also to have overlooked the sugar schedule of his bill. By that schedule the raw material of the sugar-refining industry—which was also consolidated in a trust—was made free of tax, at the cost of about $55,000,000 in revenue, while a duty of ½ of a cent per pound was imposed upon the finished product. Here again was a commodity "free at one end of the factory and tariffed at the other end," and we think it will be admitted that this arrangement of the sugar schedule was defended and commended by Mr. McKinley and by other high-tariff leaders as one that conferred great benefits upon the people. They were never tired of pointing out that, by making sugar "free at one end of the factory," the cost of one of the necessaries of life to the consumer had been largely reduced.

The Governor should send for a copy of his bill and overhaul his committee report and his campaign speeches, to refresh his memory as to his convictions about the expediency of putting certain raw materials on the free list and retaining duties on finished products for the protection and enrichment of the combinations that use these materials.—New York Times.

Custom-House Oaths.

The administrative features of the McKinley bill are simply abominable. It was due to the obnoxiousness of the measure in its practical workings, as much as to its high duties, that the dry-goods men and the grocery men and about every other kind of a man in New York City took so much pains to turn out and vote against McKinley.

One of the minor features, not, however, peculiar to the act of 1890, is the promiscuous swearing required by Government officials of importers on every occasion. Neither the officials nor the importers pay any attention to the oath. The officials search the trunks or packages and appraise the goods, regardless of the sacred testimony of the importer, and the importer takes the oath as unconcernedly as he lights his cigar or tips the officials, regardless of the fact that he has greatly understated the true value of the goods. "Custom-house oaths" is a by-word with importers everywhere, and the whole proceeding is a farce, except to the political notaries who pocket the fees temporarily paid by the importers, but of course finally collected from the consumers of the goods.

A man does not have to kiss the Bible and listen to a notary mumble something about the solemnity of the occasion every time he signs a note, and yet he is legally responsible for the note. Why, then, should he do more than sign a contract binding upon him as to any future action that may arise?

Give Us the Promised Relief.

Were the Democrats "only foolin'" before election when they told us that "Republican protection was a fraud—a robbery of the great majority of the American people for the benefit of a few?"—when they told us that this tariff robbery was responsible for $2,500,000,000 of farm mortgages?—when they denounced the McKinley tariff law as "the culminating atrocity of class legislation," and promised "its repeal as one of the beneficent results that will follow the action of the people in intrusting power to the Democratic party?"

If not, what are they going to do about this robbery of at least $3,000,000,000 (including the manufacturers and mine-owners' share), now that they will in a few weeks have the power to repeal the McKinley "atrocity" and stop the gigantic robbery? Are they going to take it easy for a year and watch the victims of McKinleyism squirm and swear when they don't die? It begins to look as if this were the Democratic programme. If so, it will merit and receive a share of the curses of the people.

Democratic Representatives, get down to business at once and give us the promised relief, or there will be more landslides in the future.

The Bowl or the Jug?

If it is either necessary or expedient to choose between an increase of the whisky tax and the restoration of the tax on sugar, no Democrat should hesitate a moment. With an increase of the whisky tax, the revenue from a sugar tax will certainly not be needed, and the only reason for proposing such a tax will be a desire to protect a special industry from low prices.

Where is the Democrat who will vote to tax sugar to increase its price? And where is the Democrat who would rather tax the sugar bowl than the whisky jug?—St. Louis Republic.

SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Our National Lawmakers and What They Are Doing for the Good of the Country—Various Measures Proposed, Discussed, and Acted Upon.

Doings of Congress.

Mr. Chandler (N. H.) diverted the Senate Monday by arraigning two Republican Senators, Messrs. Hoar (Mass.) and Platt, (Conn.) for putting forward against the anti-option bill a constitutional argument that would be equally strong in its application to the tariff law. At the conclusion of Mr. Chandler's speech the anti-option bill went over without action, an agreement having previously been reached when the vote on that bill should be taken. Certificates of election of Senators Cockrell (Mo.) and Davis (Minn.) for their new terms from March 4, 1893, were presented and placed on file. The House, after a lengthy parliamentary discussion, succeeded in passing the quarantine bill.

Early Tuesday a communication from Chief Justice Fuller of the Supreme Court to the Vice President, announcing the death of Justice Lamar, was laid before the Senate. Messrs. Walthall (Miss.) and Gordon (Ga.) made brief remarks, paying warm tributes of respect to the memory of Mr. Lamar, and Mr. Wilson (Iowa) moved, as a mark of respect to the memory of Mr. Lamar, who was formerly a member of the Senate, that the Senate adjourn. The motion was carried unanimously. There was but little business transacted in the House because of the announcement of the death of Justice Lamar. On motion of Mr. Allen (Miss.) the House adjourned as a mark of respect to the memory of the dead Justice.

Neither the anti-option bill nor the Cherokee outlet bill—which have the alternate right of way in the Senate—had any show of consideration Wednesday. The hour of the session was taken up in routine matters. The only exceptions were the introduction of a bill for the admission of Utah as a State, and an amendment reported from the committee on naval affairs and referred to the committee on appropriations looking to a further increase of the navy. The remainder of the session was passed behind closed doors and was devoted to the question of whether the nomination of Mr. McComas as one of the Judges of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia should be or not be confirmed. In the House filibustering against the bankruptcy bill was inaugurated by Mr. Kilgore, of Texas. He was ably seconded in his endeavor to defeat the bankruptcy bill by Mr. Pierce, of Tennessee, who supplemented his every motion with another which was calculated to prevent action, and the filibustering continued. "Another wasted day" was the comment of the Republicans, and their comment was echoed by a majority of the Democrats. But the few Democrats opposed to the bankruptcy measure held firm, and the House adjourned without action, thus exhausting the two days assigned to the Judiciary Committee and the bankruptcy bill.

The House Thursday resumed in committee of the whole the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill. Pending a vote the committee rose and the House without concluding the bill adjourned. In the Senate Mr. Cullom (Ill.) introduced a joint resolution requesting the municipal authorities of Philadelphia to lend to the United States Government the liberty bell for exhibition at the World's Fair and asked to have it put upon its passage. The joint resolution was referred to the committee on the library. Mr. Casey (N. D.) moved to take up and pass Senate bill for a commission of five persons (at $10 a day and necessary expenses), with stenographer and clerk, to make a thorough investigation of the alcoholic liquor traffic. Mr. Vest (Mo.) argued against the bill, declaring himself utterly opposed to all such legislation. The question was one that was being preached upon, written upon, and prayed upon (in both forms of the word) in every part of the civilized world, and especially in the United States. How could a commission, he asked, advise Congress on such a matter? After further discussion the morning hour expired without further action on the bill. There were not many Senators in the chamber during the debate on the anti-option bill, but those who were present witnessed the remarkable circumstance of the States' rights Democrat, Mills (Tex.), having his argument against the constitutionality of the bill sustained by the stalwart Republican, Hiscock (N. Y.). In the course of his argument Mr. Mills said if by an india-rubber system of construction of the constitution commerce had a right to regulate commerce in States—as proposed in the pending measure—it could go further and regulate the production of the specified articles. Mr. Hiscock opposed the bill. The great volume of wheat, corn and cotton would not be diminished or increased by such legislation, and yet the proposition was to take possession of the markets of New York, Minneapolis, Chicago and New Orleans, and to control the manner in which contracts shall be made. He believed that all legislation like that proposed was vicious, and he believed that if the bill were crystallized into law it would become the basis of the most gigantic trust that ever existed in the United States.

In the Senate Friday the announcement of Mr. Blaine's death was made by Mr. Hale, who has been for many years one of the closest personal and political friends of the dead statesman. His remarks were followed by a motion made by Mr. Cockrell (Dem.) (Mo.) that the Senate adjourn out of respect for the memory of the deceased, and that motion was declared carried. The death of ex-Speaker Blaine also brought the business of the House to a sudden termination. A few committee reports were made, including a bill to repeal the Federal election laws, and then, after brief and affecting speeches by Milliken (who represents Mr. Blaine's old district) and Holman (who served many years with him in the House and who has always been his personal friend), the House, out of respect to the memory of the dead statesman, adjourned.

Door-Knobs.

All the door-knobs in England formerly were made of wood or cast iron—big, solid, heavy things—and for a time the American ones were the same. It was about 1842 or 1843 that the manufacture of door-knobs from clay was commenced in this country. Clays that would change their color were selected and mixed together, after being very finely ground, pressed into molds baked to what is technically known as biscuit, then coated with a fusible compound called "glaze," and rebaked at sufficient heat to melt the glaze and give them a glassy surface. They had a dark mottled appearance, were known as 'mineral door-knobs, and sold for as high as $18 a dozen pairs. They still have a place in the market, but are worth now only eighty cents a dozen pairs—the cheapest made. Porcelain door-knobs—white ones—come next. They are made of porcelain clay, to which ground bone is added, baked and treated like those already spoken of, and are only a little more expensive. Thirty years ago the 'Agillo' knob came out. It was a very pretty thing, of bright contrasting colors, compounded of clay, sand, feldspar, silex, red lead, and some other metalic substances that I do not now remember. The next step in this line of manufactures was in the production of what was known as lava knobs. They were mainly composed of sawdust and glue—the same materials that the old-fashioned daguerreotype cases were made of—and were of a beautiful dark-brown color, often very charmingly molded. The greatest stride in the progress of door-knob manufacture was taken in 1873 or 1874. The material employed is bronze, mainly composed of nine parts of copper and one of tin. The molds prepared for it are made with such extreme nicety and fidelity to their pattern that they reproduce lines as delicate as the veinings of a tiny leaflet, and the molten metal is forced into them by screw pressure while they are inclosed in a vacuum box. The most expensive are those with combined decorations of enamel and gold, which mount up to $15 or $16 a pair.

The Old Man Weakened.

"But papa——"

"Not another word," said the person thus addressed, a tall, handsome man in whose deep-brown hair a tinge of gray was just beginning to show. "You know, my child," he continued, "that nothing could give me more pain than refusing any wish of yours, and that I am never so happy and free from care as when some act of mine has made your life brighter. But this request I cannot grant. A sealskin sacque with fur trimmings! By my halidom, you jest bravely——" and turning hastily away, Dunstan Perkins stepped to the sideboard and took a drink.

For an instant Lillian stood in the conservatory, looking steadily down at the heavy velvet carpet in which her shapely feet sunk deeply, but presently the spirit of desolate loneliness seemed to leave her, and going quietly into an adjoining room she began eating pie.

In a few moments her father came into the apartment. "Perhaps I was rather harsh with you, Lillian," he began.

But the girl interrupted him. "Don't speak of it again, dear papa," she said, "because I know that you really have no money to spare. While I was mending your overcoat last evening I saw that note from 'Daisy,' and I would not——"

"You saw the note?" asks Mr. Perkins in hoarse, agonized tones.

"Yes, papa: but you know I never——"

"How much will a sealskin sacque cost?"

"Three hundred dollars," and as the girl spoke these words a baleful light shot from her eyes.

"You can have the money to-morrow," he said, and went slowly out of the room.

"I thought my darling papa would weaken," said the girl, and lifting the fork slowly to her lips, the last of the pie was gone.—Chicago Tribune.

Preserve Your Teeth.

The loss of the masticating teeth before the thirthieth year means a shortening of the life of the individual of from two to five years, said the New York Commercial Advertiser. To know the extent to which many of these teeth are lost, even before the fifteenth year, one has only to turn to the recently published reports of the examination of the teeth of children in the schools and orphan houses of London and elsewhere. If some effective measures are not adopted for combating the ravages of dental decay it looks very much as though another half century would find the poorer classes of English people practically edentulous before the twentieth year.

An Expert's Opinion.

Our readers have doubtless noticed the numerous discussions by the scientists and hygienists as to the relative value of the various baking powders. A careful sifting of the evidence leaves no doubt as to the superiority of the Royal Baking Powder in purity, wholesomeness and strength, from a scientific standpoint. An opinion, however, that will have perhaps greater influence with our practical housekeepers, is that given by Marion Harland, the well-known and popular writer upon matters pertaining to the science of domestic economy, of housekeeping, and of home cooking. In a letter published in the Philadelphia Ladies' Home Journal, this writer says:

"I regard the Royal Baking Powder as the best manufactured and in the market, so far as I have any experience in the use of such compounds. Since the introduction of it into my kitchen I have used no other in making biscuits, cakes, etc., and have entirely discarded for such purposes the home-made combination of one-third soda, two thirds cream of tartar.

"Every box has been in perfect condition when it came into my hands, and the contents have given complete satisfaction. It is an act of simple justice, and also a pleasure, to recommend it unqualifiedly to American housewives.

"MARION HARLAND."

Heathenish Idea.

A Chinese diplomat is authority for the statement that a Chinaman can wish for no better luck than to have a strange dog come to the house with the evident intention of linking his future fortunes with those of the family. This is especially true of Pekin where stray dogs, instead of being summarily dismissed from the doorstep, as is the general custom elsewhere, are taken in, cared for and their lives henceforth surrounded with the comforts most appreciated by their race. So great, indeed, is the superstitious feeling, that no pains are spared to induce the stranger to remain permanently with his new-found friends.

Big Auditoriums.

There are some roomy theaters in this country, but none that come up to the old theater of Æmillius Seavrius at Rome, which comfortably seats 80,000 persons. It was built 1,950 years ago.

A Wind So Strong It Steals a Team.

"Do it blow hard here?" answered "Bowie Bill." "Well, stranger, I should say it did. I was a skinnin' mules for Uncle Sam at Camp Bowie in '78, and havin' an easy time. One evenin' the waggin boss come 'round and says, 'Bill, you hook up in the mornin' an' go over to Bayard.'

"I went right off and doped my waggin' and got everything ready to move soon in the mornin.' I had twenty miles to make the first day, and I came to the spring 'bout an hour by sun. I turned in early that evenin' so's to git a good rest and be rolin' before sun up next mornin.' I'd been grindin' through the sand 'bout two hours the second day, when happenin' to look to the south I see a whirlwind a comin' bigger'n any I see afore, and makin' a noise like a hundred buzz saws. I see it were a comin' my way, so I put the buckskin into the mules an' nearly set 'em afire. 'Twan't no use. I couldn't get away from the thing, so I stopped the mules and looked at it comin.'

"Goodness! stranger, it makes me have rattle snakes and centipedes every time I think of that night. There a floatin' 'round in the whirlin' sand was horses an' cattle an' doby bucks, not to speak of jack rabbits, kiotes, an' small trash. It were gettin' tolable close by this time, an' I says to myself, 'William, are you prepared to ascend?' 'No,' says I; 'I ain't,' an' jumped off'er my mule, grabbed a big soap weed and fastened on with a death grip.'

I went none too soon, stranger, for in a minnit up went my whole body, my arms an' legs twistin' round like rope. I heer'd the soap weed crackin' an' tearin', but it didn't let go, an' I didn't. Purty soon the whirligig let go and down I come. The very first thing I looked for the team, an' I see it. Ther' they was swingin' round an' round an' goin' up till they didn't look biggerin' a log, an' then they went out o' sight. I gethered myself up an' footed it back to Bowie. The very first man I met were the waggin' boss. Says he, 'Hello, Bill, what's the matter?' I set right down on' told him how I come so near goin' to Heaven alive, an' after I was done he says, 'Bill, what kind of a Rincaboo play are you tryin' to run on me; you've sold that team.' I told 'em the thing was a dead open an' shut fact, but they talked so strong about sendin' me to Lawrence that I hulled out an' come here."

Berlin Cathedral.

The old cathedral in Berlin is being pulled down and a new one erected. The Emperor has consented to allow paper-weights to be made of the marble pavement and steps of the altar where the late Emperor William's coffin stood. Each weight bears stamped upon it the words in which the Emperor gave his permission as a guarantee of its genuineness. They are to be sold for charitable purposes.

Pain Self-Inflicted.

This is supposed to be an age of enlightenment. Yet the half-civilized persistence with which hosts of people keep dosing themselves on small occasion argues a blind credulity characteristic of the dark ages. Constipation has a myriad of alleged curatives, which in a nauseous dose merely evacuate the bowels—this operation being preceded by pain and followed by weakness—the latter an effect of their excessive, violent action. Podyphyllin, aloes, gamboge embodied in the form of pills, bluemass, calomel—these are among the violent medicaments for which should be substituted Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, the finest, most genial laxative extant, never griping, and resembling in its action an effort of nature in her happiest mood. This benign and thorough medicine is also an antidote to malaria and rheumatism, gives strength to the system, renders digestion perfect, and regulates the kidneys and bladder.

Vines on Walls.

In a recent official report it is asserted that the common notion that vines covering walls tend to produce or promote dampness is so far from being true that the contrary is the case, such covered walls being drier than those exposed. A moment's reflection would suggest that a thicket of leaves acts as a thatch, throwing off rain and keeping walls dry. They also have the further effect of preventing walls from being heated by the sun, so that in case of dwellings where the walls are covered during the summer the rooms are perceptibly cooler in consequence.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

The Grip Twice

"I have had the grip the last two winters. Last winter it prostrated me so that I had no strength and could not do my work. I sat down and cried many times, I was so blue and discouraged. I had great pain in my back and across my kidneys and through my whole body. I also had a bad cough. Hood's Sarsaparilla just about saved my life. It gave me strength so that I could do my work and made me feel well. I shall always be a warm friend to Hood's Sarsaparilla. I do not want anything better for a family medicine." MRS. None But Royal BAKING POWDER is absolutely pure. No other equals it, or approaches it in leavening strength, purity, or wholesomeness. (See U. S. Gov't Reports.) No other is made from cream of tartar specially refined for it and chemically pure. No other makes such light, sweet, finely-flavored, and wholesome food. No other will maintain its strength without loss until used, or will make bread or cake that will keep fresh so long, or that can be eaten hot with impunity, even by dyspeptics. No other is so economical.

The Baking Powders now being offered in this vicinity, with the statement that they are "as good as Royal," have been shown by the official analyses to be composed of alum and detrimental to health.

The official chemists of the United States and Canada, State analysts, municipal boards of health, and physicians indorse the great qualities of the Royal Baking Powder.

Decided.

Queen Margherita of Italy, is a happy woman, in that she is so well-beloved, not only by her own people, but by her husband, the King. She has long been known as one of the beauties of Europe, but she has now begun to realize the flight of time, and recently said to her husband, with some wistfulness:

"I am too old to wear white gowns any longer."

The King did not contradict her, but smiled, and said, "Let us take a fortnight to think over the matter!"

At the end of that time came a large packing-case, filled with white dresses of every description, and of the utmost elegance. The case was addressed to the Queen and, prettiest of all compliments, it contained a card bearing the words:

"The King's decision."

Ready Despatch.

There is a bird in China called the sienhoh, on the crown of the head of which there is a beautiful scarlet tuft of down or velvet skin, to which, the natives believe, the poison of the serpent it is fond of eating determines. This downy crest is often formed into a bead, and that bead is concealed in the ornamental necklaces of the high officers—the aristocracy of China—for a suicidal purpose, in case of Imperial displeasure, which, as report goes, is easily effected by merely touching the venomous bead with the tip of the tongue, when death follows instantly.

THERE are a large number of hygienic physicians who claim that disease is always the result of a transgression of Nature's laws. The proprietors of Garfield Tea are both physicians, and have devoted years to teaching the people how to avoid sickness by following Nature's laws. They give away with every package of Garfield Tea a little book which they claim will enable all persons, if directions are followed, to avoid sickness of all kinds, and to have no need of Garfield Tea or any other medicine.

World's Fair Souvenir Coins—

The Official Souvenir of the Great Exposition—

5,000,000 of which were donated to the World's Columbian Exposition by the Government, are being rapidly taken by an enthusiastically patriotic people.

As there early promised to be a demand for these Souvenirs that would render them very valuable in the hands of speculators, the Exposition Authorities decided to place the price at

and sell them direct to the people, thus realizing $5,000,000, and using the additional money for the further development of the Fair.

Considering the fact that there were but 5,000,000 of these coins to be distributed amomg 65,000,000 people, in this country alone (to say nothing of the foreign demand,) and that many have already been taken, those wishing to purchase these mementoes of our Country's Discovery and of the grandest Exposition ever held, should secure as many as they desire at once.

For Sale Everywhere

Realizing that every patriotic American will want one or more of these coins, and in order to make it convenient for him to get them, we have made arrangements to have them sold throughout the country by all the leading Merchants and Banks. If not for sale in your town, send $1.00 each for not less than five coins, by Post-office or Express Money-order, Registered Letter or Bank Draft, with instructions how to send them to you, all charges prepaid, to

The New Great South American Kidney Cure.

The acknowledged superior cure and immediate relief for all derangements, painfulness and decay of the kidneys or bladder, Bright's disease, diabetes or any complaint that hurts or despoils either of these delicate organs. This new remedy has been thoroughly tested by learned physicians and found far superior to any medicine yet discovered for quickly relieving all weaknesses, aches, pains and distresses arising from disease of any part of the urinary passages. It great relief for the old, middle aged and children, male or female. It relieves at once retention and pain in passing water, and it is very effective in relieving prostatic troubles in the old, and for nightly incontinence of water in children, or others, caused by weakness of the bladder. It may be worth to many a hundred times its cost. This is a remedy of great value to ladies, because they are very liable to weakness and pain peculiar to their sex. Sold by Robbins & McCord, druggists, Auburn, Ind. tf

Alex Timmerman, north of town died Monday, and was buried on Wednesday.

The L M C. held their regular session Thursday evening, at the home of Mrs. Emma Keep.

Mrs. Lizzie Kelley and daughter Pearl, of Auburn, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Levi Brandaberry.

A free thinker named Bell, lectured at the Opera House Wednesday and Thursday evenings, it is said, to good houses.

Mrs. Ida Blair Daniels of Fairmont, Minn., came home last Saturday to visit her family for a few weeks. Mrs. Blair has not been as well of late.

Mrs Wilson and Mrs. Phil Morell took a sleigh ride over to Auburn, Wednesday, of last week, and made a pleasant call upon Mrs. George Morell.

A lady whose name we did not learn, lectured on spiritualism at the Opera House Sunday morning and evening. A full house attended in the evening.

Frank H. Edwards and Abbey E. Matson were married at Pomona, Cal., January 10, 1893. The bride is a niece of Mrs. Florence Waterman, of this place. Formerly lived here, and has many friends in this vicinity.

Mrs. Rosenberry is quite low, with slight expectations of recovery. Grip, asthma, and perhaps a complication of other diseases, being the cause. Dr. Teal, of Kendallville, was called hereby Dr. Broughton as counsel.

Adam Boyer is sick, partly as the result of the grip, and asthma. He sleeps in his chair, for the reason that he cannot breathe when lying down. Leslie Smith has also been sick again, is better now, but still confined to the house.

Samuel Dickinson, who lately returned from Michigan where he had resided several years, died at his home here Tuesday morning. He was an early settler of this county, having resided in Concord township and in Auburn in the early days, when he was a teacher, and occupied other honorable positions.

The meetings in progress at several of the churches are very interesting, and are resulting in some good. If there was the fire and earnestness that should actuate all professing christians, there would be such an outpouring of the holy spirit as has never before been felt here. We need such a blessing. The work is all for the pastor to do,—the people should hold up his hands, and do their part.

The Sioux City Journal, of Jan. 15, containing an obituary (marked) reached us too late for the COURIER last week:

"Mrs. Laura Booge, aged 92 years, died at 3:30 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, at the home of her granddaughter, Mrs. James F Peavey. The funeral services occurred yesterday at 10 a. m., Dean Cornell, officiating. Everyone, especially old settlers, knew 'Grandma Booge.' She was bright, spakling and intelligent to the last. For years she has lived with her daughter Mrs. Emma Jones mother of Mrs Peavy. She was the mother of thirteen children, of whom three sons and two daughters survive." Mrs B. and family many years ago moved into the vicinity of Waterloo. After the L. S. & M. S. R. R. was built she came into town, her grown up sons having gone west. She was highly respected and had many warm friends here who remember her as interesting and bright. Mrs. Will Leas is a grandchild of the late Mrs. Booge.

The Inquirer and Mirror of Jan. 14, published on Nantucket Island says: "Winter has not touched us so keenly for six years as during the last week. For the first time since it was erected, (five years ago) D. W. Burgess and sons have put ice into their house, at Tom Nevers pond. They secured about 300 tons of excellent quality 8-inch ice. Tuesday the mercury rose to 34 degrees above, but in the afternoon the change came suddenly, and in eleven hours the mercury had fallen 26 degrees and Wednesday morning the record at the signal office indicated a minimum temperature of 3 degrees above zero or a range of 31 degrees in temperature in twenty one hours. Wednesday morning the harbors were filled with ice, and the wind blew half a gale from the northwest, but the steamer left on time, cut her way safely to clear water, and proceeded to Woods Holl after a rough passage. She was an hour and a half getting through the ice before reaching Cottage City. Thursday forenoon the telegraph announced that the boat would make no attempt to reach Nantucket." This leaves the islanders shut out from steamboat communication with the world. Burgess & Sons are since harvesting ten-inch ice.

I. H. N. Coffinberry, Auditor in and for said County of DeKalb, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true and complete list of all the lands and town lots in said county returned delinquent for the taxes for the year 1891, with the delinquent tax, penalty and interest, and also the tax for the year 1892, to the best of my knowledge and belief.

Notice is therefore hereby given, that so much of the foregoing lands and town lots as may be necessary to discharge the taxes, interest and penalty, and charges due thereon or due from the owners thereof at the time of the sale, will be sold at public auction at the court house door, in the town of Auburn, in said county, on the second Monday in February, A. D., 1893, (the same being the 13th day of said month,) unless such taxes, penalty, interest and charges are previously paid. Sale to commence at 10 o'clock a. m., on said day and continue until all have been offered for sale.

H. N. COFFINBERRY, Auditor.

Auburn, Ind., Jan. 16, 1893.

BUTLER.

The Kinney saw mill is now situated on a small island amid a sea of logs.

John Wilson's job proved too hard for his broken limb and he had to give it up.

Isaac and Jacob Dohner, returned last Saturday to their western home near Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Haskins' new store room is about complete, and rumor has it that it will be occupied by a well known town firm.

Mrs. Hannah Ocker has been removed to her niece's, Mrs. Skelton, near Edgerton. Her mental powers seem to be waning. Her physical health seems also to be seriously impaired.

A. F. Pinchin, who has been a conspicuous member of Butler society for nearly thirty years, is dangerously sick at his home on West North street, with but meager hopes of recovery.

McMorgan has rented the Cameron House at Hamilton, and will open a respectable first-class hotel, free from whiskey and gambling. We bespeak for him a successful run of business.

Several sled loads of the members of the order of "Daughters of Rebecca," visited a sister lodge at Edgerton, Ohio, Saturday night. Their return was enlivened by a series of copious showers of rain,—not a delightful adjunct to a sleigh ride.

ST. JOE.

Mark Alton, of Lansing, Mich., is visiting in the family of A. M. Dermott

The creamery company have been laying in a big supply of ice for their use this summer.

Sam Gee has moved onto the B. A. Hadsell place and will try his hand at farming for a year or two.

Zeal Burley of Antwerp, O., has been visiting relatives and friends in this vicinity for the last week.

B. A. Hadsell has moved to Angola. He goes there to give his two boys the benefit of the school there.

Charles Rugman stopped over night at John Simonton's last Wednesday. He had been down in Egypt after corn.

O. H. Widney has been some what under the weather for the past few days. He thinks a light attack of the grip is quite sufficient.

Sol. Barney was seen riding out of town one day last week escorted by a deputy sheriff. His friends did not borrow much trouble and he returned a few hours later safe and sound.

Harry White, Henry Hathaway, Charley Stafford, Art Woodcox, Rosy Rupert, Ida Stafford, Russia Warner, Ada Jones, Blanche Leighty, Mattie White and Dora Kinsey were entertained by P. A. Shurts and lady Saturday evening. report a good time.

A sleigh load of the young people of St. Joe were royally entertained at the residence of J. M. Milliman Tuesday night of last week. When Aunt Maria Milliman cannot entertain her company it is no use for any one to try. Sorghum taffy till you can't rest.

S. and F. Barney have sold their stock of hardware to the new firm of Case & Co., who have removed the same to the building they lately purchased of M. T. Bishop. S. and F., will carry only the choicest stock of dry goods, clothing, gent's furnishing goods and groceries.

Chris Curie has been down in the south woods for some days measuring up some timber that was being cut on a piece of land owned by him and Dr. H. W. Bowman. It is said that Chris has become so infatuated with that country that he may conclude to stay in that neck of the woods.

The big four store at this place have been having their coal oil shipped in car load lots but owing to their immense sales for the last few days have concluded that nothing but train loads will supply the demand. The extreme low price at which they sell does it all. Only think of it, 4 cents per gallon.

CEDAR CREEK.

Several new cases of measles reported.

There was a carpet rag bee at Mrs. Rebecca Shenk's Friday.

Mrs. Geo. Lung and Libbie Lung visited friends at Garrett last week.

Mrs. Samuel Knott visited her parents at Huntertown a week ago Sunday.

O C. Hines, T. J. Baxter and W. Balentine went to Garrett Saturday on business.

Wm. Jackson who is in the delivering business, has rented his saw mill here to Mr. Whitford of Altona.

Wm. Deveny has sold his property at this place, to Mrs. Miller of Garrett, and purchased five acres near that town.

T. J. Baxter, by a false step, fell down stairs and injured his false ribs to the extent that his school at No. 3, had a vacation of a week.

The interest is increasing in the literary at Butler Center. Question for next session: Resolved: That it would be advantageous to the U. S. to annex Canada.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly.

Emile Zola's thrilling and dramatic story of the Franco Prussian War, entitled "The Storming of the Mill," is published complete, with illustrations, in the February number of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly. This tale is a revelation to readers who have hitherto had the misfortune to know the great French novelist only through that sinister and seamy part of his work represented by "Nana" and "Germant." The leading article of this number of Frank Leslie's is a vivid historical paper upon "The Continental Congress," by Richard B Kimball, L. L. D. It has timely as well as an intrinsic interest, because, as the veteran author says, "the inauguration of the world's fair at Chicago recalls irresistibly, by contrast, the scene at Philadelphia, where, in 1774, a small body of men chosen from each of the thirteen colonies met to unite in resistance against Great Britian." The main artistic feature of the number is the superbly illustrated article on "Corsica" by Frank Barrett; and the literary papers are A. Oakey Hall's "Romance of St. John's Gate, London," and Henry Tyrrell's sketch of Renan. Cecil Charles writes interestingly of "The Evolution of a Dictatorship" in Costa Rica; Frances M. Smith, of "Famous Old Violins; and Ernest Ingersoll, of "Big Game in Europe." Daniel Dane's serial story of "The Great Chantry Diamonds" is brought to a dramatic conclusion.

Stricken Down with Heart Disease.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

GENTLEMEN: I feel it my duty, as well as a pleasure, to publish, unsolicited, to the world the benefit received from DR. MILES' RESTORATIVE REMEDIES. I was stricken down with Heart Disease and its complications, a rapid pulse varying from 90 to 140 beats per minute, a choking or burning sensation in the wind pipe, oppression in the chest, much pain in the region of the heart and below lower rib, pain in the arms, shortness of breath, sleeplessness, weakness and general debility. The arteries in my neck would throb violently, the throbbing of my heart could be heard across a large room and would shake my whole body. I was so nervous that I could not hold my hand steady. I have been under the treatment of eminent physicians, and have taken gallons of Patent Medicine without the least benefit. A friend recommended your remedies. She was cured by Dr. Miles' remedies. I have taken three bottles of your New Heart Cure and two bottles Nervine. My pulse is normal, I have no more violent throbbing of the heart, I AM A WELL MAN. I sincerely recommend every one with symptoms of Heart Disease to take Dr. Miles' Restorative Remedies and be cured.

Physicians Outdone.

My wife has been suffering with female trouble of the severest kind for over three years. I have paid twenty-five dollars during the last three months, and she had no relief. She had doctored continually with the best of physicians. I bought three bottles each of Dullam's Great German Female Uterine Tonic and Dullam's Great German blood, liver, stomach and kidney cure, and can say to day that she is entirely cured.

W. H. DROWLEY.

Sworn to before me on this 23d day of June, 1890, JOHN C. DULLAM. Notary Public, Flint, Mich., Genesee Co. $1 a bottle. For sale by Casebeer & Matheny.

An English railway company has set apart a special fund from which to reward acts of bravery on the part of its employes.

Don't get Imposed Upon.

Is a good motto to follow in buying a medicine as well as in everything else. By the universal satisfaction it has given and by the many remarkable cures it has accomplished, Dullam's Great German blood, liver, stomach and kidney cure has proven itself unequaled for building up and cleansing your system and for all diseases arising from impure blood. Do not experiment with an unheard of or untried article which you are told is as good, but be sure to get Dullam's. All druggists keep it. $1 a bottle. For sale by Casebeer & Matheny.

A driving circuit has been organized which includes South Bend, Plymouth, Laporte, Crown Point and Valparaiso.

How I Felt.

Why, two years ago I was just about crazy, no wonder that my wife and children were afraid of me. You just want to suffer with neuralgia with no relief as I did until I used Sulphur Bitters. They cured me, and now my wife says I am as meek as a lamb.—Robert Davis, American House, Boston. 8

What is

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D., 111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

CORRESPONDENCE

WATERLOO.

The sick in town are generally convalescent or nearing that point.

Phil. Morell and wife drove over to Auburn Sunday with "the boy" and partook of a good dinner with their son George Morell and his wife.

S. W. Dickinson died in Waterloo the early part of last week and was buried Thursday. The funeral services were held at the Presbyterian church, conducted by Rev. G. W. Healy.

Saturday evening last five couple took a sleigh ride out to Emanuel Shoemaker's where they spent a pleasant evening. A fine supper was prepared for them and pedro helped to pass away the hours.

It rained steadily the greater part of Sunday night and the whole of Monday. The walking has been and is yet almost unsafe. Very rough in some places but slippery everywhere. Tuesday is probably as cold a day as we have had this winter.

Mrs. Gillett, who formerly lived in Waterloo, was here last week calling on some of her old neighbors. The family moved west some years ago. The husband died then, the sons and daughters married and at the present time Mrs. G. can boast of having an even dozen grandchildren, and to crown all, she, herself, has gone to Angola, and married again. The name of the new husband is forgotten.

Mrs. Jesse Gale of Angola, died Sunday night, February 4th. She has been sick for some time. The family have suffered an unusual number of severe afflictions, in the last few months. Mr. Jesse Gale died a year or two ago Some little time has passed when a little child of Mrs. Gilbert, a daughter of Mrs Gale, lost its life through eating some medicine prepared for the mother and probably to be taken in small portions, and only a few days ago a married son died and Mrs. Gale so ill as to know nothing of it, perhaps unconscious. Finally the daughter spoken of is insane Mrs. Gale is spoken of by her friends, as a woman's beloved and highly respected. She has been a lecturer, prominent in good works and an active worker in the W. C. T. U. cause.

CONCORD.

J. D. Smith has lost another horse.

Rev. S. J. Jones is holding a series of meetings.

C. Keller has just survived the second attack of grip.

Hereafter Rev. S. J. Jones will preach in the forenoon.

G. W. Draggoo and Will Scott were in Auburn Saturday.

Did every body see the style Tell Elson was putting on Sunday.

Dennis White is home with several mashed fingers caused by coupling cars.

Several attended church at Fairview Sabbath last and report a large attendance.

Mrs. Swihart, who has been visiting Mrs. Bert Mochimer returned to her home in Kendallville.

Frank Mochimer and Will Letts of Grand Rapids, Mich., are visiting their cousin Bert Mochimer and family.

John Farver and his cousin of Steuben county, visited relatives in Adams and Defiance counties, Ohio, last week.

R B. Clear of Churubusco came down on a business trip Friday, but unfortunately lost his pocket book containing between $11 and $14.

Last Saturday little Iva Morr entertained twenty of her schoolmates it being her 11th birthday. May and Mattie prepared a fine dinner for the little guests.

Monday last through the rain G. W. Draggoo, Wayne Scott, Wm. Provines, and Jake Baker drove down to South Egypt to buy corn. They returned with beautiful corn.

Notwithstanding the severe storm of last Thursday, Dr. Bowman made his visits to his patients. He was so entirely covered with sleet and snow he could finely represent old Santa Claus.

J. B. Draggoo had a runaway Saturday in St. Joe. He recently purchased a horse and had them shod that day. In leaving the shop the new horse started, the other would not be outdone, up Main street they dashed at break neck speed but before reaching the North and South street, kicked loose. This, jerked J. B, on the front bob, over the tongue into a large snowdrift, the lines broke, freeing them. Then they turned south, then east to the Disciple church there colliding with a hitching post and were caught. They received only a few scratches. Goldust has always been Mrs. D's and the girls' carriage horse.

ASHLEY.

Ashley is not all blow wind.

The Ashley stock yards are completed.

We have thirty-three business firms and none starving.

John Rabe bought a business lot and will build at once.

Being out of town was the cause of no items in the few last issues.

J. W. Clark is filling up his store with first-class goods and will soon be ready for business.

Ask Geo. Strayer and Frank Seiler if you don't believe it, that the big shops will be located here.

Wyrick's store has assumed a business air again and every one is taking advantage of the cheap sales.

Since this elegant sleighing the fairer sex have been in a quandary who R. H. McInturff's best girl is.

The Black Flag will be given at Clark's Hall Feb. 11, for the benefit of the band. Come one and all.

The Methodists will soon start their protracted effort in Clark's Hall. They will also build a fine church in the near future.

A Mr. Brown from Missouri, arrived here and is to engage in the real estate business. Still they come to help push our town.

SUMMIT.

Warren Boyer from near Hamilton was in town Saturday.

Henry Lawson and family visited Geo. McDougle's in Hudson Sunday.

Andy Duncan and wife visited Henry Heckathorn's near Ashley Sunday.

R. T. Duncan who has been away the past few weeks buying horses was home over Sunday.

Geo. Burnworth of North Washington, Ohio, returned to his home Thursday, having visited his relatives in and near Hudson, and especially his uncle, Harrison Wysong having met him only three times during the last 42 years.

Commnnicated.

A letter of recent date from a friend at Waterloo, asks for a fuller treatment of several living political questions, and among other things the tariff, the silver question, the banks, etc. He quotes approvingly from the new democratic senator from Kansas, Mr. Martin, who says: "I am a democrat, and have never been anything else. I am unconditionally in favor of tariff reform, not only in the ordinary sense, but on tariff reduction of a radical character. I favor he least possible rates that can be laid on the necessaries of life and placing higher rates on luxuries. I am in favor of unlimited coinage of silver and opposed on general principles to national banks, or any financial system between the government and private individuals." He says further that he is in favor of an income tax, and of the plan to elect senators by the people The writer also believes a law should be made to secure pure food etc., and to do away with the army of officers in charge of the whisky warehouses, etc., to revise the pension list, cutting off the unworthy, and giving more to the worthy. He is also pronounced against further undesirable immigration. While his views are rather extreme, we feel sure that on many of them, our readers will fully agree.

Goes Ahead.

That is what we say now in regard to the charming winter. The beautiful snow and crisp air, are bracing and invigorating. How wonderfully we enjoy the delights of a sleighride! But that is not all, we can just as well appreciate the brisk enterprise of those about us. Give man a chance and he will work wonders, and supersedes the lower to the degree of a superior creation in instinct, intellect and genius. Many men have lived remarkable lives and in dying left behind them a no less remarkable history for the contemplation of rising generations. Some have plunged into the vortex of business, and from a lack of ingenuity, push and capital have failed. Not so with A. Lewis & Co., who have been in the lumber business the major part of 20 years. They have invested largely, and taken time and opportunity by the forelock. And now they come to the front with their midwinter announcement, which goes ahead of any previous one for variety, quality and price. Mr. Lewis the manager, authorizes the statement that he is restocking, preparatory to the spring trade with large shipments of lumber, lath, shingles, flooring, moulding and general finishings, which will be supplied to the public at prices comparative with the stringent demands of modern times. Mr. Lewis' judgment as a buyer and seller of lumber is something to be relied upon. His wide experience in the business enables him to avoid the mistakes so frequently made by persons not fully acquainted with the technicalities of lumbering, and in consequence he is better fitted to gratify the wants of builders and contractors, in the line of building. Let those who contemplate any building in the spring and coming summer, see to making such arrangements while the roads are good as will enable them to facilitate the convenience and propriety of buying their lumber now.

The Two Great Canals

The great Nicaragua Canal scheme is looming up again all the more prominently for the recent trouble over the Panama canal. This line, though a longer one from ocean to ocean, is much the best. There is no such high rocky ground to cut through, while the larger river will prove a great help, part of the way, giving a good depth of water. Then there is a long lake that will carry the deepest sea vessels. This line will certainly be constructed within a few years.

The Panama canal may some day be finished, but it looks just now as if it would have to wait for some time till the trouble is forgotten. Several hundred millions have already been spent, and it will take nearly as much more. But they have a good deal of property to show for it, including the ownership of the Panama railroad which they bought out. They also have thousands of dump cars, hundreds of engines, many dredges, expensive hospitals and a great deal of various kinds of machinery and appliances for cutting through rocks, dredging soft ground and rivers. It was a stupendous undertaking, but might have been successful, had it been honestly conducted.

AUBURN.

Real Estate Agency of AUBURN, IND.

RICKEL & SPROTT, Props.

We present in this column a list which has been selected from our choicest properties, and are the best and cheapest.

TOWN PROPERTIES.

An elegant two-story frame dwelling with all necessary out buildings, small fruits and all the modern conveniences which go to make a beautiful and pleasant home. Will be sold cheap for cash, or will accept two-thirds cash; balance in one year.

A very desirable residence property on North Van Buren street. This property has good, almost new buildings, well, cistern and some fruits, and a price that will astonish you.

A vacant lot on West 7th street.

A nice residence on Seventh street right handy to schools and churches, and within a two minutes' walk of the Court House.

A most desirable residence on south Jackson street, which we offer at a bargain, and will give the purchaser the privilege of paying out in monthly payments, if he so desires. Terms, $500 cash; balance in monthly payments.

FARMS.

We offer, first, a splendid Seventy acres in Union township, well tiled, good fences. Land that cannot be beat for gardening and for small fruits. Will sell cheap for cash, or on the most favorable terms on long time. Lays within three miles of Auburn.

Eighty acres of good land, within one mile of Newville. Good buildings, orchard, and, better soil cannot be found in DeKalb county. Easy prices, and terms to suit the purchaser.

We have a number of farms and town properties on our books, which we are not allowed to advertise, because of the simple fact, that they are offered so cheap that were it known the public would draw the conclusion that the owners are hard up for ready cash, which we all know would be a mistake.

We are agents for those lands in Kansas and Nebraska, which can be had on the most favorable terms ever offered, to-wit: The purchaser makes a small cash payment, just enough to show that he is in earnest, then yearly, thereafter, he pays (delivers at the nearest market) one-half of the crops raised on the land. If crops are unfavorable and he raises no crop, then he makes no payment that year, but is carried over until next year, and so on, until he pays out. Shall we have your application for one of these farms?

We shall be pleased to see you at any time and show, Free of Charge, any of the properties we have on our lists. Write or call on us for any information regarding rates, time of trains to any place on "God's green earth," and remember that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad pays the back fare to all points in competition where the fare is $2. or more.

HERE'S NEWS FOR YOU,

CAUGHT ON THE WING FOR OUR INTELLIGENT READERS.

A General Strike Expected During the World's Fair—An Island King Asks for the Protection of the United States—Frightful Fate of Four Children.

LOOKING FOR TROUBLE.

The Pennsylvania People Expect a Strike During the World's Fair.

Indianapolis special: Ever since the Pennsylvania Railroad Company began to discharge members of labor organizations in this and other cities there has been a general understanding that a strike was impending, and the developments within the past few days have convinced careful observers that the railroads are preparing to meet such an emergency as a general strike would present. While none of the railroad officials are willing to be quoted, they do not hesitate to say that the labor organizations are preparing for a strike during the World's Fair.

That they have information regarding some proposed movement among employes is not denied, and some of the less discreet among the employes are outspoken in endorsing a general strike and in declaring that arrangements are making for one when the World's Fair opens.

KEEP HANDS OFF.

An Island King Asks for the Protection of the United States.

San Francisco special: Col. Charles F. Dailey, American Commissioner for King Teburiemo of Butaritari, one of the Gilbert Islands, has forwarded to the State Department at Washington a protest from the King against the forcible seizure of his islands by the British Government while negotiations are progressing with the United States. He asks the protection of the United States or annexation. Advices from Butaritari says Capt. Davis, of the British Navy, who seized the islands, was arbitrary in his conduct. He was insulting to Americans on the islands and abusive to the King. Representatives of the island King in this country say that the British made haste to seize the islands several months ago on receipt of information from Sidney, Australia, that the King had gone to the United States to ask protection.

Frightful Fate of Four Children.

The house of Oliver Pattie, three miles north of Bellaire, Mich., was burned. Three of Mr. Pattie's children, aged 13, 10, and 3 years, were roasted to death. A neighbor's boy, Taylor by name, had been playing with the children and it is feared that he too was burned. All the children were in the house alone. The father works nights in a Bellaire factory. The mother was away preaching, it is said. It is supposed that the fire started while the children were asleep and that they were unable to make their escape, either through fear or on account of locked doors.

A Passenger Train Jumps the Track in a Tunnel.

Parkersburg (W. Va.) special: The vestibuled fast line from Cincinnati to New York on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, jumped the track just as Tunnel No. 5 was reached. The engine and every car but the sleeper went off. The train was going forty miles an hour and dashed over the ties scraping the sides of the tunnel until it emerged from the other side. The engineer William Myers, was badly scalded and his fireman hurt. The track was blockaded for twelve hours.

Crime Most Damnable.

The press of St. Petersburg has exposed a traffic in young women in the Eastern Provinces. Girls have been decoyed from home by men representing themselves to be agents of the World's Fair in Chicago. Promise of good wages for easy work at the fair were given to the girls. Once over the border they were sent to the brothels in Constantinople and Vienna. The chief agent in Russia for these concerns has been arrested.

Strange Death of a Prominent Man.

William Pierson, a well-known young resident of Elkhart, Ind., was found dead at his home the other morning, and his wife just alive. Upon their non-appearance neighbors entered the house, finding Pierson lying dead on the floor. He was frozen, the fire having gone out. The wife recovered consciousness, but could give no account of what had happened. She had vomited, which gives rise to the theory that poison was administered.

A Family Cremated.

Mrs. Stephen James, Emma James, aged 11; Arthur James, aged 7, and Joe Mitchell, aged 6, were burned to death in a fire which destroyed the little cabin of Stephen James, at 1210 West Eighth street, Kansas City, Mo. All the victims are colored. The fire caught from an over-heated stove while all the occupants of the house were asleep.

Artificial Lake Washed Out.

The dam at West Muncie, Ind., that was erected for the purpose of forming an artificial lake of several hundred acres, and costing $10,000, was washed away. Much damage was done.

Ex-Governor Foraker.

Ex-Governor J. B. Foraker has been appointed by Gov. McKinley, a trustee of the Ohio State University to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Rutherford B. Hayes.

SERIOUS WRECK

Three Employes of the Big Four Badly Hurt.

A serious and perhaps fatal wreck occurred on the Michigan division of the Big Four, three miles north of Niles, Mich. The train, consisting of one freight car laden with potatoes and a caboose, drawn by engine 622, was moving south at a speed of twenty miles an hour, when a flange on one of the wheels of the freight car broke and threw the car and the caboose off the track. At the point where the accident happened there is an embankment twenty feet high, down which the caboose and freight car rolled, the stove in the latter upsetting and igniting the debris, which was entirely consumed. At the time there were in the caboose James Scott, conductor; Fred Scott, brakeman, and William Palmer, brakeman, all of Wabash, Ind., and Frank Hammond and Henry C. Price, attorneys of Benton Harbor. Fred Scott was so badly cut, bruised, and burned that he cannot move in his bed. James Scott had his nose broken and the bone of his right leg fractured, while Palmer was so bruised, cut, and burned on the head that the doctors say he will not recover. The two attorneys escaped with trifling cuts. The engine, deprived of its train, ran to Niles for medical assistance, and the patients are now in that place.

TERRIBLE CAUSALTY.

Fearful Consequences of a Broken Gas Main.

Urbana, (O.) special: The greatest calamity that ever occurred in this city happened the other night, when a natural gas explosion occurred in the home of Mr. John D. Shofstall on East Church street. By the explosion his daughter, a young woman 23 years of age, was killed, Mrs. Clark, aged 68 years, seriously injured and died a few hours later, and Mr. Shofstall was badly burned. It was just 5:30 o'clock when the whole city was shaken as by an earthquake, and the shock was immediately followed by the alarm of fire. The firemen went to work with a will and soon rescued Mr. Shofstall from his fearful position. He pointed out where the two women were buried, and in a short time they were rescued. Mrs. Clark, the old lady, was first brought out, and then Miss Nellie Shofstall was discovered pinned down by the heavy timbers of the building and taken out. She was horribly mangled. Her neck was broken by the heavy timbers falling across it. Both eyes were literally torn from her head, while her body and face were a mass of cuts and bruises. She lingered about an hour before she died. Mrs. Clark's collar bone was broken, in addition to internal injuries, and she also died later. The explosion was caused by gas from a broken main filling the house, and igniting from a stove.

HUMAN BODIES

Fly in the Air in All Directions.

A terrible casualty occurred in Syracuse, N. Y. Near the State pump-house, at the foot of Emerson avenue, a Central Hudson passenger train, west bound, ran down six men. Three were killed outright and three injured. One died at the hospital, another is dying and the third is seriously hurt. The men were all employed as section hands on the Central Hudson Railroad. They were walking on the track. It was very cold, and the wind and snow were blowing furiously from over the lake. Foreman Maroney says that half a minute before they were run down he turned to see if a train was coming, but saw none. Very shortly afterward he heard an engine bell, and, looking around, saw the passenger train bearing down on them. He yelled to the men who were just ahead of him and jumped from the track, as he did so the cylinder box of the engine struck him in the hips. In a second the other men were flying through the air in all directions.

A STUPENDOUS STRIKE

May Be Inaugurated Within a Fortnight.

Chicago special: There is a storm brewing in the labor sky, which, when it bursts, will cause consternation in certain quarters that can just now least afford to cope with it. It will affect the most important business of the city and make itself felt in every branch of commerce having to do with the material prosperity of the city. Every wholesale house will feel its effect and if allowed to spread, it will paralyze the very bone and sinew of Chicago's trade. There is a prospect that the most stupendous strike on the railroads leading into the city which has ever been started may be inaugurated within a fortnight, no road being left unaffected. This strike will be organized and maintained by the switchmen, every man so employed being now practically pledged to go into it and hold out to the end.

Important Decision.

The Indiana Supreme Court has decided against the railroads in the tax cases that have been pending since last year, and which grew out of the refusal of a few persons to pay tax upon a total assessment of $160,000,000, made by the State Board of Tax Commissioners, the companies alleging that the law creating the commission was unconstitutional and that they had not been permitted to show that their property was not worth the sum fixed by the commission; that the tax amounts to $1,500,000 each year. The railroad company which has been fighting the law agreed to pay taxes on $69,000,000 of valuation as assessed, under the old law, but declined to pay on the $100,000,000 additional levied by the State Board of Tax Commissioners, created two years ago. Some of the railroads which have been resisting the law have paid the tax under protest but the others have declined to pay and many hundreds of thousands of dollars await the decision.

Indians on the War-Path.

Chadron (Neb.) special: Two Strikes' band killed five men on the reservation the other night, and now defy arrest by the Indian police. The killing took place at Humphrey's ranch, near the mouth of White Clay Creek. Humphrey's ranch is about twenty miles northwest of Pine Ridge Agency, and fifteen miles west of the Wounded Knee battleground of two years ago. There was considerable skirmishing in that neighborhood during the big uprising, and soldiers were stationed at the ranch for some time. Two Strikes' band was held together, and has been very vindictive of late, but the outbreak is a surprise. Immediately after sending the above dispatch the correspondent started for the scene of the trouble.

Terrible Explosion.

An explosion which seriously injured fourteen men took place at the Star foundry, a low wooden building at the corner of Washington and LaMartine streets, Worcester, Mass. The men had finished work and the moulders had gone home, leaving the laborers to empty the stock. The hot slag struck the wet ground and the explosion followed, wrecking the building. The foundry is the largest in the city. Patrick H. Judge, night watchman, 46 years old, married, was fatally injured. All the others were more or less seriously injured.

The Louisville and Nashville System to Be Tied Up.

The entire Louisville and Nashville system is likely to be tied up by a general strike of the engineers and firemen. President Smith refused to discuss the grievance with Grand Chief Sargeant and Chief Arthur of the engineers. The matter has now gone beyond their control and the grievance committees will order a vote on the advisability of a strike. If it passes by a two-thirds vote a general tie up will result.

Birth of a Coal Octopus.

Pittsburgh special: A movement is on foot looking to the formation of a combination of all the railroad coal operators of Western Pennsylvania. Several secret conferences have been held, and it is stated that the owners of 100 mines in this region, representing fully $15,000,000 capital, have signified their intention of joining the combine. The objects of the trust will be uniformity of prices, reduction of expenses and the regulation of the car service.

Collision on the Pittsburgh.

First section of freight No. 78 left Loudonville, Ohio, without orders and had gone but a short distance when the limited crashed into it. Engineer D. M. Peppard and Fireman Wertingberger of the freight train jumped for their lives. Peppard sustained a broken shoulder bone and it is feared other and more serious injuries, which may cause his death. The fireman had his left leg broken and was badly bruised. G. Betts, an electrician on the limited, was the only person hurt on that train. He was cut and bruised about the legs. The passengers were terribly shaken up, but, fortunately, no one was hurt so far as has been heard. Both engines, the combination smoker, and baggage-car of the limited and four freight cars were wrecked, obstructing the tracks for six hours.

Agree to Disagree.

Topeka (Kan.) special: Judging by present indications, the Republican House and the Populist House have practically buried the hatchet, as far as open warfare is concerned. An agreement is announced whereby they will divide the time on the floor from now to the close of the session, the Republicans meeting in the forenoon and the Populists in the afternoon. The Populists will follow the regular forms of legislation hereafter, and bills will be passed without regard to the Republicans. Only such bills as cannot be attacked in the Supreme Court will be passed, and at the close of the session appropriations for the expenses of the Legislature and the State Government and State institutions will be adopted.

A National Quarantine.

Director General Davis of the World's Fair, in his report on the cholera question to the council of administration, declares that it is absolutely necessary for the Federal Government to assume control of the quarantine service at seaports to insure public confidence in the efficiency of quarantine regulations. The report says there is no likelihood of the disease being introduced in the merchandise shipped here for purposes of exhibition, the only sources of danger being immigration from German ports and the importation of rags.

Wants to Follow Hawaii.

A big political meeting was held at Essex, Ont., the other night, to discuss the future of Canada. At the close of several speeches a vote was taken, and resulted as follows: To remain in statu quo, 21; independence, 12; imperial federation, 3; political union with the United States, 413. The few opponents of annexation tried to create a discussion and to prevent a ballot, but their efforts failed completely. The vote is a fair expression of the prevailing sentiment.

Against Annexation.

London special: The Pall Mall Gazette states that the Governor of New Zealand has telegraphed to the Marquis of Ripon, Secretary of State for the colonies, a strongly worded protest against the annexation of Hawaii by the United States. No definite answer has yet been returned by the imperial government to the New Zealand communication.

Venezuela's Boundary.

Mr. Cleist, the German Minister to Venezuela, who is also acting as British Minister, says that officially he has no information that Venezuela is to open the boundary question. No Minister from Venezuela has been named by the court of St. James.

Tenement House Fire.

Fire caused by a gas explosion broke out in a double five-story brick tenement on West Thirty-ninth street, New York. Fully twenty persons were injured and John Peterson, a gas inspector, was killed. One hundred people were in the building.

Sullivan Scorched.

A charcoal kiln at Sullivan, Mich., exploded and a dangerous fire started. A steam engine and two hose wagons were sent from Grand Rapids, and only after several hours of persistent effort was the town saved. Loss, $10,000.

A Young Lady Killed in a Wreck.

A passenger train on the Union Pacific road, was wrecked near Boise City, Idaho and Miss Emma Egan of Chicago, was killed. Several others were painfully injured.

A Snow Slide.

A huge snow slide struck a train on the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad near Toltre, Col. Three cars were hurled from the track and eight persons were severely injured.

Roasted Alive.

Maracaibo special: The Guajira Indians have roasted alive three traders who were caught stealing young Indian girls for the purpose of selling them into servitude.

Terrible Casualty at Lima, Ohio.

The entire family of Charles Mehr, consisting of father, mother, and son, was asphyxiated by gas at Lima, Ohio. The trouble was caused by a defective mixer.

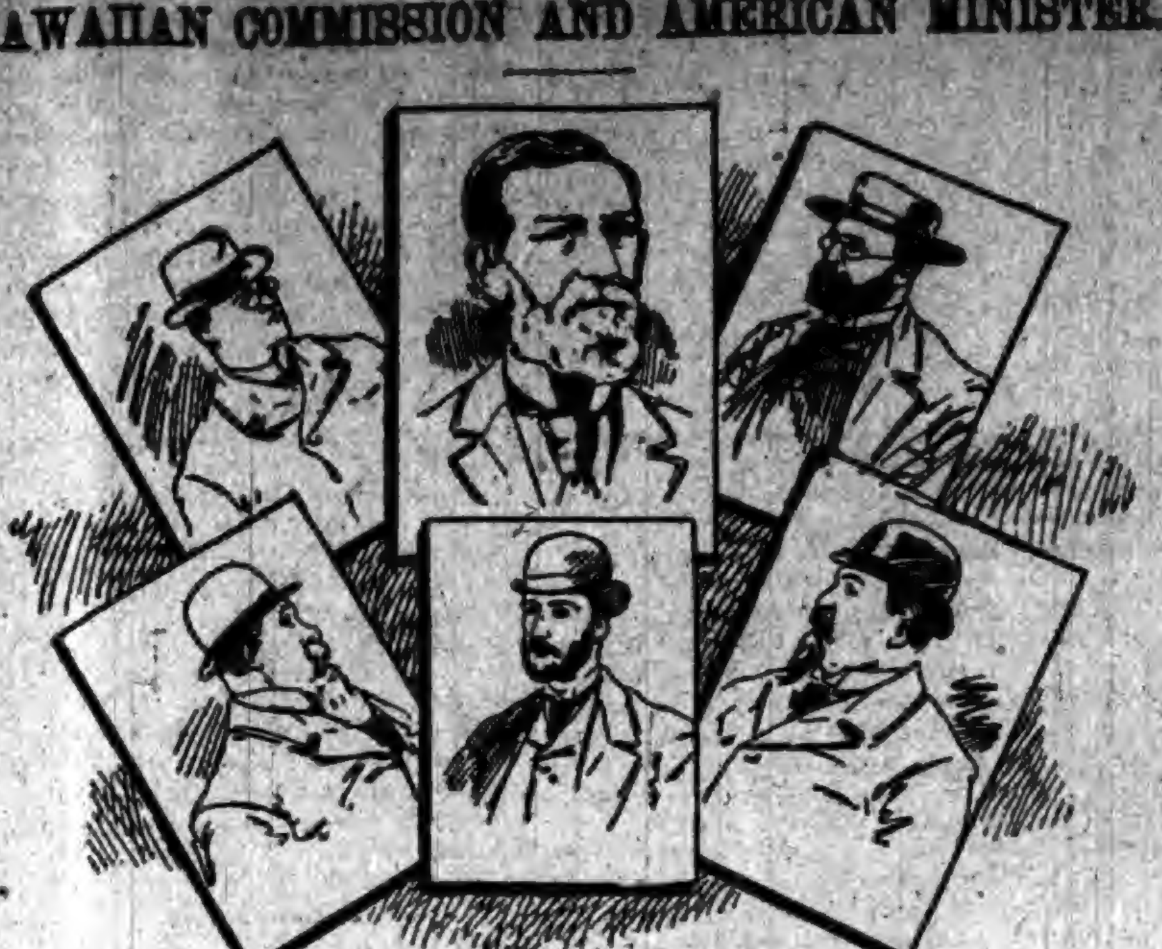
HAWAIIAN COMMISSION AND AMERICAN MINISTER.



Commissioner Carter. Commissioner Wilder. United States Minister Stevens. Commissioner Thurston. Commissioner Castle. Commissioner Marsden.

ALL SIDES OF THE HAWAIIAN ANNEXATION QUESTION.

For Annexation.

Hawaii must be ours.—Boston Globe.

Let us have them.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Cannot afford to let the opportunity slip.—Elgin News.

There is every reason why the islands should be accepted. —Detroit News.

It is scarcely more a privilege than a duty to annex the islands sans ceremonie.—New York Advertiser.

It is no party question—it is a matter of business. We want naval and coaling stations.—Atlanta Constitution.

Against Annexation.

It would be little less than a crime for the United States to annex them.—Buffalo Express.

The end of the whole matter, for the present, will probably be an American protectorate. —Cleveland Leader.

An expansive system of satrapy or territorial governorship the country had certainly better avoid.—Galveston News.

We have no place in our system of government for the Sandwich Islands as part of our actual domain.—St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

It is not at all certain that the American people or their government are of a mind in favor of annexing that country.—Philadelphia Ledger.

On the Fence.

The danger is great. — St. Paul Globe.

Must either remain independent or be annexed to the United States. — Milwaukee Wisconsin.

Growls of the Lion.

America must not be permitted to interfere in Hawaii. —London Telegraph.

There is the highest authority for the statement that England will not sit idly by and see the American flag raised over Hawaii.—London cablegram.

WILL LET HER COME IN.

The Feeling in Favor of Annexing Hawaii Growing in Congress.

Concerning the Hawaiian annexation, a Washington correspondent says that at both ends of the Capitol the sentiment is growing that annexation is the only step to take. The commissioners have said unofficially over and over again that they do not want a protectorate, and Senators and Representatives who at first thought that was an easy way out of the embarrassment of an unprecedented situation are drifting to the idea that this presents about as many difficulties as direct annexation. But no steps are going to be taken immediately. The provisional government is in a position to take care of the country for the present, with the help of United States marines. England seems disposed, according to London dispatches, to keep her hands off if we want to take the islands, and Senators and Representatives want to maintain the status quo until they have acquired fuller information about the resources of the islands and the different kinds of population who would have to be taken care of.

The strongest advocate and the strongest opponent of annexation are Southern Democratic Senators. Senator Morgan is for annexation, as he has been all along, and an advocate of a broad and foreign policy extending far beyond our own boundaries and our own property. In the discussions on Samoa and the Congo Free State, particularly in the case of the latter, he has taken a leading part in pushing claims of the United States to a wider sphere of influence, if not of power, and his advocacy of the Nicaragua canal as a part of the same policy is well known. The Southern men generally are in favor of Hawaiian annexation, but Louisiana opposes. The sugar interests of Louisiana and Hawaii conflict. The Louisiana planters are hoping for the repeal of the bounty and the imposition of a duty, and they don't want the islands to stand on the same footing that they do. Reciprocity with Hawaii has not been in the interest of Louisiana, and the Pelican planters believe that annexation would do a great deal to encourage the investment of American capital in the islands, and that the sugar culture would be greatly extended there and the islands made more dangerous competitors than they have ever been in the sugar market.

BAD WHISKY AND COWBOYS.

They Unite with Indians to Raise a Row at Pine Ridge.

Another scene in the shooting tragedy on the Sioux Reservation was enacted Friday evening near the spot where the four white men were killed by Indians. As soon as the news of the tragedy was brought to Pine Ridge Capt. Brown, the agent, dispatched twelve mounted police under command of Police Sergeant Joe Bush to the scene of the shooting, with instructions to arrest and bring in the perpetrators of the bloody work. When the squad arrived at their destination Two Sticks and his crowd opened fire on them and a skirmish took place, resulting in the death of two of Two Sticks' party and the wounding of Two Sticks and one of his sons. Two Sticks himself was shot in the leg and in the abdomen. Two Sticks' son was wounded slightly in the ankle. The dead Indians were left where they fell and the wounded ones were brought to the agency. The motive for the murder cannot be definitely learned. One account is that the Indians were playing cards with the white men in the dugout in which they were camped and got into a dispute, and that, after leaving them, the Indians returned and opened the door of the dugout and shot them while they were asleep. Another account is that these Indians had been in one of their sweat houses, going through some of their savage ceremonies, and became imbued with the idea that it was incumbent upon them to kill these men and proceeded to carry it into effect.

After making their reports the police were highly complimented by Captains Brown and Cisney. Capt. Brown has another squad of police out after those who got away, with instructions to bring them to the agency dead or alive.

A courier reports that Two Sticks and his two sons returned two or three hours after killing the cowboys and took all the bed clothing in the camp and stole what food was in sight. It is a difficult matter to obtain reliable particulars. Last night it was rumored that Two Sticks' friends were moving toward the agency and were going to fire the government building, but this cannot be confirmed. A blizzard is now raging, which is usually more cooling to an Indian's ardor than anything else. Captain Brown does not fear serious trouble, but others do not have the same opinion.

A Rapid City, S. D., dispatch says the reports of danger from discontent among Pine Ridge Indians caused by the murder of four cowboys are unfounded, no general disquiet being reported. The Humphrey & Stenger cattlemen were killed by a wandering band as a result of a quarrel early in the week. Colonel Carlton of Fort Meade, has countermanded his orders and no troops will be sent to Pine Ridge. Everything is reported quiet there.

A later dispatch from Omaha says: The true account of the alleged Indian massacre is simply this: Thursday a number of cowboys belonging at the beef camp of Isaac Humphrey, a government contractor located on White River, at the mouth of White Clay Creek, about twenty-five miles northwest of Pine Ridge Agency, returned from town in a drunken condition, and brought a good supply of whisky with them. During the evening they became quarrelsome and mistreated and injured an Indian by the name of Two Sticks, driving him from their camp, and firing their revolvers at him. Two Sticks returned later in the evening, re-enforced by his sons and a number of other relatives and friends, and commenced a deadly fire on the cowboy camp, killing three and mortally wounding a fourth man, who has since died.

TO EXORCISE THE DEVIL.

Horrible Ceremonies of a Peculiar Religious Sect in Michigan.

The Carterites at Coloma, Mich., a new religious sect, are continuing their inhuman seances, and a supreme effort will be made to have the leader arrested and the new heaven disbanded. Recently Carter and some of his followers held what they called a "routing the devil's meeting," and slammed things around the house, broke furniture, etc., and when the devil, as they put it, would get into one of their number that one was treated something in the manner that a sheaf of wheat is treated when run through a separator. But his satanic majesty has not bothered the Carterites for some time. The other day Carter was in the barn milking a cow, and during the operation the cow kicked him and he immediately concluded that the cow had that peculiar disease "the devil." He tied her up in a stall and twisted her tail until the "lowing of the kine" was heard in the land. The neighbors came in to see what had happened to their leader, and then Carter, in a solemn speech, made it known that the devil had taken possession of his cow, but he had twisted her tail until she had given him up like the whale gave up Jonah. But he at the same time insisted that their enemy had lodged in the hayloft. So the little assembly proceeded to drive him out after the manner they had followed in the house some time before. The hay was turned upside down and the barn doors slammed, and all maneuvers imaginable were gone through, and finally an old lady in some manner hurt herself and declared the devil had paralyzed her left side. She was jolted on the floor and dragged around in a very ungentlemanly manner until she declared that she was once more free, and then over their success a "hallelujah" was held, to the gratification of all present. One of these "chosen ones," upon hearing her old mother groan, went down-stairs to find her enveloped in flames, and coolly took her child and crossed over to a neighbor's house, several rods away, and awoke and sent them to put out the fire. When they reached the house the poor old creature was outdoors clinging to the clothesline post. The post was all charred and her flesh was hanging to it in bits. She lived a few minutes only. Other things not exactly fit for publication have transpired.

MRS. W. C. WHITNEY DEAD.

Wife of the Ex-Secretary of the Treasury Passes Away.

Mrs. W. C. Whitney, wife of the ex-Secretary of the Navy, died at 3 o'clock Saturday morning.

Mrs. Flora Payne Whitney was the daughter of Henry B. Payne, of Cleveland, recently United States Senator from Ohio. She was the youngest of the family. While a very young girl she showed a great fondness for books. She had tutors at home, and attended the best schools of New York, afterward devoting a year to study in Europe.

Soon after the completion of her scientific course at Cambridge, while yet scarcely out of her teens, she married William C. Whitney, then a young lawyer of New York City. That was about twenty years ago. Her life since has been devoted to her husband and her children, but she has found time to make and to hold a leading place in society in New York and Washington, and to establish a sound reputation as a linguist, as an authority in archæology and as a judge and critic of literature. When Mr. Whitney became Secretary of the Navy in Mr. Cleveland's cabinet Mrs. Whitney made their home in Washington second only to the White House in social importance. They occupied the old Frelinghuysen house on I street. Mrs. Whitney had five children. Ex-Senator Payne, Mrs. Whitney's father, is still living. When Mrs. Whitney's first child was born he gave the young mother $1,000,000.

NEAR Lakeville, St. Joseph County, Edward Fikentscher was found lying in the snow. In his hand was a revolver and in his head a bullet-hole. He was under arrest some years ago for the murder of his brother, but was released. This, together with money troubles, was probably the cause of the suicide.

JUDGE TAYLOR, of the Circuit Court at Terre Haute, has rendered an important decision affecting the State tax law. The First National Bank had asked for an order restraining the county and city treasurers from proceeding to collect taxes on the assessment made by the State Board of Tax Commissioners. The Judge held that the State Board did not have original jurisdiction to alter the assessment made by the County Board. Under this construction of the law, unless there be an appeal from the action of the County Board, the State Board cannot change the assessment. The bank's assessment was increased more than $100,000. The Terre Haute brewery had also asked for a restraining order on similar ground.

THE formal opening of the new clubhouse of the Fort Wayne Club, which has just been completed, occurred recently, and was the most notable event in Fort Wayne society for years. Over 1,500 invitations were sent out and a large number of guests from the surrounding cities of this and adjacent States were present. The new home of the Fort Wayne Club, is without doubt the finest clubhouse in Indiana, and there are few cities which can boast a finer one. At present it has a membership of 400 and is rapidly growing. The site, which was purchased immediately after the formation of the club, cost $16,000, the building $20,000, and the furnishings and decorations $10,000 more, making the total value of the property acquired by the club about $46,000.

A TRAMP called at the kitchen-door of Joseph Hardesty's residence at Munce, and the generous elderly housewife invited him in to supper. After the fellow had gorged himself on Mrs. Hardesty's good things he insisted that he had brought an overcoat in the room. Mrs. Hardesty said that he had not, and ordered him out. The fellow then grabbed Mrs. Hardesty and pulled her out the door, just as her aged husband appeared. The latter snatched up an old-fashion shoe-hammer, and was badly worsting the tramp until he got hold of a jug with which he dealt Mr. Hardesty a severe blow, knocking him down. The tramp then fled, but was arrested later, and is now serving a sentence on the stone-pile, with a very sore head. The tramp gave the name of John McCarty.

J. H. WEIGAN, a farmer in Bartholomew County, the other day delivered in Columbus fifty head of hogs which averaged 450 pounds and which brought the handsome price of $1,600. This is the best average lot of hogs that has been sold in that county since 1865, and the price is the largest paid since that date.

The following have been elected directors: Monroe Seiberling, Russell Harrison, W. C. Howe, Herbert J. McDonald, Eugene M. Walker, M. J. Gottschalk, O. H. Trook, Roscoe Kimple, and M. F. Baldwin.

INDIANA LEGISLATURE.

Without a dissenting voice the Senate Monday passed the bill placing the appointive power of Trustees of benevolent institutions in the hands of the Governor. Previous to the final passage the Senate accepted amendments placing the appointment of Metropolitan Police Commissioners in all cities where the law is operative also under control of the Governor.

There was a lively whirl in the House over Mr. Hord's bill making it a misdemeanor to discharge a man or refuse to employ one because he was a non-unionist. It was called on a motion to reconsider the vote by which it had previously failed of engrossment. The reconsideration was ordered by a vote of 58 to 22. During the afternoon, however, after another lengthy debate the Unionists were successful in defeating the engrossment of the bill by a vote of 44 to 42.

Governor Matthews to-day vetoed the bill (his first veto message) introduced by Representative McMullen, requiring courts to continue cases where it is shown that an attorney on either side was a member of the Legislature and in attendance upon his duties as a legislator. The Governor took the ground that this bill was intended to meet the convenience of lawyers rather than that of their clients or the public, and that it might result in great inconvenience to witnesses and the courts if it was suffered to become a law. A vote taken on the Governor's message resulted in the veto being sustained—54 to 22.

Chairman Deery, of the Labor Committee, who visited the Prison North, has returned, strongly advocating radical reforms. He found that harness was manufactured in the prison which was taken out and labeled with the name of the Columbus (Ohio) Buggy Company, and the shoes made in the prison were labeled as if made by a firm in Chicago. He also found that a firm running a cooperage shop inside the prison walls has one on the outside where discharged convicts are employed at $1.25 per day, while other shops, not so fortunate are paying $2 and $2.25 for honest labor.

THE House, Tuesday, sat down hard on the State Liquor League by killing its pet measure, the "Speak-Easy" bill, designed to compel all druggists and others handling liquors, to pay the State saloon license of $100.

New bills were introduced as follows: To regulate paving and sewer building in towns; to amend road laws; to regulate casing and plugging of gas and oil wells; to abolish capital punishment; to provide for grading streets in unincorporated towns; providing for recording of town ordinances; to exempt farm lands in cities from city taxation; to prohibit overcharges on freight; providing for monthly reports from State Prisons.

Mr. Cullop's insurance bill, requiring companies to pay the full face value of policies when property is destroyed, or full pro rata on the loss sustained, came up on third reading and was passed.

The Populists and Prohibitionists are to have no watchers at the polls in Indiana. The Senate argued an amendment to the ballot law providing for this, all day, but it was finally laid on the table.

Senator McGreggor's bill providing for the payment of the home guard, who to-day are the creditors of the State for $15,000 was taken up. The bill passed on a vote of 28 to 13.

THE House Wednesday passed the Common Carriers bill, making the company originally receiving a consignment responsible for the safe delivery. Among the important bills passed by the Senate was one making it a misdemeanor punished by fine and imprisonment to sell tobacco to be smoked or chewed, to any person under 14 years old. A bill also passed making it unlawful to kill quail between New-Year and November 10.

THE first thing that engaged the Senate Thursday, was the postponement of House Bill 99, reported by the committee on agriculture. This bill provides that seining can be done with seines having meshes not less than one and one-half inch, and passed the House by a majority of three to one. Senator McCutcheon introduced a bill for the enumeration of deaf mutes over five and under twenty-six years; also, a bill concerning the incorporation of certain cities. Senator Barnes introduced a bill to place a $500 monument over the grave of ex-Governor Jennings. Senator Barnes moved that the rules be suspended for the bills passage, which prevailed. A short memorial on the deceased was presented by the Senator from Clark County.

In the House the following bills were engrossed without debate: McMullen's concerning civil proceedings, Higbee's to let delinquent tax lists to lowest bidder, Barnes' first Roby bill, Cravens' tax amendment, Hench's concerning civil proceedings, Ader's concerning change of venue before justices of the peace, Askren's authorizing the county commissioners to guarantee turnpike bonds, Brown's township trustees to accept donations of ground for cemeteries, Richter's to legalize the agreements of certain railroads, Henry's fixing interest on school funds, Ader's requiring the recording of bills of sale, Terhune's to prevent the adulteration of sorghum, and Teal's affecting real estate transactions. Senator Gifford's bridge bill and Senator Morgan's township trustees bill were advanced to third reading.

FRIDAY, the House passed the bill making the terms of all officers in cities not operating under special charter, of four years duration and extending the terms of those now in office until after the election of 1894.

Mr. Hench offered a resolution which put at rest the incipient talk about an extra session. The resolution declared it to be the sense of the House that no extra session is necessary. It was adopted without debate and with no dissenting votes.

The following bills were introduced: To appropriate a small sum to pay a judgment against the State; providing for indexing records of Supreme Court; concerning the paving of street-car tracks; to amend the tax law; to amend the railroad waiting-room act; to appropriate money for a small claim; to amend school law.

The following bills were introduced in the Senate: An act concerning books; Concerning the papers of the Indiana Academy of Science; Concerning fair or encampment grounds; providing for the examination of the records of county officers; fixing the number of districts into which a town may be divided for the election of officers; regulating the consumption of natural gas.

A METHOD of preventing pitting in small-pox is given in the Gazette des Hospitaux. A mask is made of very pliable linen cloth, leaving apertures for the eyes, nose and mouth; and the inside of this is smeared with a certain liniment prepared in either of the three following ways: One of these consists of carbolic acid, four to ten parts, forty parts olive oil and sixty parts prepared chalk; another, five parts carbolic acid, and forty parts each of olive oil and pure starch; and a third, two parts thymol, forty of linseed oil and sixty of chalk in powder. The mask should be renewed every twelve hours, and compresses impregnated with one of these mixtures may also be placed on the hands, and on any parts of the face which the mask does not directly touch.

ECONOMY is wealth. It takes a child six or seven years to learn to read or spell intelligently. But an English gentleman says his little boy of 4 years will read any phonetic book without the slighest hesitation, not even balking at the hard names in the Bible. His father taught him to read after this method in eight hours. Another gentleman says that he has taught poor children in Glasgow to read the Sermon on the Mount, phonetically, in the course of six hours' study. Time is money.

"So you have found hotel-keeping a source of great profit?" queried a New Yorker of a Colorado man whom he met in Chicago.

"Well, I suppose the hotel has met expenses, though I ain't sure," was the reply.

"But they tell me you have made $800,000."

"Yes, but you see I have a saloon attached to the hotel, and a silver mine attached to the saloon, and a faro-room attached to the mine, and I act as judge at all horse-races and as umpire at all prize-fights. Oh, we don't expect a Western hotel to make a dollar."

MARYLAND ROASTER AND BAKER

IMPROVED
ROASTER & BAKER

FOR MEATS, FOWL, FISH, ETC., AND FOR BAKING BREAD, CAKES AND PUDDINGS.

BEST SIMPLEST AND CHEAPEST

THE STEAM produced by the process of cooking cannot escape, is absorbed by the article in the roaster, and acts as a basting. There is no evaporation, no drying up or burning, hence no shrinkage or loss of weight, and all the flavor and nutritious qualities of the food are retained. Tough meats are made tender, and any article roasted or baked will be sweeter, healthier and more digestible. Put the food in the roaster, place the roaster in a well heated oven; the roaster will do the cooking. It requires no attention. Can only be bought from dealers, the trade supplied by:

ROCK ON ELMWOOD HILL.

An Irish-American Romance, Written for This Paper.

BY WILLIAM J. FLORENCE.

"Do you know me, Micky Begg?" she hissed through her blackened teeth. "Do you know me, I say?"

"Indeed, I do. I've often heard of you. You are the——"

"The Witch, they call me," she shrieked; "but I'm the mother of Elmwood Rocks, and friend of all who seek my aid."

"Ho, ho! ha, ha!" and the little fairyman shook with laughter. "Let's take a drink, Micky."

Now, Micky was never known to refuse a drink, so he pulled his "caubeen" off his puzzled head and replied: "Drink, is it? Indade I will. Here's long life to you," and he took a long pull from a cup tendered him by the old woman. His companion, the fairy man, took a drink with him, and danced a jig around the glasses on the table.

"I never remember seeing the shebeen before," said Micky, "and I have traveled this road before."

"You never traveled it at night before, did you, my lad?" inquired the old woman, as she put on a little pointed hat, and, taking a broomstick from a corner, came over to the astounded Micky.

"Don't you want a ride, my man?" said she.

"You're a quare lot," said Micky; "can I light me pipe?"

"Of course you can. Let me help you," said the fairy man as he filled the pipe, jumping in and out of Micky's pocket, each time bringing a handful of loose tobacco dust that had collected in Micky's coat. The pipe being filled the old lady plucked out one of her gray hairs and striking it against the handle of the broom, it spluttered into a blue flame, from which Micky lighted his pipe.

"Smoke away, me boy, we have a long ride. I'll show you many a strange sight this night. Now, mount at once. Come quick, it's just midnight."

Micky straddled the broomstick. A clap like thunder succeeded this movement, the cabin disappeared in a twinkling and Micky found himself sailing among the clouds, riding on the broom, with the witch for his companion. It was a lovely moonlight night, clear as azure, and still they went sailing along. The moon, like a silver canoe, seemed sailing with them in the clear sea of blue. Micky could hardly hold on to his frail carriage and commenced to tremble.

"Never fear, my boy," said the witch, "You'll never fall, unless you mention the name of one of your so-called Blessed Trinity that the priest teaches you to believe in. Remember that if you, by any chance, should so far forget yourself or me, your guide, as to speak the name of either of your 'Three in One,' that moment you'll fall to the ground."

"No fear, ould lady; I'll hould on till my fingers crack."

They were now fast approaching a large park, or woodland, and Micky looked down on the distance below him, while his hair streamed out in the night air, for they were traveling like lightning.

"Do you see that park below there in the distance?" said the old crone.

"I do, ma'am," said Micky, in his politest tone.

"Well, I'll show you a sight that will interest you."

They were now over Ireland, and near a large castle-fashioned building. Lights streamed from its many windows; long rows of carriages, with liveried servants, stood at the great hall entrance, awaiting the breaking up of the ball; the porch was crowded with fair ladies and fine gentlemen, the latter assisting the former to put on their wraps and shawls.

"Look down," said the witch to Micky. "They are going home now; the revelry is over; they are laughing and chattering over the grand success of the affair. The handsome young fellow in the hussar uniform is the lord of the manor; but see, his eyes are red with drinking, and as he bids his guests good-night can hardly stand straight on his legs. He is a wild spendthrift, cruel and heartless. You see the lady with the pretty pale face at his side. Her sad and careworn features tell the story—she is his wife. See, they are putting out the lights; the guests have all departed."

Hovering over the castle Micky and the witch sailed again downward.

"I'll show you the inside of the castle now."

The roof rose from the building, revealing a superbly furnished suite of apartments. The pretty pale hostess was seated in a large chair, her face buried in her hands. She was weeping. The young lord, with hair disheveled and eyes aflame with anger, was standing near.

"I'm tired of your whining," said he. "Your conduct to-night gave evidence of your low origin. You disgrace me, you pauper."

"Oh, spare me, Algeron," cried the poor lady. "I've always done my best to please you, but you are so cruel when you drink."

"Drink!" cried he in a rage. "Drink! 'Tis my only refuge from the remembrance of my alliance with you—a fraud, a cheat, a nobody. Why don't you die?"

"Micky," said the Witch, "keep quiet," for Micky's anger was getting the best of him and he wanted to get down and kick his lordship for his cruelty to the pretty lady.

"Do you see her face, Micky?" said the crone. "Did you ever see it before?"

"Oh, murder!" cried Micky, as he got a good view of the lady's sweet face, "it's our Nora!"

"Yes, your child Nora. That will be her fate if she marries above her station. Come away."

Whiz! Whiz! Away they flew now, over a great expanse of water, dotted here and there with vessels of all shapes and sizes, steamers crossing east and west, while long black threads appeared here and there at the lowest depths of the great body of water.

"We are over the Atlantic Ocean, Micky. Those black strings you see are the cables that carry thoughts between the continents. Do you see that land beyond? That is America. A great country, my boy."

"Yes," said Micky; "and wid——" He was going to say God's blessing, but remembering the admonition given him by the witch not to mention the Deity, he added: "With good luck I'll never lave it nor let Nora."

They had now reached the coast, fringed with great cities. The electric lights, steaming lines of railroad cars, screeching of locomotives running from point to point, and the crowded thoroughfares of many towns, filled poor Micky with wonder.

"Phew! but we are speeding along," said Micky.

"Yes, darlin'," said the Witch. "We're going to the West, the farm lands and prairies. See that pretty white house below, set in the midst of a garden of flowers! I'll lift the roof for ye, that you may see the inside of it."

On they swept, till they hovered over the landscape in the moonlight.

"Look, Micky. Tell me what you see!" and the roof was suddenly lifted.

A pretty little housewife sat by the fireside with a curly-headed boy on her knee. The surroundings of the home gave token of peace and plenty.

"Listen, Micky," said the Witch.

"Do you know what day this is?" inquired the wife, as her pretty face shone with the joy that filled her soul, as her husband entered.

That husband was Donnell O'Rourke.

"Yes, my darling," replied the man. "To-night is the third anniversary of our marriage. To-night, three years ago, you gave me your heart and hand, dear Nora."

"Nora?" said Micky. "Yes, it is my Nora. Oh, how she has grown; and so pretty, too. I'd like to kiss the baby."

"Ha, ha; he, he!" piped the witch. "Ye like the picture, do you? She's happy in this condition, isn't she? Here's where the true happiness awaits her. Keep her, Micky. Don't let the drunken lordling have her. Don't give her away to Lady Maud. Don't give her——"

"Look," said Micky, "the couple are kneeling in prayer."

As the words, "Our Father, who art in heaven," fell from the father's lips, the roof was lowered upon the scene, and Micky and his weird companion were again on the wing.

The prairies were crossed again, and before a second had elapsed Micky and his weird conductor were flying over his cabin on the rock of Elmwood.

"Let's look inside," she said.

Up went the roof, showing Oonah in her bed. She held Nora tight in her arms. Poor Oonah had been crying, for her eyes were red from weeping, while on Nora's long lashes tears sparkled radiantly on each point like diamonds in a coronet. They were sleeping the sleep of innocence and peace. Nora stirred for a moment, and sneezed as if the roofless cabin chilled her.

"God bless us," said Micky, as was his habit when he heard any one sneeze.

Bang! whir! whiz! the roof went down and Micky felt himself whirling in space. With a thump he fell to the ground. He had dreamed as he lay asleep on a rock, and at the climax of his vision had rolled off. The stars were out and he was sobered enough to see, by the position of the moon, that it was about midnight.

CHAPTER III.

THE TRAGEDY ON THE ROCK.

Twelve strokes on the bell in Mrs. Skelly's clock announced that the minute-hand had again overtaken the hour-hand. The Skellys lived in a hut at the base of the rock on Elmwood Hill, and in their eyes the Beggs and the O'Rourkes, on their social and their physical altitude, were always objects of prying interest.

"Midnight, an' Lord rest me tired eyes," said Mrs. Skelly, as she stopped peeping out through her keyhole with her right eye and began with her left. "It's me belafe that Oi'll be a squinter the rest av me loife, afther this night's watchin'."

"Then come to bed, ye ould boshuk," cried Mr. Skelly, "an' rest both yer eyes an' tongue."

"Whist, now, ye buckanu," she said in a whisper; "Dolf Begg is goin' up the stairs, an' that's what Oi've been waitin' for."

He opened the door of the Begg residence with a defiant wrench at the knob, and entered. Mrs. Skelly's door came simultaneously ajar, and her head was thrust out. Her eyes were both wide open, and her ears would have been dilated, too, if she could have had her way. By going up to the top of the stairway and listening cautiously she could hear the mingled voices of Dolf and Mrs. Begg, but could not understand their words, except when Dolf said: "I'll have it now or I'll have your life." This was followed by gasps and moans from Mrs. Begg, and those by a minute or two of silence. Then Mrs. Skelly heard Dolf's hand on the knob; but he did not turn it quickly as on entering, and she had time to retreat down the stairs, to retire into her hut, to reduce the opening of her own door to a mere crack, through which she saw him come down. The color of his face had changed from red to white, bravado had given place to terror, and the heavy soles of his boots had become velvet. He thrust a bunch of bank notes into his breast pocket, and glanced this way and that in trepidation. He instinctively turned from the gaslight of a street lamp, as he passed close by Mrs. Skelly's door, and in doing so looked into a window pane, which, having darkness on its other side, reflected him like a mirror. Perhaps the uneven glass distorted his features; perhaps a true image was so different from his usual self that in his dismay he did not recognize it; certainly he recoiled from it, and glided out of Mrs. Skelly's sight like a frightened apparition, properly disappearing downward.

Mrs. Skelly did not stir until her husband called to her again to come to bed. Then she tremblingly shut the door and sat down speechless in a chair. It was a full minute before she found voice to say:

"I do believe there's bloody murther in Beggs'. Lastewise, Dolf's gone wid the money. Get up and go for the police."

Skelly would not move. He commanded her with much distinctness and repetition to lock the door and mind her own business of going to sleep. She resolutely put on her bonnet and shawl and started for the nearest police station, where she did her errand so wildly that five minutes of questioning was done before any sort of understanding could be obtained of what she had seen and heard.

Having at length ascertained that a robbery had probably been committed, the police captain obtained from Mrs. Skelly the name of Dolf Begg. No description of him was necessary, for several of the officers in reserve knew him as one of the precinct's foremost rowdies, and they were sent out to catch him. The Captain and a detective went to the house with Mrs. Skelly and rapped at the Beggs' door. There was no response, and the officials opened it. Mrs. Begg was dead. Her body lay on the bed, contorted as by a dying struggle, and on her neck were the marks that Dolf's hand had made in choking her.

"It's murder," said the Captain to the detective. "Hurry to the station and send out an alarm. Be quick!"

News of the murder spread through the neighborhood like a cry of fire, and the half-dressed occupants crowded to the room; but the Captain would not let them in for fear that evidences of the crime might be obliterated in the confusion. He carefully examined every part of the apartment, found nothing in disorder save the bed, and had satisfied himself that the woman had been strangled.

Micky Begg returned at this juncture. He encountered the announcement of his wife's death before he reached the rock. He was dumfounded when they said she had been murdered, and when they added that Dolf was the murderer he cried:

"No, no; Dolf couldn't have done it!"

But a moment later, while he was kissing her lifeless face, two officers led Dolf in. He had been caught within ten blocks. A more abject wretch never heard himself accused of a crime.

"Did you find the money?" the Captain asked of the officers.

"He had it in his pocket," was the reply.

The prisoner was taken away, and the police remained in possession of the premises.

It was not until morning that Nora, returning home from an overnight visit to a girl friend, knew what had happened in the humble household. Donnell had no success in his efforts to comfort her, but she clung to him in her grief, and their declarations of mutual love were quite naturally a part of his tenders of sympathy and her outbreaks of emotion.

CHAPTER IV.

THE DECEPTION OF CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

The prosecution of Dolf took the regular course unhindered. He was committed by a coroner's jury, indicted by a grand jury, and tried by an oyer and terminer jury. Not one of all the jurors had a shadow of a doubt of the prisoner's guilt. His first attempt to steal his mother's money; his return, as witnessed by Mrs. Skelly, and the sounds of his struggle with the helpless woman, followed by his flight with the money; his quick arrest with the roll of notes still in his pocket—all make the proof positive. The $100 and more was spent in his defense. His father was assisted by the O'Rourkes, father and son. The two families now lived in adjoining tenements, for the rock on Elmwood Hill was being blasted away.

"But 'tisn't any use, Nora," the fellow said to his sister, in one of his few soft moments; "I've got to swing for it, and you might as well save the money. I killed her, though I didn't mean to take her life—only the cash, but the lawyers say the lack of intention doesn't make any difference, so long as I was committing a robbery. Yes, I'm sure for the gollows."

Nora hugged him nevertheless, and declared excitedly that they shouldn't convict him. Phelim O'Rourke was still more demonstrative. He devoted himself to wild and wholly ineffective efforts in the young man's behalf. Poor Nora was broken-hearted, and Donnell, the one reasonable person in the afflicted party, was unable to afford any hope. He listened sadly to his sweetheart's faint expectation that Dolf's jurors would not condemn him. But they did, of course, and no verdict of murder in the first degree was ever more unhesitatingly given. The sentence of death came next, and all this was accomplished within three months after the homicide. Mr. Nannery, the senior counsel for the prisoner, received a call at his office next day from Phelim O'Rourke. The man's face had new wrinkles, his form was bowed, his eyes were restless, and his language disconnected.

"Sit down," said the lawyer, kindly.

O'Rourke took off his hat, and let himself drop into a chair in a way that indicated no care for bodily ease.

"Can anything more be done for Dolf?" he asked.

Mr. Nannery shook his head.

"Will you read to me once more the legal definition of murder in the first degree?"

The lawyer read the statute, which declared the premeditated and intentional taking of human life, except when done justifiably in self-defense, to be murder in the first degree; also, the provision which rendered the intention and premeditation unnecessary elements in case the assailant was at the time committing a robbery.

"Then I understand," O'Rourke continued, "that there is no possible hope of saving Dolf?"

"Not the slightest. The case was utterly hopeless from the first."

"Suppose there had been no robbery. Are there no conceivable circumstances under which the deliberate killing of Mrs. Begg, powerless as she was, would have been justifiable under the law?"

"No."

"You are certain of that?"

"Certain."

On the day before the one set for the hanging of Dolf Mr. Nannery entered the Supreme Court chambers with more bustle than was usual with him, and elbowed his way impolitely to the front row of lawyers, all of whom were anxious to be heard first by the Judge.

"If your Honor pleases," he began, "I have——"

"I think Mr. Fitch is before you, Mr. Nannery," said the Judge.

"I am sure your Honor and Brother Fitch will excuse me," the perturbed lawyer rejoined, "if I am persistent. I wish to move for a stay of proceedings in the case of Dolf Beggs, who is under sentence to be hanged to-morrow."

Everybody was instantly interested and willing to give him precedence.

"The circumstances are peculiar," he continued, with a strong effort to assume his accustomed dignity of demeanor. "I need have no hesitation now in saying that I believed the prisoner guilty, and did not anticipate any interference with the infliction of the penalty. Half an hour ago I received a letter from one Phelim O'Rourke, and, with your Honor's permission, I will read it."

Mr. Nannery had some difficulty in keeping his hands from trembling while he unfolded some sheets of paper. He read as follows from a document on which, manifestly, the learned Irishman had spent much care, in spite of the mental excitement which must have attended its composition:

DEAR MR. NANNERY: In this letter I give you the means of saving Dolf from the gallows. In order to do so I must first tell you that on the evening of Mrs. Begg's death I attended a meeting of the Kosmic Club, which was an association of persons for the discussion of social science. It was the last gathering we were likely to have, for all except myself were to quit the city in a few days. Some of them, however, can be brought back to testify as to the paper which I read on that occasion. I send you the manuscript with this letter. You will find it embodies my belief that, in the interests of humanity, the law should provide for the killing of such persons as are hopelessly ill, and for whom, by reason of physical suffering, the remainder of life would otherwise be simply a protraction of agony. I outlined a plan by which, on the application of the invalid, an examination should be made by three physicians with a view to ascertain beyond a doubt whether or not recovery was possible. If they reported that the case was hopeless, a properly constituted authority should, at discretion, order that death be caused in some painless manner. You will find that my arguments are very full and carefully considered; but the gist of them was that the endurance of much useless suffering would be prevented; that a powerful incentive to suicide would be removed, and that it was the inalienable right of every hopeless invalid to die at will. I went further, and held that an extreme degree of mental distress resulting from great sorrows that could never be assuaged, ought to legally entitle a person to the relief of death. My paper, as I remember, excited the surprise of my companions. They thought, perhaps, that it was only a vagary; but in fact, it was an expression of a conclusion forced upon my mind by the long and awful experiences of my neighbor, Mrs. Begg, and an elaboration of an idea which I had previously broached in the club's meetings.

On getting home, I learned that Dolf Begg had attempted to rob his mother. The witnessing of so much misery made me pity her keenly. Then she told me of the physician's assurance that he could not by any possibility recover, which I had long known, and of his opinion that she might live in constant torture six months longer. Knowing how sincerely she longed for the ease of the grave, I thought it was cruel that she was compelled to keep on living. I did not believe that she would commit suicide. Next evening, as her husband was away, and her daughter, too, I went at her request to get a medical vial filled. On my way through the streets I meditated on the poor creature's case in the light of my paper on the legal extinction of life for incurables and could not help regarding such a measure as truly humane. But I had no thought of a practical demonstration until I came to the drug store.

Alongside the building stood carboys of acids, as usual, for they were deemed too inflammable for storage inside. Each was marked in large letters, and the words "Hydrocyanic Acid" caught my eye. I knew this was a poison so deadly that it killed instantly, and left no trace behind to reveal the cause of death. Here was born the idea of mercifully murdering Mrs. Begg. I hastened away in downright horror, but within a quarter of an hour I was there again, wistfully looking at the carboy. My repugnance was giving way to reason. The store had been closed for the night. Should I pull the bell and arouse the clerk to fill my vial with medicine. My hand was on the knob. Why not obtain some of the poison instead and use it? The project rapidly fascinated me, I was aware that hydrocyanic acid could not ordinarily be bought, owing to its dangerous qualities, and was sold only for certain purposes of manufacture. Here was the opportunity to obtain some, and without inculpating myself. I waited until midnight, when the street was deserted. Then with a heavy stone I broke off the protruding glass top of the carboy, being careful to keep away from the fume which arose from the opening. Nobody heard the crash, and, after watching awhile from a safe distance, I tied a string to my vial, cautiously lowered it into the perilous liquid, drew it out half full, set it on the sidewalk, stuck in the cork, wiped the acid from the outside with a paper, and put it into my pocket. The druggist will, of course, recollect finding the broken carboy in the morning. I went home without having fully resolved, after all, to use the poison.

When I entered the room in which the poor woman lay she was moaning piteously, but was unconscious. Dolf had just fled, after choking her and getting the money from under the pillow, and Mrs. Skelly had gone for the police. I did not know this, and supposed she was having one of her common attacks. Her writhings decided me. I would release her spirit from the body which held it in such awful durance. I dropped some of the acid from the vial into her mouth. The effect was instantaneous. She died with scarcely another motion. Unable to endure the sight of what I had done, I stole out of the house. Nobody saw me enter or depart. But I soon realized that it would not do to stay away. I compelled myself to return. Then I learned how my deed had been done at a time and in a way to convince even Dolf himself that he was a murderer. The marks of his brutal assault were on her throat, and the physicians found other evidence of strangulation; but the poison which killed her left nothing to show that it had been used.

You are aware, my dear Mr. Nannery, of my efforts to save Dolf from conviction, and how they failed. No suspicion rests on me, and I could safely let him be hanged, but I must not do it. The revelation which this letter makes will save him from the gallows, and he may emerge from State prison, where I suppose his crime of robbery will send him, a reformed man. As for me, I am convinced that my act was murder in the first degree, according to the law of the State, but I as firmly believe that, at the tribunal where I shall go to be judged, it will bring me reward instead of punishment. Yours respectfully,

PHELIM O'ROURKE.

"Under such circumstances, your Honor," said Mr. Nannery, "I ask for a stay of proceedings in the case of my client."

"Your motion is granted," the Judge replied; "but there is another matter equally pressing. Phelim O'Rourke must be arrested."

"If he is alive," the lawyer interposed.

But he was dead. Suicide had immediately followed the dispatch of the confession.

The dream of Micky Begg was so nearly realized in the better times after these tragic occurrences that he could not quite rid himself of the belief that he had really soared with a witch. Dolf Begg went to prison for a term of years instead of being hanged. Bonnell and his mother were not less bereaved by the loss of their father and husband than were Nora and her father. The shadow of crime was over them all, and, although they were themselves blameless, they wished to live elsewhere than in the city of the dreadful scenes through which they had passed. So Donnell and Nora, rendered fonder by their joint sorrows, were soon married. With their parents they removed to a Western town, where the name of Donnell O'Rourke is already that of a promising lawyer, and where, in a happy home, the sight of Nora as the contented wife of a good husband can be had without any witch's help.

Insanity in a Horse.

A Mr. Hannan, of Peoria, Ill., suddenly found his horse, usually a gentle one, acting in a very strange manner. He would lay hold with his teeth of everything that came within his reach and shake it as a terrier would a rat. While the gentleman was watching, the horse reached into a pigpen and seizing hold of one of the inmates threw it up in the air. This strange feat he repeated two or three times; then setting his teeth in the body of the pig he crushed it to the earth, gnawing and mangling the body in the most frightful manner. The horse then took a second pig, served it in a similar manner, and then tossed a calf into the air as easily as a cat would a mouse.

The owner immediately sent for a popular farrier, but when he arrived the horse was more quiet, whereupon the farrier ventured into the inclosure and called the horse to him. The animal came up, apparently very docile, but the moment he was within reach he seized the man violently by the shoulder, threw him forcibly with his face on the ground, then setting his teeth in his back endeavored to crush and gnaw him, the animal's eye meantime becoming glassy with rage. The owner rescued the farrier, but the horse had to be shot. It was clearly a case of insanity.

Singleness of Pursuit.

An absolute singleness of pursuit almost means a mind in one pursuit, an eye that regards every object, however many-sided, from one point of view, an intellectual deity beginning and ending with one article. Exclusiveness of this kind is apt to produce serious evils. It disposes each man to exaggerate the force and value of his particular attainment, and perhaps therewith his own importance. It deprives the mind of the refreshment which is healthfully afforded by alternation of labor, and of the strength, as well as the activity, to be gained by allowing varied subjects to evoke and put in exercise its wonderfully varied powers.

He's a Freak.

A young man in Scott County, Kentucky, felt a severe pain in his left shoulder and arms some two years ago, and for months he suffered intensely. Then the affected parts began to change color and become dark-brown, while the pain decreased. At last the shoulder and arm were covered with a thick growth of soft, brown hair an inch long, the pain ceased entirely, and now the young man is twice as strong in his left arm as he is in his right.

Notice of Hearing of Ditch Petition.

In the matter of the petition for a public ditch by Henry Frick, of Smithfield township, DeKalb County, Indiana, notice is hereby given that a petition has been filed with the Auditor of DeKalb county, state of Indiana, and viewers have been appointed who have viewed and reported said view which is on file in my office. The hearing of said petition upon its merits will be on Tuesday, the 7th day of March, 1893, the same being the second day of their March term, 1893, of Commissioners' Court.

The prayer of said petition is that a ditch be constructed on the following route to-wit:

Beginning in the northwest quarter of section thirty-four (34) Smithfield township, at a point 300 feet north of the east and west quarter line of said section and 455 feet east of the east boundary line of the right of way of the Fort Wayne and Jackson branch of the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railroad, all in DeKalb county, State of Indiana, and from thence as follows:

No.	Course.	Distance
1	north 68 degrees west	100 feet
2	north 78 degrees west	100 feet
3	south 73 deg. 30 min west	300 feet
4	south 52 degrees west	100 feet
5	south 39 degrees west	100 feet
6	south 28 degrees west	100 feet
7	south 11 degrees west	100 feet
8	south 33 degrees west	800 feet
9	south 11 degrees west	100 feet
10	south 25 degrees east	300 feet
11	south 10 degrees west	475 feet
12	south 13 degrees west	625 feet
13	south 15 deg. 30 min. east	700 feet
14	south	100 feet
15	south 13 degrees west	100 feet
16	south 45 degrees west	100 feet
17	south 53 degrees west	200 feet
18	south 30 degrees west	300 feet

Ending 612 feet and 618 feet east of the north west corner of section three (3) Grant township, DeKalb county, State of Indiana.

This proposed work will affect the lands of the following persons:

Henry Frick, Fort Wayne Jackson & Saginaw railroad now leased and operated by the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railroad, Albert J. and Sarah E. Beard, Malinda Hevel, DeKalb County, William and Mary Getts, Orlando Seery and Jacob Hevel.

H. N. COFFINBERRY,
Auditor DeKalb County.

Notice to Sell Real Estate.

Notice is hereby given that on Saturday the 25th day of February 1893, at the law office of J. E. & J. H. Rose in the town of Auburn in DeKalb county, state of Indiana, by virtue of an order to me directed by the DeKalb Circuit court, state of Indiana, I, Sylvester Kutzner, administrator with the will annexed of the estate of Frederick Groscop, deceased, will offer for sale at public vendue the following described real estate of said decedent to wit:

All of the southwest quarter, and the west half of the southeast quarter, all in section eighteen (18) in township thirty-four (34) north range thirteen (13) east, in DeKalb county, state of Indiana, except one hundred and sixty acres off of the north end of the two tracts above described, also the northwest fourth of the north east quarter of section nineteen (19) in said township and range, also the east half of the northeast fourth of the northwest quarter of section nineteen (19) aforesaid also a piece of land twenty (20) feet in width off of the east side of the southwest fourth of the northeast quarter of said section nineteen (19), aforesaid. Said land will be sold for not less than two-thirds of the appraised value thereof, upon the following terms to wit: One third cash in hand, one third in twelve months and one-third in eighteen months, from date of sale, said deferred payments to be evidenced by interest bearing notes, secured by a mortgage on said real estate. Said sale will begin at 2 o'clock p. m. of said day.

SYLVESTER KUTZNER, Administrator.
J. E. & J. H. Rose, Att'ys for estate.

Just The Thing.

This is an expression the travelling public generally use when they find something that is exactly what they want. This expression applies directly to the Wisconsin Central Lines, which is now admitted by all to be "The Route" from Chicago to St. Paul, Minneapolis, Ashland, Duluth, and all points in the Northwest. Their double daily train service and fine equipment offers inducement which cannot be surpassed.

This is the only line running both through Pullman First-Class and Tourist Sleepers from Chicago to Pacific Coast Points without change.

REMARKABLE CURES OF AUBURN AND VICINITY.

For the past four years the afflicted have been flocking in great numbers to see him, and they always return filled with the greatest enthusiasm, and the stories they tell of his remarkable diagnose and wonderful cures border on that of the miraculous. One says, "I went there on crutches and came away without them." Others say they had been sick and suffered for years, and they were cured. To see him and to be treated by him means health.

He asks no questions but gives a full history of each case as soon as he sees the patient, telling better how a person feels than they can tell it themselves. His knowledge seems perfect and his medicines are specific. They never fail. The work he accomplishes is truly astonishing.

There is no need to live in constant misery. It cost nothing to see him. The fullest examinations are free. A cure can be had for the mere cost of the medicine. He is the sick man's friend and no one is turned away unaided.

One of Auburn's most respected citizens Mr. M. N. Ward of Auburn, on the corner of Second and Jackson street, says: "I came to see Doctor Townsend four weeks ago I could hardly walk to the doctor's room without help. I have had heart disease and weak lungs and catarrh in my head for 20 years and was given up by the best physicians. I had rheumatism so my joints was so stiff I could not walk and my head hurt me so I could not rest or sleep. I was nearly deaf in right ear, but now can hear as well as I ever could. My neighbors all know how I have suffered. I can hear the clock tick in both ears, I thank God I feel well. Doctor Townsend has cured me. I have not been able to work for over one year, doctoring and taking patent medicines. I feel I am able to do two men's work now, have gained in flesh. I advise all to call on Doctor Townsend and be cured. I am willing to see any one and tell how bad I was, and let them see how well I am now.

Another respected lady of Auburn, Mrs. Rebecca Dickinson who has had a complication of diseases stomach, kidney, heart and lung disease and neuralgia pains all over, her limbs swollen so she could not step on them. She now feels nearly well, her pains have left her and her heart is well and she feels better every way.

Mr. Ward says his eye sight was so bad he could hardly see. He now feels that he could dispense with his glasses. The Doctor performed over twenty cures on his last visit. He will forfeit $5 00 for any case of catarrh he cannot cure. An eye witness to a lady who was helped to the doctor's room four weeks ago, is now doing her own work.

DEMOCRATS and populists elect a senator, Judge Allen, in Nebraska. Was a republican but now a populist. Said to be an able man.

SARTORIS, the husband of Nellie Grant, is dead. His death took place at Capri, Italy. He and his wife have been separated for some years, she living in London.

A GAS well near Anderson, this state, while blowing free last week, gas and water going up together, formed an icicle over 100 feet high. People came miles to see it.

HON. J. G. SHANKLIN, editor of the Evansville Courier, was called to New York last week for an interview with Cleveland. Many believe he will get a foreign mission.

JUDGE R. WES MCBRIDE has been appointed attorney for the Wabash railway for Noble, Lagrange and Elkhart counties. This we suppose means the business of the new line.

MONTANA'S statue of silver at the world's fair will contain $50,000 in pure silver, and stand on a base of solid gold, worth $250,000 the largest piece of the yellow metal ever seen.

LEGISLATURE is working a law through, to stop the race horse gambling at Robey, near Hammond, where Chicago parties keep up the business all winter. Good idea to stop it.

THE new legislature apportionment bill gets along very slowly, though it will no doubt be finished before adjournment. The senatorial districts here, will probably remain the same as now.

JEFFERSONVILLE woman swallowed a pin last week, and may die. Probably the too kind husband allowed her too much pin money. It should prove a wholesome warning to others.

THE new tax law brings in about a million and a half in taxes on railroads alone. Does anyone object to that? Then let the law stand, and if after two years of trial it is not satisfactory, it will be easy to amend it.

COASTING party of young people, were riding down hill on a long sled one evening last week in Massachusetts, struck a tree killing some, and hurting many. Hilly countries are dangerous. Come out to level Indiana.

THE Bohemian oats swindle has been causing trouble in Wisconsin. The cases appealed to the supreme court of the state, settled it, that the notes given, were valid in the hands of third parties, who were innocent purchasers.

GOV. BOIES, of Iowa, has been offered a place in Cleveland's cabinet—secretary of agriculture, so it is understood, but he declined. He is believed to be looking after a future U. S. senatorship. He would be a splendid man for the place.

INDIAN troubles have begun again at Pine Ridge Agency, So. Dakota, but it is belived will not prove serious. Some Indians got drunk, and had trouble with cowboys. Some were killed on both sides, but the Indians got the worst of it.

LEGISLATURE gets along slowly. Some members want to hold an extra session. But Judge Bench of Ft. Wayne, has put in a resolution that no extra session be held. He is right. There is no crying need for new laws. Let them do the needed work and adjourn.

THE present tax law has been pronounced constitutional by the highest judicial authority of the state, the supreme court. Several railroads thought they were taxed too high and refused to pay. Suits were carried up to the supreme court, which now says the roads must pay their taxes as other people do.

MRS. W. C. WHITNEY died at her home in New York City Sunday. She had been sick but a short time. When her husband was in Cleveland's cabinet she was a leader in Washington society and very popular, their wealth enabling them to entertain on a liberal scale. She was a woman greatly given to acts of charity and her early death will be universally mourned.

SANDWICH ISLANDS are eight in number, some being small. The nearest and largest is Hawaii. The others, lying in a line to the northwest are: Kahulaui, Maui, Lanai, Molokai, Oahu, on which is Honolulu, Kauri and lastly Harru. It is about 2,000 miles from San Francisco to the nearest, and they all contain about 7,000 square miles, or one fifth the size of Indiana, with about 100,000 people.

LEGISLATURE has concluded not to abolish township institutes. That is the correct course. These institutes are valuable auxiliaries in our excellent school system. Now let them also drop the stupid idea of requiring the county superintendent to be elected on a party ticket. The election of superintendent is already just as it should be—in the hands of the only men who are in a situation to make a proper choice.

WE ARE pleased to see the unanimity with which the democratic papers all over the state criticise the legislature for employing twice as many doorkeepers and hangers on, as are needed. In the first place, we, for our own part, criticise the man who goes there and accepts such a position. No man of spirit will do it—sit around and chew tobacco and do nothing yet take $5 a day for it. The sooner we hear of some member of one house or the other offering a resolution, cutting down the force one-half, and the pay three-fifths, the more we will think of the Indiana assembly individually and collectively.

JUDGE HOWELL E JACKSON of Tennessee has been selected by Harrison to succeed the late Justice Lamar. He is a democrat, and had been appointed to his present place, district U. S. judge, by president Cleveland some years ago, and is conceded by all parties to be a very able jurist. Harrison's reasons for selecting him seem to be the belief that several republican senators would refuse to confirm the appointment of a republican for the reason they did not like Harrison and would oppose anyone he chose to nominate. It is also well understood that in case Jackson is confirmed, it is an important thing in Harrison's view to appoint a good republican district judge in Jackson's stead. So it may be a good thing for republicans after all. But many republicans are mad.

Obituary.

Thirza J Smith was born in Tioga county, Pennsylvania, June 12, 1832, and died Feb. 3, 1893 aged 60 years, 7 months and 21 days.

Mother Smith was the daughter of affliction for a number of years, but bore it with patience and resignation. Before her death she said, "she was trusting in the Lord and waiting for the Lord to take her home."

She was the wife of Wm. Smith who preceded her to the Spirit World seven years before. She was the mother of five child children, four of whom died in their infancy. She leaves one son and three grand children and many other friends to mourn her loss. The funeral was preached at Norris Chapel, Feb. 5th, by Rev. J. J. Fred, the pastor.

It might be added that her death was within one day of being seven years since the death of her husband, it being the 3rd and his the 4th of February. But both were buried on the 5th of February. And thus passed away another of DeKalb's early citizens.

The Correct View of It.

The COURIER has for several years been making a fight against the foolish two-term rule for congressmen for this district—a rule that was forced on us many years ago, by some ambitious politician, or a set of ambitious politicians, we don't know which. By restricting the member to two terms, they hoped to see the plum eventually fall into their hands, after which they could pass it along to some other ambitious man, and so on to the end. As far as any good this would do the people, it was suicidal, or rather it was murder in the first degree. With a new member in the House, every four years, what had the people to hope for? But what did these politicians care for that? All they cared for, was to have the glittering bawble hung about their own necks for a brief period, to mingle with great ones of the republic for a few months, and then give place to others of similar minds. But with continually changing, new members taking the place of members just beginning to be useful and to be recognized, the people, the district became as nothing. They were not recognized and were scarcely heard of. The Twelfth district has a reliable democratic majority, and could have had at present a member in congress of twenty years experience. Such a man would be known and recognized as a power. Our people could get recognition when they asked it. Our member might by this time be speaker of the House, a position as influential and powerful as that of the president. But when will we reach that point at the rate we are now going? These remarks were partly called up again by an article in the Indianapolis Sentinel of last week, which shows that they, who are sending Bynum to congress term after term, see how foolish are the democrats of the old Twelfth district. Here is what the Sentinel says:

"Congressman-elect, McNagny, of the Twelfth district, is at the Bates. Two weeks hence he expects to go to Washington and remain for the inauguration of Grover Cleveland. Mr. McNagny is the youngest man ever elected to congress from the Ft Wayne district. He is a lawyer of Columbia City, and has never held office before. He was elected by the largest majority ever given a congressional candidate in the state. Being a good speaker, a hard worker and a well-read man, he can not fail to come to the front in congress. The Ft. Wayne district, although the banner democratic district in the state, has not been heard much in congress for years. This is not because men without ability are elected but because the democrats have adhered to the system of rotation in office, and have in the past declined to nominate candidates for more than two terms. A member never amounts to anything in congress until he has served two terms. The present leaders of congress, like Wilson and McMillan, were not heard of even in their second terms".

To the County Home.

Elmer Knott, son of Adams Knott of St. John was here Tuesday. They were taking his father to the County Home, as his physical and mental condition had become such, that he could not be properly cared for at home, or rather at his boarding place, for he had no home of his own. He has been in poor health for many years, but has failed more rapidly since the death of his brother, the late Samuel Knott, which seemed to affect him considerably. We believe too, that in these long years of poor health he has used up his means for medical treatment and to keep up his other expenses, and he has not been able to do much to help himself. The son, Elmer, has been living in Ohio for about eight years, returning at times when his father would be worse. But now he finds himself obliged to take this course, to have his father receive that care, which he cannot secure in any other way. It is well known that Mr. Knott's mind has been failing for a long time, and lately he has been very hard to control, and at times dangerous. But we hope he will at least be made comfortable, in his last days.

Hon. R. M. Lockhart was in town Monday on his way to Indianapolis to attend a meeting of the State Board of Agriculture. They have several important questions to decide, among others, to see if they will have a fair this year or not. Just what they will do, is depending on what the legislature does. It is now trying to legislate the Board out of existence. But if we are to have a state fair at all, it will be well enough to let the Board control it.

It is truly a wonderful medicine. For sale by Robbins & McCord.

Court.

This session of the court closed on Saturday last, after a busy term. As said before, much of the work of any term, while no doubt necessary, and often quite important to the parties concerned is not necessarily of general interest to the public. There are many steps in a lawsuit that take time, but have no immediate effect on the case. We give in our reports, only such as have reached a stage where some definite result is had. Among the last work of the court, the case of Wm. Brand vs L. S. Ry., damages, was dismissed; R. N. Crooks was appointed guardian for Abram McIntarffer, on ground of McIntarffer's mental condition. Sarah Munn was divorced from Alex. Munn; Isaac Hague and M. Boland were appointed jury commissioners; A. E. Tanberg was admitted to the bar as an attorney; Leona B. Ueber was adopted by Charles Girardot taking the name of the latter. Court began at Angola this week.

Whedon W. Griswold.

C. P. Houser has received a late paper from Chanute, Neosho county, Kansas, containing the announcement of the death of Whedon Griswold at that place Jan. 23. Mr. Griswold was well known here at his old home. He moved several years ago to Minnesota, but for the last two years had been in Kansas. He served in the war in two regiments. First in the Thirtieth Indiana in which he was lieutenant, then promoted to captain and then to major. When the 152d Indiana was organized in March, 1865, he became its colonel and closed his service in the war with that regiment. He was elected auditor of this county Oct. 9, 1860, beating George Kuhlman, democrat, by only four votes. He left a wife and son.

Chicago News Almanac.

The Chicago Daily News, has ready for market, its Almanac for 1893. As usual it is full to the corners with valuable matter. This includes in part, the full election returns of every state by counties, on the electoral ticket, as well as vote for state officers and congressmen. It gives our exports, imports, tariff, population, presidential nominations from 1789 to date, public debt, our civil list, our army and navy, diplomatic and consular service, etc., etc. Send 25 cents for the book in paper covers, or 50 cents for cloth binding, to Chicago Daily News.

The New Hotel.

The new hotel, the "Glazier House," will be opened for business next Monday. In fact, everything is about ready now. It has been thoroughly remodeled and everything so changed that one hardly recognizes the place. The west part of the original north room is the office and is nicely fitted up with a large, hard coal heater, fine desk of quartered oak, a modern electric alarm bell, electric lights, etc., and is in everyway complete. Back of the office is the wash room, and back of that, the sample room. In the original south room, the west part, is the dining room, which is fifty feet long, and the full width of the former room. Back of this is the dish room and next, the kitchen. Here is a large, new range and everything complete and convenient. The rooms for guests, or lodging rooms, are on the second floor and are all in first class order for comfort and convenience. The whole establishment is fitted with electric lights. The Glazier House will no doubt receive its share of patronage and Mr. Glazier promises to make the House worthy of it.

Will be a Journalist.

Lewis B. Fretz, so long connected with the COURIER, has bought a half interest in the Syracuse Register, and in partnership with R. J. Howard, another enterprising young man, has already entered on his new field Mr. Fretz learned the printer's trade in this office, having occupied every position from a beginner to a foreman, has been a solicitor for subscriptions, and a very successfull one too, and has also done much in the way of working up job work and advertising. In all these places, and under all conditions he has proved himself painstaking, honest and faithful. In this work he has made many friends, who, while they will regret to lose him, will rejoice to know he has entered on an independent field of his own in his chosen profession. Mr. Fretz has been very prominent in various societies, is at present captain of Samuel Ford Camp of Sons of Veterans; is a member of Mentor Lodge, 591, I. O. O. F., C. of D. in I.; a member of Crescent Lodge, No. 252, D. of R, H. M.; as well as of Typographical Union, No. 78, of Ft. Wayne He last year completed a year's service as colonel of the Northeastern regiment S. of V., and is at present assistant inspector of this part of the Indiana Division of the same. We hope this promotion in Journalism, that he has worked up by his own efforts, may prove a successful one, and that the Register may flourish with the prosperity which we feel certain will come to crown the efforts of the new firm.

The Ovide Musin Concert.

This, from a musical standpoint, was the best entertainment Auburn ever had. The Juniors took a great many risks when they concluded to get this famous company, for which of course, a very high price must be paid. And in order to pay this high price, they must put the tickets at a high price also, and then too, they must sell a good many of them. But they went about it in a way that showed they were determined to win, which they did in grand style. The house was well filled and the great audience was delighted. Of course the music, both vocal and instrumental, was of a high order, in fact of the highest, and we believe it is no flattery to say that the most of our people enjoyed it fully. Musin proved himself deserving the world-wide fame he has secured, as a violinist; and the singing of M. Velasco and the two ladies, was grand, for though most of it was in a foreign tongue, they were called back again and again, and responded in a way that kept their audience delighted to the close. Since our misfortune in losing the Opera House we have had no entertainments; but one as good as this will do us for a time. We are happy to say the financial results were excellent, as will be seen by the report of the Juniors, made in another column. The Musin company were at Indianapolis Tuesday evening and were greeted with a full house.

Obituary.

Angeline, wife of William Smith, was born in Bedford Co., Pa., in 1820. Departed this life, Feb. 5, 1893, aged 73 years. She was a kind wife and loving mother, and was a member of the Lutheran church at Auburn. The funeral services were conducted from the Lutheran church, Feb. 7. Interment took place in Evergreen cemetery. J. D. Brosy, officiating.

The Ripe Age of Eighty-Seven.

How few reach these years, and of the few so fortunate, what a small proportion retain all their faculties and the ability to enjoy all that life brings, even to the aged. Yet now and then, we find one so fortunate as to retain at this advanced age all, or nearly all, of the vivacity, the enjoyment of life and its social features, and to whom the bright anticipations of early years have changed only to the brighter anticipations of a still more glorious life to come. None of the "Seven Ages" is more interesting and admirable, than the last, when stripped of the gloomy and unattractive features given it by Shakespeare in his well known lines. Some of these thoughts came up with force, as we met once more, an old and honored lady who has for many years been reckoned among Auburn's most prominent pioneers. Mrs. Mary Mott, Saturday was eighty-seven, having been born Feb. 4, 1806. That evening a number of old-time friends were invited to call at her present home, the home of her daughter, Mrs Hodge just north of town, for it had been her wish to meet them and greet them as in the old days. And if the meeting was a pleasure to her, it was a still greater one to the friends who grasped her hand, and exchanged friendly and affectionate greetings. She has been in somewhat poor health for some years, a part of the time having been confined to her bed, as she was on this occasion. Yet her mind is as bright and all her faculties seem as active as in the years long gone by. She greeted each, with a fervor and earnestness that of itself was a pleasure to the guests, and to each there was some bright and cheery remark, that could not but leave a pleasurable impression. Besides those who could attend, there came a telegram from Mrs. Mary Ehlers, now at Raleigh, North Carolina, containing two Scripture references. The first reference was the Ninety-second Psalm, and the fourteenth verse, which reads: They shall bring forth fruit in old age; they shall be fat and flourishing.

The second was First Thessalonians 5-23, which reads: And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly; and I pray God your whole spirit, and soul and body, be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Among the social features of the meeting, the splendid lunch should not be forgotten, for Mrs. Hodge and her daughter Julia, proved themselves pleasant entertainers. In this they were assisted by Mrs. Mott's son, Grenville Mott of Michigan City, who had come down to honor his aged mother on this occasion, and also by Mrs. Hodge's youngest son, Chester, who is at home this winter. The guests came in sleighs and so added a short sleighride to the other agreeable features of the evening. All came away with pleasant memories of a bright cheerful and interesting old lady, as well as of the hospitalities of one of the most attractive of Auburn's homes.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

Given, then, that you want to do business, the only remaining question is how to do it best. There can be but one general answer to that, and that is the use of the advertising columns of the newspapers.

Mr. Cleveland has returned to the sender a frank over the lines of an express company. Mr. Cleveland has prospects of a fairly remunerative situation, and believes that by economy he can pay his own bills.

The Idaho "diamonds" prove to be only rock crystals, and the crowds of men who hastened to the San Juan "gold fields" got nothing on the trip but blistered feet. It is evident to old '49ers that the '93ers are getting badly left.

Mrs. M. P. Kimball succeeds her deceased husband in the Presidency of the Pennsboro and Harrisville Railroad, and West Virginians have so much faith in her executive ability that they are in no fear of the road suffering by the change.

Sam Small has given up evangelical work, and will go back to his old desk in the Atlanta Constitution office. It is hard work to make a thorough newspaper man understand that there is any place where he can be nearer heaven than the one he occupies when he is within easy range of the copy-hook.

The enormity of the Panama corruption isn't lessened in appearance to Americans because it is measured in francs instead of dollars. The sum of 1,400,000,000 francs impresses an American a good deal more than $280,000,000 would, and to an Englishman it must seem immensely larger than £56,000,000.

Tascott is now ascertained to be in Alaska. Possibly this is true. However, there is a growing belief that Tascott is a phantom. He must put his manly form in evidence before there will be many to accept him as reality. History is full of myths. A practical age that abolishes William Tell is not going to be imposed upon by any cheap modern ghost.

A gentleman who a few months ago tried to squeeze the financial stuffing out of his associates by cornering the corn missed it by $1,000,000. He has paid the debt with interest, and encomiums upon his honesty are falling in showers. It seems to be forgotten that some people who never tried to gamble in corn may have in them the crude elements of honesty.

English newspapers declare that Mrs. Maybrick is only feigning illness. She is credited by them with swallowing needles and thus producing symptoms indicative of a physical system out of repair. How long this rigorous style of sham can continue without merging into something almost genuine is a question that the kindly intelligence of the newspapers above cited should hasten to throw light upon.

Ten of Kentucky's residents, all quoted as "first citizens," met and settled a dispute on principles not laid down by the Peace Congress. Only five of them are citizens of any class now. The coronor tucked the other five away. However, Kentucky has plenty of "first citizens" left. Every time a drunken man gets a gun and a grudge down there the combination, while perhaps disastrous to the neighborhood, gives him a social position concerning which it is not safe to argue.

The gentleman who it is sometimes suspected had the misfortune to turn to stone has been dug up again, this time in Nebraska. His first exhumation was on the coast. It was soon found that he was hand-made, and not even a good freak. Then the stone man started East. He has sought grave after grave and been dragged to light times without number, but people have recognized his true character. He has failed to fool even Nebraskans, a fact that absolutely dashes his hopes.

A contemporary is responsible for the statement that at a recent plucking at the Coronado ostrich farm one bird yielded nearly 3,000 feathers, adding that when curled and dressed, these feathers will be worth $65. There is something wrong somewhere, for at 50 cents apiece, which would certainly be a low average if the feathers possessed any merit at all, they would amount to $1,500. One can hardly believe that even in the first market, real ostrich feathers are sold as low as 2 1-6 cents apiece.

Here's a chance for the female emancipators of women to get up and assert themselves. The galleries of the English House of Commons, from time immemorial open to the fair sex, have been barred against them on the specious plea that the ladies have been misconducting themselves while occuping its vantage ground. This means the loss of a valuable position, ladies; if you can't get into the galleries you certainly can never hope to occupy the seats on the floor. Contest the point tooth and toe nail; it is your only hope and worth the fighting for.

The home built at Atlanta, Ga., principally through the efforts of the late Henry W. Grady, for the homeless Confederate veterans, will be sold under the auctioneer's hammer. The directors of the home resolved upon this course because the Legislature refused to make any provisions for its support. Georgia is a great, rich State, and her best people will doubtless be heartly ashamed of the parsimonius littleness of her statesmen. If Georgia has any love, or even respect, for her now poor and crippled and once courageous veteran soldiers, she has a mighty poor way of showing it to the world.

It is reported that a number of Philadelphia young women have banded themselves together as protectors of the opposite sex. They have organized for the purpose of darning the stockings of bachelors. The report does not say whether each young dame selects the particular bachelor whose stockings she is to darn. It seems a pity we should be left in the dark upon this very important point. The number of members is limited to thirty (deponent saith not whether this same figure limits their age), and as no new member can be added until one has been dropped out, there is a long list of applicants waiting to be taken in turn. Only unmarried women are eligible to membership.

Affairs in Mexico appear to be in a condition that promises serious trouble there at no distant time. There is now every indication that a widespread feeling favoring revolt prevails throughout the republic, and is on the increase. It is not the result of any recent act or acts on the part of the administration. According to a secret revolutionary pronunciamiento, it is the growth of a long period of time, during which President Diaz is charged with having usurped the role of dictator. Catarino Garza is named as the leader and supreme chief in the revolutionary movement, and a call is made to the people to take up arms under his standard. It is proposed to overthrow Diaz and hold an election four months after the capture of the Mexican capital to revise the national constitution so as to give true political freedom to the people. All who oppose in any way the schemes of the revolutionists will be treated as traitors by them. Two hundred prominent Mexicans are said to have caused the promulgation of this incendiary document. Its premature publication is almost certain to lead to an early collision between the powers that be and those that desire to be, and a determined, bitter and sanguinary civil war would seem to be inevitable.

Advice to Teachers.

Learn to think. The way you get knowledge is more important than the knowledge you get. The mental activity is the important thing. The teacher, of all the people in the world, should be a good thinker. By this is not meant a logician, nor a metaphysician, but a genuine thinker, clear, discriminating, keen, vigorous. Learn how to teach. This is a special art. No training for anything else is the best training for teaching. The principles are of greatest importance. Select a few, or have them selected for you, and study them until they are to you what the a, b, c's are, i. e., the perfectly familiar material for the building up of all wisdom and wit needed for teaching, as the letters form all the hundreds of thousands of words in the language. Establish a method for the doing of everything that is to be, or that is liable to be, repeatedly done. Your methods should only change with the necessities of occasions. Invent devices continually. Train yourself to be a genius in the art of illustrating what you wish to make plain.

Let your aim be to teach every child to know, to think, to do and be all that is possible for him under existing conditions. Train yourself in the art of self-control under varying conditions and in emergencies. Cultivate patience perpetually, especially with children. Train yourself to bear and forbear with children of all ages in their relation to you and to each other. Acquire a habit of prompt, cheerful obedience in yourself, since whoever best obeys best secures obedience. Make the best of everything, since many of the failures in teaching come from inability to adapt one's self to the varying conditions of school administration or social peculiarities.—Journal of Education.

The gentlemen recently convicted of heresy will not be burned at the stake. Goodness as well as worldliness has its fashions, and this fashion has gone. Happily, the saintly persons who advocated it have also gone, and those who so desire have liberty to believe they did not go where fire is still in vogue.

A BARN ON THE BORDER

HOW IT CHANGED THE VALUE OF PRODUCE.

The Final Success of an Interesting Experiment Is Put in Jeopardy Because the Projector Is Undergoing Trial for Smuggling.

Farmer Finnegan's Magic Barn.

Once upon a time (and this is no fake story) there lived, and still lives, in Hodgson, Aroostook County, Maine, a man by the name of Patrick Finnegan.

Mr. Finnegan is not a politician, as might be inferred from his name, but a farmer; and a remarkable one in some respects. It is considered the acme of success in farming to make two blades of grass grow where one grew before. Farmer Finnegan could do more; he could harvest three bushels of potatoes where one had grown. This strange result was not due to any peculiarity of soil, but entirely to location.

Part of his farm was on one side of the imaginary line between the United States and Canada and part on the other side. This imaginary and apparently harmless line was a constant source of trouble and annoyance to him, as it has always been to Uncle Sam—especially since McKinley magnified its importance. The farm animals, and even the farm hands, could not be made to understand the importance of this invisible line, and would not treat it with proper respect. Mr. Finnegan had learned, since he had been paying taxes in two countries, the importance of that line. He knew that it was a sin for the American side of his farm to have dealings with the Canadian side. It was a written law that the two ends of his farm should in no way recognize each other. In fact the United States Government had officers patrolling that line to see that nothing of value passed between the two ends of this and other farms similarly situated.

Regardless of consequences and of the fact that they were cheap provincial animals on one side and valuable farm animals on the other, above associating with their pauper selves, the sheep, hogs, cattle, and horses would, nevertheless, persist in smuggling themselves back and forth across the line. Still greater trouble was caused when colts, calves, lambs, pigs, etc., born on the provincial end of the farm, innocently following their careless mothers, would attempt to become subjects of the great United States without the payment of duty. Of course, our Government could not tolerate such reckless abuse of its rights, privileges, and laws, and the great Treasury Department, in several famous decisions, put its foot down on all such proceedings. These decisions have had to be revised several times to cover all possible combinations of circumstances of domestic animals that stray into foreign lands when about to become mothers. It is now safe to say that a calf born on the Canadian end of Mr. Finnegan's farm is expatriated, though its parents are clearly American.

Since 1890 Mr. Finnegan's hens, geese and turkeys have proven themselves unworthy subjects of Uncle Sam. Keeping up their old habits they would walk, fly or swim into Canada to lay pauper eggs, and perhaps hatch pauper chickens or goslings, when these processes could just as well have occurred on our own free and valuable soil. Mr. Finnegan was put to endless annoyance trying to get back the disgraced barn-yard fowls without attracting the attention of the officials patrolling the boundary line between the two countries.

At last, after many sleepless nights, Mr. Finnegan devised a scheme that might possibly save him much trouble, and perhaps even reward him for past trouble and expense. He would build a barn on the dividing line and keep the Canadian farm animals and products in the provincial end of it and the genuine American animals and products in the American end. The success of the scheme was beyond Mr. Finnegan's most sanguine expectations. It had a magical effect on production. Not only did the soil become more fertile, but products garnered in that barn continued to increase in quantity. For every hundred bushels of oats or barrels of potatoes harvested and put into that barn the proprietor could take out and sell two or three hundred bushels or barrels. Horses led through that barn might add $25 or even $50 to their value.

The barn had proved a bonanza to its owner, who was enjoying such unprecedented prosperity as to arouse feelings of jealousy in the breasts of his neighbors and suspicions of fraud in the minds of Uncle Sam's patrolmen.

The final success of the experiment is now put in jeopardy because Mr. Finnegan is undergoing a trial for smuggling potatoes across the border line. It is claimed, and indeed is not denied, that farmers in this country prefer to purchase their seed potatoes from Canada. They think this the best means of avoiding rot and of securing an early crop. Hence there is considerable demand in the United States, even when our potato crop is fair, for New Brunswick and Nova Scotia potatoes. This demand continues in spite of the 25 cents per bushel duty placed on potatoes by our late Wm. McKinley, Jr. Of course the duty makes provincial potatoes worth 25 cents less than when transported to the United States.

These indisputable facts, coupled with the fact that Mr. Finnegan has undoubtedly been selling 700 or 800 barrels of potatoes although he has raised but 300, have been taken advantage of by his neighbors across the border, who have testified that they have sold produce, especially potatoes, to Mr. Finnegan, to be delivered at the cheap end of the barn. The charge is then made that Mr. Finnegan would smuggle the potatoes worth 40 cents per bushel to the dear end of the barn, where they were worth 65 cents per bushel. The Government officials discredit the whole story of the magic barn, and say that it is only a kind of smuggling that is being systematically conducted along the Maine border. They say that it is easy to smuggle there, because there are but eight officers for 200 miles of boundary. If the jury decides against Mr. Finnegan, and convicts him of the awful crime of moving produce from one end of his barn to the other, he may be incarcerated for several months and have a whole year's profits confiscated.

Out of respect for an administration that has been discarded, the moral that could be drawn from this true story is omitted.

Sugar Bounties and Duties.

Willett & Gray's Statistical Sugar Trade Journal of Jan. 19 prints a letter from Mr. H. W. Wiley, chemist in the Department of Agriculture, to the Secretary of Agriculture, on the subject of sugar bounties. Mr. Wiley says:

"The present actual cost of the production of beet, cane and sorghum sugar in the United States is almost the same for every variety, and is perhaps a trifle over four cents per pound. The market value of the raw sugar so produced is about three cents a pound, deducting the freights. If, therefore, sugar remains on the free list, and the bounty is removed, it would cause the producers in this country a net loss of one cent a pound on every pound of sugar made. The immediate result of such a policy would be the closing of every sugar house in the United States, and the utter destruction of the sugar industry.

"If the bounty is removed a duty should be placed on sugar of about one and one-half cents, in order that the manufacture may be profitable.

"It is not difficult to foresee that in from ten to fifteen years, the time appointed by the law for the continuation of the bounty, the cost of sugar production in this country would be so reduced as to render possible the manufacture of sugar at a profit without any protection whatever; but in the present status of the industry such a consummation is impossible at once.

"The sugar industry of the country, therefore, depends for its existence upon the wisdom of Congress in dealing with the subject."

For 100 years the protected industries have been asking for a few more years of governmental aid to enable them to stand alone. And all this time they have been asking for, and obtaining, only temporarily, of course, higher and higher duties. Duties of from 5 to 10 per cent. have been multiplied by 10, 15 or 20. Mr. Wiley must have been a poor student of history if he really thinks that any protected infant industry will ever be quite ready to leave off its pap.

But, aside from the unwarranted promises, what a state of affairs is revealed by this letter. An industry half a century old, that has received during the past thirty years directly and indirectly over $100,000,000 as a gratuity for producing what has sold for perhaps $200,000,000 cannot continue its existence, it is said, unless aided by a bounty of 33 per cent. of the selling price of the product. This beggar, after pocketing its many millions of ill-gotten gifts, now shows its appreciation by brazenly asking the United States to compel its 65,000,000 of people to go down in their pockets, during the next ten or fifteen years, to the extent of from $150,000,000 to $500,000,000, for the benefit of this great beggar industry—that is, of the 600 or 700 growers of cane, sorghum and beets, who now get the $10,000,000 or $12,000,000 a year bounty.

What, now, are some of the evil consequences of trying to stimulate an industry here that would probably thrive about as well without stimulants?

In the first place, protection has increased the cost of sugar during the last twenty years about 75 per cent. This, besides adding several dollars a year to the cost of living for the average family, has crippled and prevented or destroyed many important industries. The canning industry alone, if it had had cheap sugars, would now be fifty times as great as the whole sugar producing industry. The United States has unrivaled facilities for producing vegetables, fruits, corn, fish, meat, etc., and should supply the world with canned goods. With big and prosperous canneries in all parts of this country, our farmers would have certain and reliable markets for surplus products now wasted. Many crops now often sold at a loss would then yield large profits, and farmers would be prosperous where they are now on their way to the poorhouse—not 600 or 700 farmers merely, but several millions of them. England now is the center of supply of canned goods for the whole world, because Germany and France have been paying heavy bounties on sugar produced and exported, and because her canners have had free sugar, glass and tin.

The European countries now pay about $45,000,000 a year to encourage the exportation of sugar, and to enable outside countries to get sugar below the actual cost of production. England, more sensible than the United States, does not refuse to accept cheap sugar, but, through the European bounties, receives a gift of about $10,000,000 a year on her sugars and builds up the industries thus driven out of the Continental countries. She then supplies the foolish countries with jams, jellies, and other canned goods.

Congress may in its wisdom, at the close of this enlightened nineteenth century, see fit to donate several hundred millions of dollars to the few hundred sugar producers of Louisiana; but, Mr. Wiley, we think the probabilities are that the Fifty-third Congress will do nothing of the kind. We think it will not entirely neglect the interest of its 65,000,000 consumers as its predecessors have done.

The Whisky Tax.

Should increased revenues be needed it is going to be very hard to supply them. The whisky, which seemed to offer so simple a remedy, has been rendered unavailable by the whisky makers, who, in hope of profit, have manufactured so largely that a full two or three years' supply will be in bond before any additional tax can take effect. Whisky cannot yield additional revenue, therefore, for two years to come. Coffee and tea, which are altogether imported, and raw sugar, of which five-sixths is imported, are ideal subjects of revenue-tariff taxation; but no Congress will restore the tax on these until the people shall have been reconciled to a small increase in consideration of a tariff change giving them cheaper clothing and blankets. In view of these conditions the minds of all the Democratic leaders seem more and more turning to a graduated tax on large incomes as a source of more revenue.—N. Y. World.

Selling Cordage in England.

The Cordage Trade Journal, of Jan. 15, reprints a couple of letters from "Fairplay," of London, which indicate that the National Cordage Co. of the United States, is making bids for English trade and that the British manufacturers are getting scared. It appears that cordage, twine, etc., are made just as cheaply on one side of the Atlantic as on the other side, but that the National Cordage Co. (trust), because of its great capital, can buy its raw materials—hemp, jute, flax, etc.—to much better advantage; that is, as one of the correspondents puts it, the Cordage Co. "has adopted advantageous means of squeezing better value out of the heathen Chinee or some other fellow in the Philippines."

Conditions have not materially changed since McKinley left an average duty of about 2 cents per pound on rope, twine, etc. There was then no just reason for leaving any duty on cordage. The only apparent reason, justified by the fact that the trust has since made big contributions to the Republican campaign corruption funds, is that the National Cordage Co. would thereby be guaranteed the monopoly of the American market, to extort unreasonable profits from the American consumers. This the trust has done. In 1888 and 1889 the average difference in the prices of manila and manila cordage was 1.84 cents per pound. Since 1889 the difference has averaged over 3 cents.

That the trust is making unusual profits is clear. It has been paying a dividend of 10 per cent. on its common and 8 per cent. on its preferred stock, while it has been paying exorbitant prices for new plants, nearly half of which it holds idle, besides paying big sums ($200,000 in one case) to outside manufacturers of cordage and of cordage machinery to keep their plants closed. The price of its stock also indicates great profits. Its common stock sold in 1891 from 73¾ to 104. At the end of 1892 it was quoted at 138, and Jan. 20, 1893, at 143½. In December 1892, the trust voted to increase its capital from $15,000,000 to $25,000,000 both for the purpose of making its dividends look smaller and to make its stock a better subject for speculation in Wall street. The reason why the extra stock has not been issued, so rumor says, is because the large holders are waiting until they can bull the stock to the highest possible point—150 if possible—so that the common stock, after it is watered, will sell for about 100.

And this is the kind of an industry that McKinley believed in fostering with protective tariffs! This is one of his proteges! If the next Congress carries out the will of the people it will remove all of the duty on cordage before next July.

Last Year for Trusts.

No two years have been as prolific of trusts as those of 1891 and 1892. The advantages of the McKinley tariff law to trusts are just beginning to be appreciated by many industries, and though that trust-protecting measure has only six months or a year longer to run, yet new trusts are forming as rapidly as ever to get what benefits can be derived from the tag-end of McKinleyism. The Iron Age of Jan. 19 mentions some of the trusts now forming or just completed in its line. It says:

"Consolidation seems bound to become the watchword in many departments of industry. Sessions have been held in Chicago by the wire rod and wire manufacturers, at which a representative of the largest wire plant presided, and a St. Louis producer acted as Secretary. The meetings are over, and further negotiations will be carried on by corresponence. Some of the cut nail manufacturers east of the Alleghany mountains are also talking of closer relations. The brass and copper makers are said to be near the successful issue of their negotiations, and a copper wire consolidation is well advanced toward its consummation. The Western cast-iron pipe foundries are to meet to-day."

Wool Prices Advancing.

It will probably be years before native wools touch the unprecedentedly low prices recorded in November, 1892. Almost immediately after election prices, which had been declining for two, yes, for thirty years, began to round the turning point. In the first weeks of January, 1893, the wool market became decidedly firmer, and on Jan. 19 the Wool Reporter began to report advances in prices. Its Boston report said that

"Fleeces have shown more strength, and have advanced at least 1 cent a pound all along the line; for example, several sales of Michigan X have been made at from 27 to 27½ cents; No 1 Ohio combing at 36 cents; No. 1 Ohio fleece, 33 to 34 cents, and various lots of discount wools in the same ratio above previous quotations.

"There has been a good demand at firm prices for territory, pulled, and scoured wools; good wools especially are very firm, and the trade will be, doubtless, wise and judicious enough to hold the market at the present prices."

Substantially these same reports come from New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, and other cities. This news will send cold chills up and down the backs of Judge Lawrence and the few other political wool growers, who still insist that what is needed to stop the decline in prices is higher duties, but it will be welcome news to the thousands of real wool growers, many of whom voted for free wool this year for the first time.

We read of burning brick in Asia in circular kilns, the last stages consisting of covering the kilns and arches with heavy felt kept very moist, really creating steam instead of flame. The process is said to give the brick great hardness.

THE SENATE AND HOUSE.

WORK OF OUR NATIONAL LAWMAKERS.

Proceedings of the Senate and House of Representatives—Important Measures Discussed and Acted Upon—Gist of the Business.

The National Solons.

Monday Senator Chandler brought the Hawaiian question forward as a distinctively American issue. By a resolution which he introduced in the Senate he calls upon the President to enter into negotiation with the Provincial Governments of the late kingdom of Hawaii for the admission of the island as a territory of the United States. Mr. Chandler had hoped for the immediate consideration of the resolution, but Senator White interposed an objection, and under the rules the resolution went over.

The Senate got rid Tuesday of the legislative incubus under which it has labored since the first day of the session. The anti-option bill reached the point at which voting began at 3:15 p. m. The first vote was on the amendment offered by Mr. Vilas (Wis.) to the George substitute, and the amendment was rejected—yeas 21; nays, 50. Then the George substitute itself was rejected—yeas, 19; nays, 51. And finally the bill was passed by a vote of 40 to 29. There were many members of the House of Representatives, at times almost as many of them as there were Senators, present in the Senate chamber during the votes and the preliminary discussion of the bill, and the deepest interest was manifested in the proceedings as well on the floor as in the crowded galleries. Representative DeArmond (Mo.) put a little spice into the proceedings of the House by making an attack upon the civil-service law. Then a controversy as to the Democracy of Mr. Enloe (Tenn.) and Mr. Bland (Mo.) entertained the House for awhile. The House resumed, in committee of the whole, the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill. The committee then returned to the section relative to public buildings. The next order to be taken up was that which appropriates for rivers and harbors.

The fortification bill was the first of the general bills to come before the Senate Wednesday, and it was passed after a rather interesting discussion on the subject of coast fortifications. The army appropriation bill was then taken up and was passed with but a single amendment—increasing the monthly pay of sergeants of the army. The District of Columbia bill came next in order. All the committee amendments were agreed to, except one that was reserved for action Thursday looking to the erection of a $500,000 municipal building in Washington city. The attention of the House was centered upon one item of the sundry civil appropriation bill. That item was one appropriating $16,000,000 for carrying on the contracts already entered into for the improvement of rivers and harbors. The jurisdictional authority of the Committee on Appropriations was called into question. It was contended that the appropriations should have been reported to the committee on harbors, but although Mr. Holman was foremost of those who made this contention against the power of the committee of which he was chairman, that committee came out victorious and the item was decided to be a proper one. Without finally acting on the bill the House adjourned.

Thursday morning the anti-option bill was the center of interest in the House. The opponents of the legislation were on the alert, and the instant that Mr. Hatch made his motion for the conference, Mr. Bynum, of Indiana, was addressing the Speaker, with a point of order, that the Senate amendments must first be considered in committee of the whole. John Davenport and the Federal election laws then occupied the attention of the House, brought forward by an amendment offered by Mr. Fitch, of New York, to the sundry civil bill. It provides that hereafter no part of any money appropriated to pay any fees to the United States commissioners, marshals, or clerks shall be used for any warrant issued or arrest made under the laws relating to the election of members of Congress unless the prosecution has been commenced upon a sworn complaint setting forth the facts constituting the offense and alleging them to be within the personal knowledge of the affiant. The amendment was finally agreed to, 172 to 47. The Fitch amendment was agreed to—yeas 181, nays 80. The bill was then passed. With the exception of one hour in the early part of the day, and a little longer time in the evening, the day's session of the Senate was held behind closed doors. It was passed in the consideration of the French and Swedish extradition treaties. Mr. Carlisle's resignation as Senator from Kentucky was presented. The District appropriation bill was taken up, considered, and passed.

Friday the Speaker laid before the House the President's message relative to the bond transit over Canadian roads. Referred. The deficiency appropriation bill was passed and the Indian appropriation bill was reported. The House then paid tribute to the memory of the late Representative Craig, of Pennsylvania, and adjourned. The question of the repeal of the Sherman act, or at least of the suspension of the silver bullion purchase provision of it, was unexpectedly precipitated on the Senate by Mr. Teller (Rep.), Colorado. He made the presentation of some petitions on the subject the occasion for launching out into a discussion of the whole question, and expressed his confident assurance that the repeal of the Sherman act was not among the possibilities of the present session. At 3 p. m. the business of the Senate was suspended in order that fitting tributes might be made to the memory of the late Senator Barbour, of Virginia. Eulogies of the dead Senator were pronounced by Messrs. Daniels, Manderson, Faulkner, Gallinger, Platt, Hill, Hiscock, and Hunton, Mr. Barbour's successor in the Senate. The usual resolutions were agreed to, and the Senate, as a further mark of respect to the memory of Mr. Barbour, adjourned.

The Senate on Saturday set apart two hours for the consideration of House bills on the calendar, and eighteen of them were passed. After that the House bill to ratify the agreement with the Cherokees for the cession of their interest in the Cherokee outlet lands and appropriating more than $8,500,000 to carry it out was taken up, discussed, and passed in the shape of a substitute. Memorial proceedings in memory of Messrs. Gamble of South Dakota, Ford of Michigan, and Stackhouse, of South Carolina, members of the House of Representatives, were then begun, and after eulogies on each of the dead Representatives the customary resolutions were agreed to and the Senate adjourned. The House made rapid strides toward final adjournment. It passed the diplomatic and Military Academy appropriation bills with little debate. Mr. Hatch reported back the anti-option bill with Senate amendments, and it was referred to the committee of the whole. The House then, in committee of the whole, proceeded to the consideration of the diplomatic and consular appropriation bills. After they were passed public business was suspended to pay tribute to J. W. Kendall, of Kentucky.

The bill is one passed by the House of Representatives on June 9, 1892, with various Senate amendments thereto.

Senator Wolcott, of Colorado, according to a Washington correspondent, opposed the anti-option bill as not sanctioned by the constitution, as vicious in principle, calculated to work injury to the people in whose interest it professed to be framed. The anti-trust law of a few years ago ought to be a lesson to Senators. That law had been long enough in force to show that it in no wise affected prices. He did not care to discuss the anomaly presented by such a situation. Senator Gray, of Delaware, argued, on constitutional grounds, against the bill. In his opinion the measure would overturn the American form of government and throw down every barrier between absolute power and the liberty of the citizen—the liberty of contract on which civilization, in a large measure, depended. Senator Higgins of Delaware made an argument in favor of the bill. He argued that the system of "future dealings" as practiced in the exchanges was a continental and world-wide interference with the law of supply and demand, and that under it the producers of the country were made the sport of those who chose to gamble in their products. Senator Harris of Tennessee made a statement of the reasons which controlled his vote. He regarded the measure as palpable and admitted fraud on the constitution. It would destroy home rule, local self-government, and the last vestige of the reserved rights of the States. Senator Vest spoke of the action of the House of Representatives of the Missouri Legislature instructing the United States Senator from that State to vote for the bill and said that he preferred his own self-respect to personal or political applause. There was sunshine in other places besides Washington City; and the air of the prairies was purer than that of the Senate chamber. He should therefore vote against the bill.

WORST OF THE SEASON.

A Howling Blizzard Sweeps Through the Northwest.

A blizzard has raged all over the Northwest, and, according to a late dispatch from St. Paul, is still at it. Reports from the country further to the northwest are meager owing to the prostration of the wires by the storm. It has moved rapidly from Denver in a northeasterly direction, accompanied by snow and high winds. At 8 o'clock Tuesday night at Helena it was 48 below zero, while at Missoula, a little over a hundred miles north, it was 10 degrees above. At the former place there was a high wind from the west. Missoula was simultaneously catching a small hurricane from the east. It was 54 below in Helena at 6 a. m. All through Montana, with the exception of one point, the cold was intense. In Portland it was 25 above, and in St. Paul 15. In Duluth it was 6 below, Winnipeg 10, and Jamestown 9, while at Fergus Falls, Grand Forks, and Fargo it was fully twenty degrees warmer, with high winds from a different point in each one of the six places. The snowfall in the Northwest was not enough to cause serious delays, but the high winds caused drifts that kept back through trains three or four hours. Reports from the lines running north to the lakes and east to Chicago show uniform weather, with high winds, causing the snow to drift quite badly.

Late dispatches give additional details of the blizzard, which seems to have been very severe and general. Fine snow fills the air at Benson, Minn., and business has been abandoned, though it is not cold there. Mankato reports a blizzard howling and temperature rapidly falling. A sudden change of wind at Fergus Falls, Minn., was followed by a quick drop from 15 above to 10 below zero. Blinding fine snow at that place has compelled a suspension of business, and as the temperature is rapidly growing colder much suffering is feared. All trains have been abandoned at Watertown, S. D., on account of the storm. The blizzard is now raging throughout Southern Minnesota, and mercury rapidly falling.

At 7 o'clock the signal-service observer in St. Paul reported 10 below zero. At the same time it was 20 below at Pierre, S. D.; 26 below at Moorhead, Minn.; 32 below at St. Vincent, Minn., and Bismarck, N. D.; 30 below at Winnipeg; and 38 below at Helena, Mont. The wind at that hour was blowing from ten to forty miles an hour in different sections.

Old People.

A gentleman who was showing me a literary paper which he had written in a very clear, bold hand, remarked:

"I always write very distinctly, that I may have no difficulty in reading my manuscript when old age comes upon me."

He was then bordering on 70. Another very vigorous old gentleman, aged 77, who was at the head of a large publishing establishment, was explaining to a friend the enormous amount of work he went through from day to day. The friend remarked that it must tell upon him seriously at his age. "Oh, no," he replied; "I don't feel it now, but I expect I shall do so in after life!"

I cannot vouch for the truth of the following anecdotes, but they may serve to "point a moral and adorn a tale."

In the old coaching days, when a coach stopped on one occasion to change horses, one of the passengers strolled along a green lane and was surprised to see an old man sitting under the hedge crying. In answer to a question as to the cause of his grief, he replied that his father had been beating him. The passenger, who thought the father of an old man like that must be a curiosity worth seeing, asked him to take him to his father. The old man led him to a cottage, where a very old man was standing at the gate, looking very angry.

"Is this your son?" he asked.

"Yes," replied the old man, gruffly.

"He tells me you have been beating him," said the passenger.

"Yes, and he deserves beating, the young rascal, for he has been throwing stones at his grandfather!"

I have heard of another old man and his wife, both of whom had reached the venerable age of 100. They had three daughters, the youngest of whom died unmarried, at the age of 72. The old woman was quite inconsolable on account of their irreparable loss. The youngest daughter had evidently been her pet, for after their return from the funeral she said to her husband, amid her sobs and tears:

"I always tellt thee, John, that we should never rear that child."

Completely Uprooted.

How many remedies there are which merely relieve without uprooting disease. The contrast with sterling medicines which such palliatives afford, not only enhances the dignity of the former, but serves to emphasize the folly of employing half-way measures when thorough ones are available. A marked instance of this is the effect, on the one hand, of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters in cases of chills and fever and bilious remittent, and on the other of ordinary remedies in maladies of this type. By the Bitters, malarial complaint in every stage, and of the most malignant type, are completely conquered and lose their hold upon the system. They are rarely, if ever, dislodged by the ordinary resources of medicine, although their symptoms may unquestionably be mitigated through such means. The same holds good of indigestion, biliousness, kidney complaint, rheumatism, nervousness, and debility. By the Bitters they are cured when many remedies fail.

Songs of a Plant.

Most people do not know a plant has lungs, but it has, and its lungs are in its leaves. Examined through a high power microscope every leaf will show thousands upon thousands of openings, infinitely small, of course, but each provided with lips which, in many species, are continually opening and closing.

Food Made Me Sick

"First I had pains in my back and chest, then faint feeling at the stomach, and when I would eat, the first taste would make me deathly sick. Of course, I ran down rapidly, and lost 25 pounds. My wife and family were much alarmed, and I expected my stay on earth would be short. But a friend advised me to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, and soon my appetite came back, I ate heartily without distress, gained two pounds a week. I took 8 bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla and never felt better in my life. To-day I am cured and I give to Hood's Sarsaparilla the whole praise of it." C. C. ABER, grocer, Canisteo, N. Y.

Deaths from Joy, Fright, or Grief.

We read in Livy that when Hannibal had vanquished the Romans in the battle of Cannæ two women, seeing their sons, whom they had supposed dead, return in good health, died immediately from excessive joy.

A Frenchman who had by chance passed over a narrow plank lying across a deep gorge in the dark, on viewing the spot the next day fell down dead while contemplating the dangers of the previous night.

Montague relates the case of a German nobleman who died of excessive grief on discovering that his son had been killed in battle. "He stood," says Montague, "like a stock, with his eyes fixed on the corpse till the vehemency of his sorrow having overwhelmed his vital spirits, he sank stone dead on the ground."

In Winter.

A wet pig pen in winter is a difficulty which many farmers dread, and there is a loss in weight of the pigs when the pen is not dry. Make a strong floor of poles, and have the floor raised a foot or two above the level of the ground surface. Upon the poles put a foot or two of straw and leaves, adding more leaves to the litter daily. In a short time the litter will be well packed down on the poles, making an excellent pen, which will be always dry as the space between the poles of the floor will permit the water from rains to flow through.

It Should Be Encouraged.

It is now apparent to the Directors of the World's Columbian Exposition that millions of people will be denied the pleasure of becoming the possessors of

World's Fair Souvenir Coins

The Official Souvenir of the Great Exposition—

The extraordinary and growing demand for these Coins, and the desire on the part of the Directors that equal opportunities may be afforded for their purchase, have made it necessary to enlarge the channels of distribution. To relieve themselves of some responsibility, the Directors have invited

THE MERCHANTS

Throughout the Nation to unite with the Banks in placing Columbian Half-Dollars on sale. This is done that the masses of the people, and those living at remote points, may be afforded the best possible opportunity to obtain the Coins.

THE FORTUNATE POSSESSORS

of SOUVENIR COINS will be those who are earliest in seizing upon these new advantages.

The New Great South American Kidney Cure.

The acknowledged superior cure and immediate relief for all derangements painfulness and decay of the kidneys or bladder, Bright's disease, diabetes or any complaint that hurts or despoils either of these delicate organs. This new remedy has been thoroughly tested by leading physicians and found far superior to any medicine yet discovered for quickly relieving all weaknesses, aches, pains and distresses arising from disease of any part of the urinary passages. It is great relief for the old, middle aged and children, male or female. It relieves at once retention and pain in passing water, and it is very effective in relieving prostate troubles in the old, and for nightly incontinence of water in children, or others, caused by weakness of the bladder. It may be worth to many a hundred times its cost. This is a remedy of great value to ladies, because they are very liable to weakness and pain peculiar to their sex. Sold by Robbins & McCord, druggists, Auburn, Ind. tf

Drs. Townsend Coming.

February 21 and 22.

Among many testimonials we find these: I had spinal curvature that doctors told me was incurable and I am now well. Another said: I was given up by fourteen doctors, who told me I had Bright's disease of the kidneys, but thanks to Drs. Townsend I am a well man. Another: I was bedriden for over ten years with a complication of female diseases. Some of the most eminent specialists, including three professors in medical colleges, and they all told me I could not get well. Four years ago I placed my case in the hands of the Drs. Townsend, and in 5 months and 4 days from the time I commenced treatment I dressed myself and walked across the room, and in another month I felt as well as I ever did in my life and have remained in excellent health ever since. Another says: I had epilepsy for fifteen years and was cured. Another: My whole nervous system was broken down and I was practically an old man at 31. I could not sleep, my hands trembled, I would get dizzy and forgetful and became so bad that I had to give up business. I consulted many doctors, the best I thought, in the country, and finally went to Europe, and spent over $9,000 and three years' time and was no better, but gradually got worse. I returned home to die and closed up all my business affairs. At last a friend, who had been cured, advised me to go to the Drs. Townsend. Without any faith, but to please him, I went, and to my great surprise they told me they could cure me, and they made good their their word, for from the first dose of medicine I commence to improve, and in twelve months I was completely cured. A lady says: My case was pronounced to be tubercular consumption by seven of our best physicians, and under whose treatment I got worse all the time. The Drs. Townsend cured me in just four months. One says: I had catarrh that affected my head so I was almost crazy. It went into my ears, and oh! such a roaring, I was almost wild: it had gone down also upon my lungs and the doctor said it was the bronchitis. Thanks to the Drs. Townsend I am entirely well. Another says: I was cured of a bad cancer. A lady of great refinement, who had received serious injuries during a confinement, was cured after other specialists utterly failed. Thousands a cases similar to the above might be cited.

Examination by letter or in person free and sacredly confidential. If unable to see the doctors write full peticulars. Thousands treated by correspondence. Address, with stamp:

Rainfall of 1892.

As the past year was one of great extremes in the way of rainfall, we place before our readers a correct report furnished by the kindness of Uncle Alex Provines of Jackson township.

January	00	inches.
February	1⅝	"
March	2½	"
April	2¾	"
May	11	"
June	2⅞	"
July	2 5-16	"
August	1⅛	"
September	3¾	"
October	00	"
November	4⅛	"
December	1	"
Total for the year	33.1-16	"

Notice the terrible rainfall of May, and then in July, remember there was no rain except what fell the night of the second and morning of the third.

A Penny's Worth.

This is the title of a clever little booklet relating to the advantages of North Galveston. It tells how any body that has saved up a "rainy day" penny can make a judicious use of it; either in investing in city property or in adjoining fruit lots. The North Galveston Association is represented in Auburn by Rickel & Sprott who will be pleased to call upon any citizen of this town and explain the remarkable advantages of North Galveston either in point of settlement or investment.

AUBURN AND VICINITY

It was said of Butler in July: Butler is steadily growing in wealth and population, good and valuable residences and commodious business houses have been erected" and others were in process of construction. Manufacturing establishments furnished employment for 150 workman. The lucrative possibilities of a factory for the production of staves and bolts had there too, been realized, and William Hubbell was turning out 10,000 staves daily.

In spite of these encouraging examples at Waterloo and Butler, indifferent to the harvest being reaped from this well employed capital, Auburn gave no sign, and it was not until three years later, that the town was to know the advantages of such a factory. To Auburn.

> "Smiling spring its earliest visit paid,
> And parting summer's lingering blooms delayed;
> How blest is he who crowns in shades like these,
> A youth of labor with an age of ease."

So wrote Goldsmith of another Auburn much like ours in its climate and its drowsy suggestions. The spring came early and the many well cultivated lots supplied their owners with abundance and ample variety of fruits and garden vegetables. The village seemed quietly slumbering and pioneers who had endured years of hardship and toil found here, indeed, rest and repose and "an age of ease."

There were few buggies, no bycicles, but occasional wagons that passed and repassed along Main and Seventh streets. No milkman made his rounds from house to house, for the herd of cows, well scattered grazing the luxuriant grass carpetting the streets outside the well beaten track, by day, supplied at evening the need of most families.

No long procession of teams hauling enormous logs came with rumble and creak up the thoroughfare, but an occasional log went by on its way to Hollopeter's sawmill east of the public square. No thunderous din of trains, nor deep-toned whistles disturbed the peaceful quiet and only the dull hum of the mill or dull sound of machinery in the woolen factory blended their soothing influence with nature. Children now arrived at manhood and active in business at home or in far away localities, daily went and came from the old academy, the tones of whose bell had grown to be with all things else, so harmoniously familiar.

The Sabbath was not greatly distinguished from other days for no musical chorus of bells chimed on the ear to call to praise and prayer, but there was a fine Sunday school at the old M E. church and a devout congregation of whom few remain who listened to the exhortations of a now forgotten preacher. Base ball had begun to attract popular attention as a manly pastime and clubs were formed in the towns of Auburn and Waterloo. In May, a spirited contest took place between these rival organizations and it gave our people great satisfaction that the game terminated in favor of the former since it proved that Waterloo City was not supreme in everything; the chagrin of a defeat proportionate enhanced the triumph of the victors.

There had been meetings of the town board without quorums with consequent adjournments till March 2, when a full board met at the shoe shop of Mr. Hare. The publisher of the DeKalb County Democrat presented a bill of $30.00 for printing a fire ordinance, of which bill $20.00 was after due consideration allowed.

It was the close of the year for the board, who allowed each member the modest sum of $8.00 for his public services. C. S. Hare was granted $25.00 salary as town clerk and was released from any responsibility for bonds, papers and valuables belonging to town, unavoidably burnt in his office during the fire previously mentioned.

The annual municipal election was held May 4th at which 119 votes were cast. Take the town's record, look over the list of names and learn the unstability of existence in the mortality of these voters. There we see the names once so familiarly heard, of persons then so well known, now to be found engraved in the marble, and the granite of the cemetery. There is Lowry, Griswold, Baldock, Hare, Fox, Robbins, Pearce, Plum, Rainier, Burlingame, Long and many another of the townsmen of that oldertime and the ever lengthening list will ere long include the last of the early settlers and forgetful ness will follow hard after them.

The democratic ticket was elected by an average of 9 majority. The trustees chosen were Jacob Walborn, Phillip Fluke, A. J Ralston, C. S. Hare and R. B. Showers, all men of good judgment, permanent residents and thoroughly identified with the fortunes of the municipality. S. W. Sprott was elected town clerk; T. D. Gross, treasurer; Wm. Humes, assessor and Henry Wolf; marshal. The last named resigned and H. F. Hollinger, a blacksmith who lived in what was long known as the Knorr property, on South Main st., accepted the appointment tendered him.

John Otto presented his report to the new board, showing condition of municipal funds from May, '67 to May, '68 as follows: On hand last report $1 82: from county treasurer, $436 96; from marshal, $2 75; orders redeemed, $441 43; leaving a balance of 10 cents.

The town board met at the law office of W. H. Dills and fixed the rates of assessment at 50 cts. on the $100, and 25 cents on each poll. At successive sessions various business was transacted including the excavation of ditches, repair of bridges, auditing of accounts and making of allowances. A six foot walk was ordered along the north side of Defiance street from its intersection with Main street, to the cemetery, the material furnished by the town and and building done at cost of parties owners of lots along which the walk ran.

The town officially intimated its interest in the struggle for a railroad by the board's allowance of a bill presented by L. D Rainier of $27 00 for entertaining railroad men from Ft. Wayne, present on business connected with the projected Ft. Wayne, Jackson & Saginaw line.

An order made necessary by law and equity hitherto enforced, to pay claims on the treasury in sequence of issue was in this instance suspended and Treasurer Gross was authorized to cash the claim of Mr. Rainier out of money on hand. Trips to Waterloo and to other points on business relative to the road by various parties were likewise paid by warrants on the depleted treasury, thereby aiding the public work while so depreciating the credit of the town as to render its paper almost unsalable.

The business men of Auburn were determined that the railroad should not be built around them and at many meetings held a commendable spirit of enterprise was shown and popular interest was fully enlisted in the work.

It was ordered by the town board in regular session that Messrs. Walborn, Hare and Fluke be appointed a committee to select and to hire solicitors for subscription to the capital stock of the railroad company, provided that the line be permanently located through or within one half mile of Auburn, and that these parties asking subscriptions should confine operations to the south half of the county. At a meeting held Dec. 14, the last one of the year, the committee reported the appointment of W. H. Dills and T. D. Gross to be paid an average commission of 1¼ per cent. The people generously responded to appeals for aid and by Jan. 4, 1869, the books showed promises for nearly $30,000, a surprising amount when the circumstances of the people were considered. From this time on, it was certain that Auburn would be on the line of railroad and great expectations were cherished of the consequent advantages.

DePauw University.

We have received bulletins of the DePauw University Extension Courses and of the DePauw summer school of 1893. The movement known as University Extension has become wide-spread, and centers are being established in many of our Indiana cities and towns. Such a center should by all means, be established here, that our citizens may have the university, in part, brought to their doors. The summer school at DePauw is also a new departure, which will supply a long felt need. There are many young people free during the summer months, who can now have the privileges of the university during their unoccupied time. The colleges owe it to the public to open their doors at times when the young people can attend. and this movement on the part of DePauw University will commend it to the the additional favor of the public. The bulletins which can be had on application to President John at Greencastle, give a full description of the courses offered, both in the summer school and department of University Extension.

HEADACHE, SLEEPLESSNESS, NERVOUS PROSTRATION.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

Gentlemen: I take pleasure in informing you of the very beneficial results which have followed the use of Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine in the case of myself and wife. For a year I was subject to a distressing pain at the base of the brain and upper portion of the spinal cord. I lost flesh and was greatly troubled with sleeplessness. Your Nervine was highly recommended to me. My case had been so obstinate that I had no confidence in the efficacy of any medicine. Yet as a last resort I consented to give it a trial. Much to my surprise, I experienced marked benefit; my sleeplessness disappeared; my headache was removed; my spirits and general health greatly improved. I soon gained twenty pounds. All this occurred after learned and well known physicians had failed. My wife is taking the Nervine with the best of results. Louis D. Vandervere.

WHAT OTHERS SAY.

BLOOD POISON
BODY COMPLETELY COVERED WITH A RASH AND RED BLOTCHES.
EVERYTHING ELSE FAILED BUT LIVURA CURED.

LIVURA M'F'G. CO.,

GENTLEMEN:—"My little girl had Blood Poison; her system was all run down, her body was completely covered with a rash and horrid red blotches, owing to the intense itching she could not sleep. Her digestive organs were in a very bad condition; she complained of pain in the limbs and we were very much alarmed about her. We tried everything we could think of but nothing had the desired effect until we found PITCHER'S LIVURA. She had not been taking LIVURA more than one week when her eyes looked natural again, her appetite improved, and before the second bottle had been used, the rash and blotches disappeared, the itching left, and she is now PERFECTLY WELL and has gained flesh. All due to PITCHER'S LIVURA.

Many New Cases.

Our patrons are delighted with Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup, and they say that nothing equals this medicine for Coughs, Colds and all throat and lung troubles. Several new cases have been added to the list that have been cured where other medicines have failed to do the work. Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup is taking the lead for a genuine Cough Medicine, it never fails to cure, the first dose gives relief, and guaranteed to give satisfaction. Sold everywhere. Price 25, 50 and $1. 1

Popular Opinion.

"What do you think of the present method of celebrating Christmas?"

Vermont State.

Mrs. J. O. Northup, of Burlington, Vermont, after a recent visit with her son-in-law, Mr. Clarey, of DesMoines, wrote as follows: "I caught a bad cold on my way home, am sorry that I did not bring a bottle or two of the Cubeb Cough Cure with me; I can't get anything here that does me as much good." Mr. Clarey says that he would not be without the Cubeb Cough Cure for his children. Davenport, the druggist.

A Suggested Game.

"Let's play you're a piano, Tommy," said Jack. "You lie down and I'll bang on you with both hands till you sing a tune."

Babies.

Done.

"This is the finishing touch," said Shadbolt, as he reluctantly fished from his pocket the last coin he had about him and lent it to Dinguss.

Don't get Imposed Upon.

Is a good motto to follow in buying a medicine as well as in everything else. By the universal satisfaction it has given and by the many remarkable cures it has accomplished, Dullam's Great German blood, liver, stomach and kidney cure has proven itself unequaled for building up and cleansing your system and for all diseases arising from impure blood. Do not experiment with an unheard of or untried article which you are told is as good, but be sure to get Dullam's. All druggists keep it, $1 a bottle. For sale by Casebeer & Mathany.

Medical.

"The physician," says Brown, "is the man who tells you that you need change, and then takes all you have."

How I Felt.

Why, two years ago I was just about crazy no wonder that my wife and children were afraid of me. You just want to suffer with neuralgia with no relief as I did until I used Sulphur Bitters. They cured me, and now my wife says I am as meek as a lamb.—Robert Davis, American House, Boston. 8

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

CORRESPONDENCE

WATERLOO.

The brakeman, Hyler, so badly hurt up at the station, by being caught between two cars several weeks ago, is recovering rapidly.

Last week Tuesday evening the election of officers took place at a regular session at the home of Mrs. Benage Long, resulting as follows: Mattie E. Biedler, pres.; Emma Keep, vice-pres.; Carrie Francis, sec.; Olive Long, treas; S. C. S. Winslow, critic; Mattie Maxson, custodian of queries.

In two weekly Nantucket papers under the obituary heading are notices of four deaths in each paper occurring on the island, respectively aged 79 years, 6 months; 74 years, 5 months, 5 days; 66 years, 10 months, 18 days; 80 years; 71 years, 8 months, 9 days; 68 years, 2 months; 84 years, 6 months; 78 years. This recalls what the writer heard visiting Nantucket, that very few died from disease but mostly from old age, or accident—and it was very noticeable the number of smart looking old people to be seen everywhere.

About the middle of last week the marshal received a telegram from Elkhart, to look out for a man who had been stealing jewelry in that place. Accordingly he started to make the round of the saloons. In one of them, a gentlemanly looking man was trying to dispose of jewelry; and the marshal at once attempted to arrest him, but he sprang away and started rapidly on the run for the woods, a crowd of men and boys after him. Burt Beidler caught up with him, presented a revolver and ordered him to hold up his hands. The constable and marshal came up, handcuffs were put on, and he was put in a place of safety until officers from Elkhart came for him. It is stated that his family are very wealthy, have given him within the last year, five thousand dollars which he has run through with, that hereafter they will give no more money to him, but to his wife who is now ill, that within the last three weeks they have given to her $1,500—also that the young man poisoned himself with morphine and nearly lost his life, but it made him insane, and while in that condition he stole the jewelry, that otherwise he would have had no tendency that way.

ST. JOE.

Geo. Hamm was at Ft. Wayne Friday.

S. and F. have another car load of that 4-cent oil.

Mary Hamm has been visiting friends in Garrett the past two weeks.

Our old friend James Bleeks of Newville township, is visiting in Illinois.

C. B Leighty who has been at North Baltimore at work, was at home over Sunday.

Z. T. Kagey has retired from the foremanship of the creamery and Charley Herrick takes his place as best man.

M. T. Bishop of the firm of Filley & Bishop was in Defiance Thursday of last week on business connected with the timber business.

Rev. Mr. Taylor of Hicksville preached at the Christian church Sabbath evening. It is expected that there will be meeting all week in the evening at that church.

The trouble that was likely to happen between the Coburn Town church and their former pastor in regard to a little balance of back salary has been adjusted, to the satisfaction of all concerned.

The series of meetings that has been in progress at the Lutheran church for the last two weeks closed last Sunday with several accessions to the church. The meetings were conducted by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Thomas.

The number of aspirants for the office of postmaster here has narrowed down so that at present there are about three viz: J. R. Culbertson, J. C. Hall and Mahlon Baker. We only wish we had three offices so they could all be accommodated.

Two of our most popular stock buyers had a little pugilistic encounter here one day last week. One of them being a short, chubby man started in by trying to land his right on the others proboscis but not unlike the champion Corbett, that other one got out of the way, and for three rounds the same tactics saved him. We understand the fight was declared off and the parties are friendly.

Sol. Barney and wife, J. R Culbertson and wife, Fred Jenkins and wife and Ed. Leighty and wife took a two forty gait last week one night and struck a bee line for the home of Frank Herrick of Maysville, and from reports given by some of the party, they must have enjoyed themselves. It seems that they borrowed their sled of Wm. Curie and as it happened Mr. Curie had used the sled that day in his butcher business and had deposited in one corner of the forward end of the sled a beef hide, which he forgot to unload at the shop. Before starting the sled box was filled with straw, and the party loaded themselves in. J. R. Culbertson says Sol. sat himself down on that hide and rode to Maysville and back, but made many a wry face. What puzzled the company most is to know what kind of a hide it was on their return whether cow, calf, goat or horse. We leave it to Sol. and Rich to explain.

A stranger from Egypt who had corn to sell came into the quiet town of St. Joe, Saturday, with a load of corn. He disposed of his corn to S. and F. Barney. He had heard of the low price of coal oil as it was being dispensed at this burg and of course wanted a barrel to take home to light him on his way. Sol. was the first victim on whom he tried his buying qualities, but Sol. told him that his oil was all in the tanks and therefore he could not sell him a barrel at that time but if he could wait a few days and return he would accommodate him. But the stranger could not wait. He said the distance was too great to return. Finally Sol. sold him an empty barrel and drew 10 gallons out of the tank and put into the barrel, then our Egyptian borrowed a five gallon can and over to the Big 4 he hastened intent on getting his barrel full of oil. He was met on his entrance by W. C., with a great big smile all over his face and wanting to know what he could do for him. Well, says our Egyptian, I want to buy some oil, a barrel if you please. But as at Barney's, barrels of oil were getting scarce and they did not want to sell that much. Would they sell ten gallons? Oh, yes, and proceded to fill up the 5 gallon can, which the Egyptian carried over to the mixed stock store add emptied into his now half full barrel. He soon returned for the remaining five gallons, which he did not get. He had run against a snag in the person of W. C., who very politely informed him that he was not going to have it that way and that he could not have the other 5 gallons. Well, says our Egyptian, you will not get your pay for what I have got until I get the balance of my purchase. Mort says just about that time W. C. reached out those pugilistic paws of his and caught the Egyptian by the coat collar (which made the fellow howl) and held on until he had told him that he could never get out of that store alive unless he paid for it, which the Egyptian thought best to do when that herculean grip was released. And the man of Egypt found his way out and over the store of the good Samaritans, where his wounds were probably dressed and he was sent on his way rejoicing with his fifteen gallons of oil which had only cost him 4 cents a gallon and a good shaking up.

BUTLER.

The M. E. revival continues with moderate interest.

J. A. Campbell and wife visited Angola and Orland last week.

Rev. Mr. Tedro of the U. B. church commenced a revival effort last Sunday night.

Robert Lingenfelter surprised his parents and acquaintances by getting married about a week ago.

The Knisely dry goods company has gone to pieces, but some of the pieces stuck together, so we have the same named firm, but composed of different members.

Rev. Mr. Fryberger, who has but recently come among us, seems to be gaining many friends. He has commenced a revival effort at the Lutheran church, which is favorably mentioned.

A lively little runaway took place on our streets Saturday. A horse and sleigh belonging to John Cummins escaped from the barn where he was being hitched, and made a dash through the streets where it was most crowded by teams and footmen. Many narrow escapes were reported but no serious injury resulted.

About seven o'clock on Sunday night when our people had gathered at the different churches, the scream of the fire whistle sounded, creating almost a panic. Women and children were running in different directions screaming and crying, each fearing that it was their home. It proved to be the Volum dwelling on Railroad street, occupied by Edward Capp, who was away in Ohio, enjoying his honeymoon. The furniture was removed. The fire company did excellent work and soon had the fire under control, but not before the house was badly damaged. It is fully insured in J. A. Campbell's agency.

CONCORD.

Grandma Erehart is very feeble at this writing.

Frank Smith of Garrett was home over Sunday.

Mrs. Bone was in Ft. Wayne Friday and Saturday.

G. W. Reed of Auburn is here visiting his many relatives.

Don and Belle Blair of Newville, were the guests of their cousin Alice Draggoo Sunday.

Mrs. Sherrick returned to her home in Butler after a weeks with her parents C. Keller's.

Mrs. Hennessey was called to Ft. Wayne Saturday by the serious illness of her sister, Mrs. Mat. James.

C. H. Brown is moving to St. Joe, and will engage in the lumber traffic. Samuel Brown will have charge of the farm.

J. B. Draggoo, Mrs. E. Baker and Mrs. F. Buchanan drove to Auburn Friday. Mrs. Buchanan will remain there until after the anniversary of her parents.

Mrs. Ed. Leighty of St. Joe, hitched up her ponies and come up and got her parents, H. Jenkins and wife and paid her sister, Mrs. Tell Elson a visit Sunday.

Sick list: Jonathan Boyle, Mrs. G. W. Draggoo, J. B. Draggoo, neuralgia; Mrs. C. Keller, rheumatism; Ida and Della Koch and Alice Draggoo, slight attack of the grip; Belle Milton reported better of the quinsy.

John W. Lawhead's house burned last Thursday and nearly all its contents. Maggie their daughter, now Mrs. Cliff Metcalf, had all her bedding destroyed. But her young friends are responding nobly in replacing goods or money as convenient.

SUMMIT.

Dr. Kimmel of Hudson was in town Friday.

Spencer Bair of Ashley, was in town Saturday.

The little child of C. Oberlin is slowly improving.

Wm. Ransberg visited friends north of Hudson a few days last week.

Henry Lawson and family were the guests of John Grambling's Sunday.

Mrs. Wes. McDougle of Pleasant Lake visited Henry Lawson and wife Thursday.

Mrs. James Clark and daughter Edna, of Ashley, made our town a short call Saturday.

Chas. Dunlap of Chicago, who has been here a few days visiting his mother home Tuesday.

Mrs. Rosa Severance and son of Omaha, Neb., are here visiting her sister Mrs. Henry Dayhuff. They expect to move back here in the spring.

Lydia Timmerman moved her household goods to Waterloo last week. She expects to make her home with her sister, Mrs. James Newman in Huntertown.

Mrs. Geo. Bushong visited friends in Cincinnati, Ohio, and Montpelier, Ind, the past two weeks She received quite a good many presents while gone and among them was a valuable folding sewing table.

The Big Postage Stamps.

The Columbian postage stamps are not very popular. They look well enough, but are too big. The licker with the longest tongue has too much advantage in a contest for speed, over the man whose tongue is only a common every day sort of affair. Then, too there is a bit of nonsense about the stamps of large denomination. All those exceeding $1 cannot be used at all, as no package weighing over four pounds can be sent through the mails. Such a package would weigh sixty-four ounces and at a cent an ounce, would require only sixty-four cents worth of stamps. The whole business is one of Wanamaker's buncombe ideas, that will shine out as a new thing; cost the government a lot of good money and turn out useless. The stamps above $1 will be, a few of them, gathered up by stamp collectors, and that will end the business.

A vacant lot on West 7th street.

A nice residence on Seventh street right handy to schools and churches, and within a two minutes' walk of the Court House.

A most desirable residence on south Jackson street, which we offer at a bargain, and will give the purchaser the privilege of paying out in monthly payments, if he so desires. Terms, $500 cash; balance in monthly payments.

FARMS.

We offer, first, a splendid Seventy acres in Union township, well tiled, good fences. Land that cannot be beat for gardening and for small fruits. Will sell cheap for cash, or on the most favorable terms on long time. Lays within three miles of Auburn.

Eighty acres of good land, within one mile of Newville. Good buildings, orchard, and, better soil cannot be found in DeKalb county. Easy prices, and terms to suit the purchaser.

We have a number of farms and town properties on our books, which we are not allowed to advertise, because of the simple fact, that they are offered so cheap that were it known the public would draw the conclusion that the owners are hard up for ready cash, which we all know would be a mistake.

We are agents for those lands in Kansas and Nebraska, which can be had on the most favorable terms ever offered, to-wit: The purchaser makes a small cash payment, just enough to show that he is in earnest, then yearly, thereafter, he pays (delivers at the nearest market) one-half of the crops raised on the land. If crops are unfavorable and he raises no crop, then he makes no payment that year, but is carried over until next year, and so on, until he pays out. Shall we have your application for one of these farms?

We shall be pleased to see you at any time and show, Free of Charge, any of the properties we have on our lists. Write or call on us for any information regarding rates, time of trains to any place on "God's green earth," and remember that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad pays the hack fare to all points in competition where the fare is $2. or more.

FULL OF FRESH FACTS,

ALL RELATING TO PEOPLE AND THINGS OF THE WORLD.

Mr. Cleveland Officially Announces the Names of Four Members of His Cabinet—A Noted Indianian Dead—Russia Will Take Part in the Naval Display.

THE CABINET IN PART.

The Names of Four Members Officially Announced.

Mr. Cleveland officially announced the names of four members of his Cabinet through the United Press reporter. They are as follows:

Walter Q. Gresham of Illinois, Secretary of State.

John G. Carlisle of Kentucky, Secretary of the Treasury.

Daniel S. Lamont of New York, Secretary of War.

Wilson S. Bissell of Buffalo, Postmaster General.

On making the announcements, Mr. Cleveland said: "There is no need of any mystery in regard to the cabinet and it is useless to speculate and indulge in guess work. I shall make no secret of the matter but shall announce the names of gentlemen as fast as I receive their acceptances and permission to make the matter public."

Mr. Cleveland would say nothing in regard to the other positions or the men who have been mentioned in connection with them. It is evident that Hoke Smith, Hilary A. Herbert and others who have been mentioned, are still under consideration.

LYNCHED!

Chattanooga the Scene of Mob Violence.

Chattanooga special: Mrs. Mary A. Moore, a widow, residing in a thickly settled part of the city, was outraged by a negro. He was familiar with the house; entered, and proceeded to the bedroom where Mrs. Moore was at work. Before she could scream the villian had seized her around the waist and placed a hand over her mouth. When she regained consciousness she was alone, the fiend having accomplished his purpose and fled. Several arrests were made, the men being released, but the last capture, Tom Blunt, was placed in jail, which was surrounded by a crowd. It was composed largely of railroad men, the brutes victim being the mother of one of their number. All protests and remonstrances failed, and an attempt was made to break the fall, a battering ram being used. The negro was taken to the bridge over the Tennessee River, seven blocks away and hanged to the iron work of the first space of the roadway. The corpse was made the target for hundreds of pistols and shot full of holes. After this the mob dispersed.

Russia Will Take Part.

St. Petersburg special: The Emperor of Russia has decided to dispatch a large squadron of warships to the United States to take part in the naval display, which is to be arranged in Hampton Roads to celebrate the opening of the Chicago Exposition. The squadron will call at Cherborug or Brest as a compliment to the French Government, and ships are also to visit the Duke of Edinburg at Devonsport. The squadron will be really commanded by Admiral Karnakoff, but to be nominally under the command of Grand Duke Alexis, Lord High Admiral of Russia.

A Young Lady's Sad Plight.

Miss Hallie Hall, daughter of the Rev. Mr. Hall, of the Presbyterian church of Warsaw, Ind., is suffering from a terrible, and it may prove fatal, malady. Some two months ago her feet were frozen. As a remedy she held her feet in cold water for hours at a time. Finally the skin became tender and sore, gangrene set in, and it is feared that both will have to be amputated. Miss Hallie is a popular young lady. She is a graduate of the Chicago Art School, and an artist in the employ of several Chicago papers.

Wreck on the Nickel Plate.

A west-bound freight on the New York, Chicago & St. Louis railroad left the track near Girard, Pa. The engine was wrecked, and crushed under its tender was Fireman William Lapwalder, of Mosstown, Pa. Engineer G. W. Wilkens, of Conneaut, was badly hurt. Head Brakeman John Walters, of Conneaut, Ohio, had an arm broken and was hurt about the neck. Conductor Mike Ryan was slightly injured.

War on Railroad Telegraphers.

Louisville special: The Pennsylvania Company is making war on the Order of Railroad Telegraphers. The other day those employed at Louisville, New Albany, and Jeffersonville were informed that if they remained in the order that would not be placed in the line of promotion. The majority refused to leave the Order and their places are now being filled by non-union men.

Another Warship.

The coast defense vessel Monterey has been placed in commission at the Mare Island Navy Yard, San Francisco.

Bruce Carr Dead.

Bruce Carr, ex-Auditor of the State of Indiana, and a well-known horse breeder and secretary of the Indianapolis Driving Club, died at Indianapolis of erysipelas. He was 44 years of age. Mr. Carr was distinguished as the youngest Indiana soldier in the war, having enlisted as a private when a boy of 15. He was master Mason of Indiana from 1882 to 1884, and at the same time the youngest Master Mason in the country.

ROASTED ALIVE.

Forty-Four Insane Patients Burned to a Crisp.

Dover (N. H.) special: The County Insane Asylum, four miles from here, was burned and forty-four lives were lost. When Watchman William Chevey made his 10 o'clock trip into the insane asylum, he found the fire coming out of the cell occupied by Anna Lufmatin, and gave the alarm. William Driscoll, the keeper, with his family, lived in the buildings, and he at once broke the locks off the fifty-four cells and tried to get the inmates out, and then he got his wife and two children out, neither of whom were dressed. Of the forty-eight inmates on y our escaped. They were William Twombly, Rose Sanderson, William Davey, and Frank Donahon. The latter walked two miles in a blinding snow storm, with only his shirt on, to William Horne's house, where he was taken care of.

The building was of wood, 135x36 feet, two stories high, with a big yard on each side. It was built twenty years ago and had fifty cells. One woman escaped to the yard, but was burned to death there. The building cost $15,000. The main building, in which was over 100 of the county poor, caught fire, but was saved by the heroic efforts of the inmates, who carried pails of water and extinguished the flames, although many were burned in so doing. The Dover fire department was summoned, but owing to the distance, the blinding snowstorm and the icy roads, it took ninety-five minutes for the department to get there. It was too late to be of service. The smoking ruins show the charred bodies still lying on their beds. How the building caught fire is a mystery.

CRUSHED IN A QUARRY.

Ten Men Killed at Rutland, Vt.

The worst disaster in the history of Rutland County, Vermont, took place at West Rutland recently, when at least ten men were killed by the falling in of a wall in the old Sheldon quarry. The real cause of the accident is not known, though the recent heavy rain is supposed to be responsible for it.

As soon as the accident happened the electric danger signal was rung in at the company's office and the mills and work everwhere stopped at once. All the doctors in Rutland were called by telephone and responded quickly. Scores of men were also sent down in the quarry. People from the neighborhood soon began to arrive and the vicinity of the quarry was crowded.

In the crowd were many of the relatives of the killed or injured men and they were frantic with grief. Many of the women tried to rush down into the quarry, but were prevented from doing so by the more cool-headed people, who took extra precautions to prevent accidents.

The quarry is just north of a big sawing mill of the Vermont Marble Company, and is know as the Sheldon covered quarry, or quarry No. 3. It was opened by Sheldon and Slauson in 1868, but last year was leased by the Vermont Marble Company, which has run it since. Depth and surface considered, it is the largest quarry in the world. The accident was near the extreme end of the quarry, far under the hill. The killed and some of the injured were buried under tons of rock, and the work of rescue was necessarily difficult, but scores of men, in charge of competent bosses, went at it with a will.

JUDGE JACKSON.

Democrats Will Likely Oppose His Confirmation.

The Senate Judiciary Committee, in a brief session, has decided to report favorably the nomination of Judge Howell E. Jackson to be one of the associate judges of the Supreme Court of the United States. When the nomination came up the Democrats entered a formal protest to its consideration, and under the rules, the matter went over until the next meeting of the committee. The Republican members in the meantime decided that they would brook no further delay, inasmuch as there were no charges of any kind, and the determination was reached that the nomination should be acted upon now. When the committee met the Democratic members stated that they would no longer oppose the report to the Senate, but intimated that they reserved the right to take such steps as they saw fit, when the question of confirmation came before the Senate itself. The committee will make a favorable report on the nomination at the next executive session, and if there be any serious Democratic opposition it will then have the opportunity to make itself manifest. It is understood that the Republicans will vote as a unit for confirmation.

A TRIPLE ALLIANCE.

The United States, Russia, and France Strike Hands.

A triple alliance between the United States, Russia, and France—such is the international combination of forces for mutual benefit and defense, which has been secretly pending for six years, and which, unknown to either the diplomatic or political world at large culminated in an Executive Session of the United States Senate a few days ago. This is the first public announcement of the weighty meaning which lay behind the seemingly unimportant and formal announcement that "the extradition treaty with Russia has been ratified." That was the sum total of the announcement which was given to the public. But the ratification of this treaty meant an epoch in the history of this country. It meant that the century will close with what Prince Gortschakoff, the great Russian chancellor, once described as "necessary for the universal equilibrium of nations"—namely, an alliance between the United States, Bussia and France.

APPALLING SCENES.

The Legislative Committee Discovers Poverty and Contagion in Chicago

Chicago's sweat shops are undergoing an investigation by a joint committee of the Legislature. Appalling scenes of poverty, disease, and filth were met with by the committee. At 257 Polk street twelve persons of all ages were found at work in a room 10x7 feet, and lying on a pile of rags in one corner were three children sick with measles. The girls employed here made $1.50 to $2 a week, and boys from $2 to $3. At 125 Ewing street, known as Poverty Flats, every room was found to be a sweaters' den. Four and five persons were found to be living and working in rooms eight by ten feet. Some of the girls by hard work could make no more than 15 cents a day. Twenty-six persons were found working in a room 32x38 feet over a stable at 237 Maxwell street. In none of these places was there any ventilation and the air was so foul that the investigators could stay but a few moments.

Home Rule for Ireland.

Mr. Gladstone introduced his home rule bill in the British House of Commons. He spoke in a clear, resonant voice and with great feeling, and closed his great speech of masterly eloquence and power in reviewing the record of broken promises made by the enemies of home rule and the treachery following the act of union and the promise of equal laws and commercial equality. It had been boasted that Irishmen would take their places in the cabinet, but he knew of but one—the Duke of Wellington—who was an Irishman. Ireland's Representative to-day were four-fifths of them desirous of self-government, but the opposition had no respect for such a majority. Self-government could only work through the laws of representation and the persistent voice of the Irish people in returning such great home majorities meant something.

Mr. Blaine's Will.

The will of the late James G. Blaine was presented for probate at Augusta, Maine. It was executed in Washington, D. C., Saturday, Jan. 7, 1893, twenty days before his death. His estate is left to his wife and she is named as executrix.

A Triple Collision.

A collision occurred on the Grand Rapids and Indiana near Gilbert's siding, between Cadillac and Manton, Mich. Freight No. 14, south bound, got stalled on the Manton hill grade. Freight train No. 10, following, coupled to No. 14 to pull it out. When near Gilbert's siding a draw bar broke. Brakeman Whiting and Conductor Chamberlain, of No. 10, were under the car repairing the brake when passenger train No. 2 dashed into the rear of the freight train, telescoping the caboose and one car. Brakeman Whiting was instantly killed, while Chamberlain was probably fatally injured. Henry Burleson, a traveling salesman, who boarded the caboose at Manton, was caught in the wreck and his body was burned to a crisp.

Riot at Wheeling.

Wheeling (W. Va.) special: Striking electric railway employes and their friends made an assault upon the crews of cars at the railway company's house, just opposite the city limits in Marshall county. The rioting was kept up for nearly an hour, and three of the employes of the company were terrible beaten, two of them perhaps fatally. The wounded are: W. H. Tucker, superintendent; Henry Hartmer, a motorman, and H. S. Newton, the company's electrician. Newton and Hartman are both hurt internally, caused by men jumping on them, and have many cuts and bruises on their heads and bodies. Stones, clubs, and revolvers were freely used by the mob which numbered about one hundred. More trouble is expected.

An Avalanche of Snow.

A special from Ouray, Colorado, says: Word has just reached here that four men have met death in a terrific snow slide on the Virginius road and Hanging Rock between here and Porters. One team got off the road and three other teams were assisting in pulling it up when a slide came and carried all of them over a steep canon to instant death. Those lost were Hank Metcalf, foreman of Ashenfelter's freighting outfit; John Swain, Martin White, and another man, whose name has not been learned, teamsters under Metcalf. A rescuing party has gone out, but cannot reach the buried men, as three large avalanches of snow have come down between Ouray and Hanging Rock, and the road is blocked.

Buried in Snow.

In the twinkling of an eye two trainmen lost their lives and four others were injured by a snow slide near Breckenridge, Col. The dead are Engineer Lynch and Fireman Smith. The injured, none of whom are dangerously hurt, are Engineers Boyton and McGreevy, Fireman Bowan and Brakeman Hawkins. A rotary snow plow left Como in front of Union Pacific train No. 499, a fast train, clearing the track eastward. While the plow was laboring in the drift close to Frisco, a small station eleven miles west of Breckenridge, a snow slide came tearing down without a moment's warning. It struck the snow plow with terrific force and overturned both the snow plow and the locomotive.

Caught in a Fire-Trap.

Heider's Hotel, Cincinnati, took fire and before the flames were under control four lives had been sacrificed. The structure had been condemned and ordered torn down within a month, and the number of persons packed in it was very large, several families of Polish Jews having rooms there. The dead are: Fred Detzel, waiter; Albert Grau, yardman; Joseph Maines, a waiter called Gottlieb, whose surname is unknown. Grau wakened the other inmates of the hotel, but was himself unable to escape. The fire was confined to the hotel building.

Child Drowned.

The 5-year-old daughter of Mr. Neal Weaver was drowned in the St. Mary's river, at Fort Wayne, Ind.

The little girl was playing on the river bank in the rear of her home. The bank which is ten feet above the water is covered with ice. On this ice she lost her footing and slipped. Almost in an instant she was plunged into the water. The frantic mother and her sister, Miss Mary Carroll, screamed for assistance. None came and the little girl sank beneath the water dead. In two hours the body was found near where the little girl was last seen.

A Sloop with Chinamen on Board Is Lost.

Vancouver (B. C.) special: The sloop Cornelius, which left Cadbora Bay early in December with forty-five Chinamen on board destined for California, has not been heard from since. She was owned by three men connected with smuggling. Shortly after the Cornelius left Cadbora Bay there was a succession of severe gales, one of which, it is feared, sealed the fate of the cargo and crew. The sloop was but thirty feet long.

Has Arisen From the Dead.

Cleveland special: Two thousand members in this city of the American Fraternal Circle, a defunct seven years dividend order, have been notified that they would receive 90 per cent. of the amount paid in by them. The notification came from Baltimore, where the order was broken up by a suit brought by the Baltimore division. It is said that the circle had $800,000 on hand at the time of demise.

TO REVISE THE TARIFF

THE TARIFF OF 1846 SHOULD BE THE BASIS.

Hon. William M. Springer Gives Some Valuable Suggestions—The Complicated Situation Into Which Reciprocity Dickers and Sugar Bounties Have Led Us.

How It Can Be Done.

In the North American Review for February, the Hon. William M. Springer, Chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, gives some valuable suggestions as to how to revise the tariff. He thinks that the principles which governed the construction of the Walker tariff of 1846 should furnish the basis upon which the tariff may now be revised; because "a measure based upon such principles has already stood the test of time;" and because "the principles upon which it is founded are those which have received the sanction of the Democratic party in the past, and, if adhered to in the future, will make the pathway to tariff revision easy and the remedy for existing evils complete."

He quotes the following extract from Walker's report to show what the principles were:

"In suggesting improvements in the revenue laws, the following principles have been adopted:

"1. That no more money should be collected than is necessary for the wants of the government economically administered.

"2. That no duty should be imposed on any article above the lowest rate which will yield the largest amount of revenue.

"3. That, below such rate, discrimination may be made, descending in the scale of duties; or, for imperative reasons, the article may be placed in the list of those free from all duty.

"4. That the maximum revenue duty should be imposed on luxuries.

"5. That all maximums, and all specific duties, should be abolished, and ad valorem duties substituted in their place—care being taken to guard against fraudulent invoices and under-valuation, and to assess the duty upon the actual market value.

"6. That the duty should be so imposed as to operate as equally as possible throughout the Union, discriminating neither for nor against any class or section."

Mr. Springer then shows that "the substance of these propositions has been iterated and reiterated in Democratic platforms and conventions from that time to the present." He quotes statistics which show that from 1850 to 1860, under the low tariffs of 1846 and 1857, population increased 50 per cent., imports 199, exports 254, miles of railroad 512, manufacturing establishments from 123,000 in 1850 to 140,433 in 1860; capital employed in manufactures, 87 per cent.

"But the most important, of all the propositions," says Mr. Springer, "is that all specific duties should be abolished and ad valorem duties substituted in their place." This rule was adhered to in the Walker tariff, which does not contain one item which imposed a specific duty, or a duty levied upon the pound or quantity, but the duty was always imposed upon the article according to its value. This is the distinctive feature of the Walker tariff, as compared with all other tariff laws passed in this country.

"In view of the early revision of the tariff laws of this country, special consideration should be given to the fifth proposition laid down by Mr. Walker, namely, that all specific duties should be abolished and ad valorem duties substituted in place.

"Mr. Walker, in his report to Congress in 1845, demonstrated clearly that the operation of specific duties discriminates against the poor and in favor of the rich. He said that, if direct taxes were made specific, they would be intolerable. 'Thus,' said he, 'if an annual tax of $30 was assessed on all houses, without respect to their actual value, making the owner of the humble tenement or cabin pay a tax of $30, and the owner of a costly mansion a tax of but $30 on their respective houses, it would differ only in degree, but not in principle, from the same unvarying specific duty on cheap as on fine articles.' He held that, if any discrimination should be made, it should be the reverse of the specific duty. He further said: 'The tax upon the actual value is the most equal and can only be accomplished by ad valorem duties.'

"The truth of these statements is clearly demonstrated by reference to some of the compound ad valorem and specific duties contained in the McKinley act."

Mr. Springer then shows that under the McKinley act woolen shawls imported in 1892 paid an average duty of 138.63 per cent., while champagnes paid but 57.29 per cent. "Thus," he says, "by the device of specific duties, as embraced in the McKinley act, champagne, the greatest of luxuries, pays less than half the rate, according to its value, which is imposed upon the cheap woolen shawls which the poor women of the country must wear to protect them from the chilling blasts of winter.

"No such rates as these could have ever been passed in a tariff bill which provided upon its face for ad valorem rates. They are only possible by a combination of ad valorem and specific duties, or by specific duties alone. The actual amount of the tax as compared with the value of the article upon which it is placed, is concealed. The McKinley act is a combination of such cunningly devised rates. To construct a bill of that kind requires extraordinary skill and utter disregard of all principles of justice and even of common honesty. The McKinley act contains 32,000 words; the Walker act contained less than 6,000 words. The injustice and inequalities of the McKinley act are apparent at a glance, when the rates are applied to actual importations."

McKinley's Foreign Competitor.

Whom the gods wish to destroy they first make mad. Canadian protectionists, not to be outdone by their friends in the United States, have placed upon their statute books a measure that almost rivals in absurd features our own McKinley bill, which taxes the ends of cables which protrude on our soil, chickens hatched a few feet across our border line by careless hens that do not take the trouble to distinguish between their own and foreign countries, and calves dropped in foreign territory by stray cows. Considering the size and population of their country, and its greater dependence upon foreign countries, Canada has duties that, judged by our own standard, are befitting our next door neighbor. Its administrative features, although not so ridiculous as those of the McKinley bill, yet contain much dry humor.

Mr. Louis F. Post is one of the lecturers of the National Single-Tax Lecture Bureau. His single-tax friends in Canada had arranged a series of meetings for him there, and he was on his way to fulfill engagements when the Canadian customs officers stopped him. He had with him to illustrate his lectures a few yards of cloth containing diagrams, consisting of different colored lines, squares, and circles. The officers came to the conclusion that these diagrams were paintings or drawings, and that the artists of Canada would be left unprotected from the pauper labor of the United States if a duty were not collected on the diagrams. Mr. Post paid the duty, and will have one object lesson for the Canadians not down in his canvass.

Hawaiian Annexation.

In the year 1875 a treaty of reciprocity, so called, was made between the United States and his Majesty the King of the Hawaiian Islands, the principal feature of which was the admission of Hawaiian sugar free of duty to this country. As the islands could not produce more than one tenth of the sugar imported by us, the remission of the duty to them exclusively was equivalent to a bounty of two cents per pound on all they could produce. The sugar industry became very flourishing and passed into the hands of a few rich people in San Francisco. They managed to send us from 200,000,000 to 250,000,000 pounds per year. In 1889 our importations from Hawaii were 243,000,000 pounds. The bounty to the producers for that year was nearly $5,000,000. There was constant complaint among the people of the Pacific coast during all this time that they got their sugar no cheaper than before, but that on the contrary they were required to pay the market price of the East plus the freight charges for all that they used. This was not the only complaint. The Eastern refiners (before the days of the Sugar Trust) alleged, and no doubt, truly, that Mr. Spreckels was enabled to lay down sugars in the Mississippi Valley in unfair competition with them, since he got his raw sugar at 2 cents per pound less than they were required to pay. All this was quiet natural. Mr. Spreckels was not in the sugar business for the fun of the thing. If the Government had created a situation by which he could make a lot of money, he would have been a fool not to avail himself of it.

It would be useless now to discuss the wisdom or unwisdom of the Treaty of 1875. Other considerations than those of sugar-planting entered into it. For better or for worse, the treaty ran along until the McKinley tariff was passed. The repeal of the duties on raw sugar put the Hawaiian Islands once more on the same footing as other foreign countries. Their bounty was cut off. To stop a regular income of four to five millions of dollars from a little group of islands, or rather from a small coterie in that group, is a serious matter. Something was sure to happen in consequence, and something has happened. There has been a "revolution." The "Queen of the Sandwich Islands" has been overthrown. Tyranny is in the dust. The people (about 50,000 natives and 3,000 Americans and Europeans) have asserted the sacred right of self-government. There are nearly as many Chinese coolies, called "contract laborers," on the islands as there are of the native Hawaiian stock. Of course these have had nothing to do with the revolution, nor, for that matter, have the natives. The upheaval is in the American quarter altogether. It is a revolution on a strictly cash basis.

When the McKinley tariff put raw sugar on the free-trade list it gave a bounty of two cents per pound to the producers of sugar in the United States. This was sufficient to revolutionize the Hawaiian Islands any day. The sugar-planters want that bounty. They have a delegation, or an embassy, or whatever it may be called, en route to Washington City now to place the sovereignty of the kingdom at our disposal and the sugar bounty at their disposal. It is as plainly a private speculation as was the attempted annexation of Santo Domingo during Grant's administration. Although the affair has come about suddenly, it is not likely to be disposed of suddenly.

Certain belated patriots, whose prime has been passed in the nation's callow period, are for asserting Manifest Destiny and the Monroe Doctrine and showing up our new navy, and making the American eagle scream. This is to be expected, of course, but the nation ought to be now beyond the perils of infancy, and really is so unless cast unexpectedly into a predicament from which there is no easy escape. Happily the annexation of foreign territory, as was shown in the cases of San Domingo and St. Thomas, requires time and gives abundant opportunity for reflection. It would be as presumptuous to pronounce hasty judgment against annexation as for it, and we are far from saying that the proposal ought not to be entertained. We insist, however, that the project is prima facie a private speculation on the part of a few sugar-planters who have found their bounty suddenly cut off and who want to have it renewed. Uncle Sam has enough to do taking care of his own pensioners, without running over seas in search of new ones. Moreover, the chances are that we shall stop paying sugar bounties to our own people before any treaty of annexation can secure a two-thirds majority of the Senate.

A Protectionist Dilemma.

A protection and subsidy organ of this city finds itself occasionally at odds with one or the other of its tenets. For example, it recently undertook, in the interest of subsidies, to show that "we export finished products for sale beneath the very shadow of England's free-trade factories."

It printed a table which shows that during the ten months ending Oct. 31 a number of our protected articles had been exported to England, some for consumption and some for reexportation to South America. The value of these exportations aggregated nearly $14,000,000. The American manufacturers of the articles are so afraid of English and other foreign competition in our own markets that they have purchased heavy protective duties of the Republican party. And yet they can compete with the Englishmen at home, where the tax is against them to the amount of the freight charges at least.

If they can undersell Englishmen in England and also in South America after paying freight from New York to Liverpool and again from Liverpool to South American ports, why do they need protection at home?

The organ ought to drop one of its tenets. If it proves that our manufacturers can compete with foreigners in foreign countries, it shows that we can maintain an ocean-carrying trade, but it also proves not only that the protection war on commerce is hurtful to the manufacturers, but that our manufacturers do not need protection at all.—New York World.

What Free Wool Will Do.

Mr. Edward D. Page, of Faulkner, Page & Co., a firm as largely interested in domestic woolen manufacturing as any mercantile house in the United States, begins, in the American Wool and Cotton Reporter of January 19th, a series of articles on the subject of woolen goods and tariff revision. He presupposes that the manufacturers will soon have absolutely free wool and in general free raw materials. He says that:

"The addition to our supplies of perhaps 400 varieties of raw stock, virtually prohibited from our market for many years, introduces into the condition of manufacture a new and serious educational problem. I fear that many manufacturers do not fully realize even now how much improvement and economy is to be accomplished by making their goods from a mixture of the stocks most exactly suited to the qualities the goods are to possess, instead of from the makeshifts which our meager market has hitherto afforded. I have been shown, in an English manufacturer's wool-house, a mixture or blend of no less than fourteen distinct and different varieties of wool, from which is made a simple woolen fabric, in which, at home, no more than two or three qualities are used. Each of these fourteen varieties are found to lend some desirable peculiarity to the fabric, perceptible only in the finished piece, or else to economize its cost; and I was told that the blend used has been substantially the same for nearly thirty years. The goods manufactured from it were perceptibly superior in selling qualities to our own, and were produced at less cost for wool than would be warranted by the difference between the American and foreign quotations for similar grades."

Yet he says:

"It is the opinion of many observers that no change that is likely to occur will in the long run affect the wool and woolen industries more unfavorably than have the tariffs of 1864 to 1890."

Mr. Page thus enumerates several elements of cost of manufacture in which our manufacturers are at a disadvantage as compared with foreign manufacturers. These include, as mentioned above, lack of experience in blending all kinds of wools, higher costs of buildings, and higher rates of interest. As to the element of labor cost he says:

"It will be observed that I have not enumerated a difference in labor cost as one of the disadvantages under which American manufacturers suffer. In this respect I am disposed to agree with the opinion of eminent manufacturers when fresh from an actual experience of competition with the so-called 'paupor labor of abroad,' and I quote from the Bulletin of the National Association of Wool Manufacturers, Vol. I., p. 45 (1866): American manufacturers admit that it is not so much the low rate of wages in England against which they have to contend as the low rates of interest, which permit the control of large capital and the most advantageous use of machinery. It is not that there may not be special instances where labor of certain kinds is, perhaps, extravagantly paid in our mills, but I have observed that, generally speaking:

"1. The highest paid labor is the cheapest.

"2. Nations that have the lowest paid labor are forced, as a rule, to protect themselves against those who pay higher wages.

"3. Higher paid labor, being the most intelligent, protects its wages against the competition of less intelligent and less highly paid labor by superior inventiveness and superior ability in handling machinery.

"It is perhaps unfortunate that no unbiased or scientific comparison of American with foreign labor-efficiency has ever been made; but in unprotected industries we seem to be as well able to compete now with the foreigner as we could expect; and our experience under the revenue tariff 1857-1861 was that we could compete, notwithstanding a similar difference in wages to that which now prevails. I have very little question but after our industries have adjusted themselves to new conditions, the superior skill and intelligence of American manufacturers and workmen will maintain the supremacy of our industries in the future as it has in the past.

"So far as the rate of wages is concerned it is dependent upon the relations existing between the amount of work to be done and the number of workmen qualified to do it. If the new tariff gives more work and the number of workmen does not increase, it will assuredly raise wages."

Such articles are eminently sound and practical. They may give but little assistance to the new administration, but they will inculcate a broad and liberal spirit among the manufacturers themselves, that will greatly hasten that readjustment to new conditions which will not only insure success but will soon make us the greatest manufacturers, as we are, already, the greatest consumers of woolens.

Minor State Items.

THE citizens voted for water works at Martinsvill by a majority of 300.

THE State Farmers' Institute will be held at Ladoga, Montgomery County, Feb. 23 and 24.

THOMAS KEPLER, a large land and mill-owner, living four miles north-west of Centerville, was found dead in the woods.

MRS. MARY FURGUSON, a widow, of Frankfort, has filed suit against John F. Blanch, a prominent farmer of Clinton County, demanding $5,000 damages for trifling with her affections.

THE largest gas well in the State has been bored near Montpelier. The sound of escaping gas is unendurable. A man residing a few rods from the monster has been compelled to abandon his home.

WILLIAM ROBERTS, a brakeman on the Big Four, had his foot crushed at Waynetown. He was thrown between the cars by the train breaking in two. Roberts was taken to his home in Indianapolis.

AT the Howard County Farmers' Institute, the following officers were elected: President, William Mitchell; Vice President, W. S. Elliott; Secretary, Mrs. Emma H. Davis; Treasurer, Frank Haworth.

THE imposing depot of the Vandalia Railroad Company, at South Bend, was partly destroyed by fire, causing the loss of many valuable records besides an amount of personal property. There was no insurance.

FARMER SID COX, living near Columbus, is a heavy loser by the recent thaw. He owned one of the largest fish ponds in the State. A few days ago the levee supporting the large pond gave way, and about 6,000 carp were set free into White River.

THE output of the Indiana oil field for January was over ninety thousand barrels, Jay County furnishing three-fourths of the amount. As most of the wells flow, the waste of gas goes on steadily, and is greatly deplored by gas consumers.

JOHN HARPER was awarded $1,200 damages, in the Grant Circuit Court, against the Panhandle Railroad Company, for building a sidetrack along the premises of Harper and R. M. Beck, and on land claimed by them. Beck has also brought suit.

GRANT SCHEWALTER, Summitville, looked for a leak of gas with a lighted match. The first thing he knew he and three other members of the family were lying under an immense pile of debris. They were not seriously injured, but the house is a total wreck.

A LAD of 5 years, of Michigan City, observed his father hiding a bottle of fine old rock and rye the other day. When the parent had gone the youngster secured the bottle and was joined by a little sister in swallowing the stuff. A doctor saved the two precious lives, but the rock and rye was ruined.

ANDREW T. KEFLER, familiarly known as "Tona" Kefler, one of the oldest settlers in Wayne County, was found dead in the woods, a short distance from his home in Harrison Township. He was suffering from mental weakness incident to old age, and wandered away from home. He was about 75 years old, and has lived in Wayne County since 1820.

THE stockholders of the Bedford Fair and Trotting Association held a meeting recently, and it was decided to offer $3,000 in the speed department at the annual fair, to be Sept. 12 to 16. The following officers were elected: A. C. Voris, President; S. T. Zollman, Vice President; James McClelland, Treasurer; George W. McDaniel, Superintendent; Frank Stannard, Secretary.

AT Cassopolis, a town a short distance north of Elkhart, two men discovered some dogs worrying something, and on examination the object was found to be the dead body of a negro child, which had been partially devoured by the dogs. Suspicions pointed to a married woman named Mary Clems, who was arrested, and confessed that she placed her 3-months-old child under a barrel in her wood-shed, and that during the night it froze to death. Becoming alarmed the next day, she took the body to a cow-stable and buried it under some fodder, where it had been found by the dogs and dragged forth.

THE fourth National Bank has just been organized in Muncie. The last is the Merchant's National Banking Company, with $100,000 capital. The Directors are Samuel Martin, James W. Meeks, Frederick Klopfer, George W. Maring, Frank A. Brown, Hardin Roads, and Lewis S. Hooke, with the following officers: President, Hardin Roads; Vice President, Samuel Martin; Cashier, Frank A. Brown; Assistant Cashier, George Wood, of Aurora, Ind.; bookkeeper, Arthur L. Shideler. Mr. Roads came to Muncie from Hillsboro, Ohio, two years ago and engaged in the wholesale grocery business.

FOR the past month experts of Chicago and Cincinnati, have been in Clay County, looking over some hilly land south of Brazil, which, some time ago, was viewed by experts who claimed to find a small quantity of silver ore. The affair, however, was abandoned until recently, when the present experts began digging in the soil in search of the precious metal. They were also about to give up the search when, to their surprise, they struck an immense vein of silver and zinc ore. They claim the indications are favorable for an almost inexhaustable product of as rich ore as may be found in Colorado. Brazil is greatly stirred up over the affair, and Mr. Carpenter, who owns the land where the mine was found, has been offered a big price for his ground by the inspectors. A portion of the ore has been sent to Chicago to be assayed.

HARMAN UTTERBACK, who has resided near Crawfordsville for sixty-five years, died at the age of 81.

WILLIAM TOBY, a workman at the Westerman rolling-mills, Marion, was instantly killed recently. He was standing near a mass of manufactured product when the supports gave way, burying him under about eight tons of iron. William Step, another workman, was seriously injured, and his recovery is doubtful. Charles Cadawak, another employe, had just stepped from under the falling mass, and thus saved his life. Toby was about sixty years old. He leaves a wife and seven children.

TWO WITNESSES from Baker Township testified in the Morgan Circuit Court, at Martinsville, that they do not know the name of the county in which they have resided for years. They were grown men and appeared to be of fair intelligence, though quite illiterate.

CHRISTMAS eve at Fort Wayne, Mrs. Mary Noonan and Mrs. John Swadner were killed in an elevator accident in Simon Bros.' store. Suit was threatened by the husband of Mrs. Swadner, but was compromised for a small sum. The other day, in the Allen County Superior Court, suit was entered by George J. Dash, administrator, for the estate of Mrs. Noonan against Henry and Herman Simon to recover $10,000 damages.

MARYLAND ROASTER AND BAKER

FOR MEATS, FOWL, FISH, ETC., AND FOR BAKING BREAD, CAKES AND PUDDINGS.

BEST SIMPLEST AND CHEAPEST

THE STEAM produced by the process of cooking cannot escape, is absorbed by the article in the roaster, and acts as a basting. There is no evaporation, no drying up or burning, hence no shrinkage or loss of weight, and all the flavor and nutritious qualities of the food are retained. Tough meats are made tender, and any article roasted or baked will be sweeter, healthier and more digestible. Put the food in the roaster, place the roaster in a well heated oven; the roaster will do the cooking. It requires no attention. Can only be bought from dealers, the trade supplied by:

The Story of a Man Who Knew of the Morrow, Written for This Paper.

BY EDWARD S. VAN ZILE.

CHAPTER I.

He was not a handsome man, from a classic standpoint, but there was something in his face pleasing to the eye of him who finds beauty in power. It was a strong face; a face bearing the impress of great mental force and showing those peculiar marks left on the human countenance by lofty thoughts. Do you want his picture in detail? Perhaps not, yet; but if you read his strange story you will be anxious to know how he looked. Taking it for granted, then, that you intend to peruse this tale, let me describe its central figure.

He was at the time of which I write 30 years of age, but his dark hair had so many gray locks, turning to white just above the ears, that he appeared at least ten years older. He was slender in figure and about 5 feet 6 inches in height—the Napoleonic standard. His head was too large for his frame and his overhanging brow and prominent nose added to his general lack of symmetry. His eyes were steel-gray in color, rather small, perhaps, but very fiery when he was aroused. His hands and feet were delicate in outline, and, though he was careless as regards his clothes, he always paid strict attention to his gloves and shoes. Even great men have small vanities.

His name was Danton—Maurice Danton. His grandfather had come to New York City sometime in the '30's, and had made a fortune in real estate. The father of Maurice had squandered a large part of his inheritance and had died young. His wife had not survived him long, and at twenty Maurice Danton found himself an orphan, with an income of about $2,000 a year—the pitiful remnant of his grandfather's vast wealth.

Maurice had been a gloomy, morbid boy, a hard reader, and more inclined to indulge his own queer reveries than mingle with his schoolmates. Left in the world, he decided to spend a few years in Germany and perfect himself in certain lines of science. His income was sufficient to support him in comfort at the University of Heidelberg, and he had passed ten years of his life in that quaint old town, not happy, perhaps, but too unambitious to break from the intellectual fetters that held him there.

He had been looked upon at the university as a man of great talents who would never amount to much. His historic French surname had added to his unpopularity, and for a whole decade he had lived a lonely existence, poring over books, working in his laboratory, and brooding upon various problems as old as the mind of man.

His only friend in all that time had been a weird-looking little man, at one time a famous professor, but now forgotten and neglected in his later years. Danton and he were often together, and the Professor's den, at the top of a tumble-down house facing the Heiligenberg, was the scene of many meetings between this strangely-assorted pair. A conversation that took place between them a few months before Danton returned to this country resulted in the startling events forming the basis of this history.

"Science to-day," the old man was saying, "is injured by its overbearing egotism. It says, in effect, that the scientific workers in the old days were fools and fanatics; that the scientific methods of the present are the only paths toward truth, and that even the ancient achievements of science were the outcome not of reason but of luck."

"In that, I think contemporary science is right," returned Danton stubbornly. "What were the scientists—to abuse a great name—of past ages? Charlatans, cheats, chasers of the rainbow, men who sought to change iron into gold and find immortal youth in drugs. Faugh! The catalogue of those old errors is enough to make men blush to the end of time. The scientific present and the scientific past are as widely different as chemistry and clairvoyance."

The weazened face of the aged German took on a peculiar expression. He seemed to smile sarcastically.

"You are young and have the impetuosity of a Frenchman. There may be no such great gap between chemistry and clairvoyance as you think."

Danton looked at his companion in amazement. Was the old man's brain equal to its weight of years?

"What do you mean?" he asked.

"Have you ever read the stories of that old scoundrel Balzac? Of course you have. He is one of your grandfather's countrymen. Well, listen to this."

The Professor left his seat by the window, put on a pair of steel-bowed spectacles, found, after a time, the book he sought and resumed his place.

"Of course," he premised, "Balzac has no weight with you or me on a subject of this kind, but a certain passage here will illustrate what I have to say to you before you return to the land of your birth. Listen: 'In these days so many authentic and established facts have come to light by means of the occult sciences, that before long these sciences will be taught just as we now teach chemistry and astronomy. It is surprising that at this moment in Paris, where they are now creating professorships of the Slav and Mantchoo and other futile literatures of the North, they have not revived under the name of anthropology the teaching of occult philosophy—one of the glories of the ancient university. In this respect Germany, a nation so great and yet so childlike, has outrun France, for there they have revived this science—a science far more useful than the various philosophies which are, in point of fact, all the same thing.' Now, there is a good deal of nonsense in this and just an atom of truth. Balzac realized that those thinkers whom you call cheats and charlatans saw clearly certain things to which science now persistently and stubbornly blinds herself."

"You mean, then—to place the matter in a practical light—that such a subject as clairvoyance, for instance, is worthy of attention from modern scientists?"

"I do. Let modern science pride herself upon her own achievements, but let her not forget that there were warriors before Agamemnon and clever men before Bacon. The point is just here. The alchemists and astrologers were, to a great extent, frauds, but their lines of endeavor were the outcome of many ages of human thought. Modern science arises and says that all those centuries of investigation shall count for nothing, and the phenomena not at present explainable cannot exist—a decree as arbitrary and absurd as any ever made by the church against science. Now, young man, bear this in mind. If we could gather from the past whatever truth it discovered regarding the phenomena of what are called the occult sciences, and could apply thereto the methods of modern science, a startling result might be obtained. Do you follow me?"

"Vaguely."

"For instance, let us take—but hold! I'll quote from Balzac again: 'If any one had gone to Napoleon and told him that a building or a man projects, at all moments and perpetually, an image upon the atmosphere, and that all existing objects have within that atmosphere, a perceptible and obtainable specter or shape, he would have promptly sent his information to Charenton, just as Richelieu sent Salomon de Caux to Bicetrd, when that Norman martyr offered him the vast conquest of steam navigation.' Now if I should tell you that objects that do not yet exist project upon the atmosphere 'a perceptible and obtainable specter shape' you would consider me as crazy as Napoleon would have thought Daguerre. But I make that assertion to you boldly. Not only does the atmosphere contain the specter of everything that was and everything that is, but in its bosom reclines the image of everything that will be. This is hard for you to believe. Let me help you. Your mind still retains the picture I presented as I lay ill in bed a few months ago, does it not? Yes. Well, your mind now holds my image as I appear at the present moment. But, more than that; you know I will be at work in the library to-night upon a certain book which I described to you last night. Your mind can make a most vivid picture of me as I shall look in the morning as the image you hold of me when I lay in bed. That is, the delicate chemistry of the mind is able to photograph the past, the present and the future. Do you understand?"

Danton hesitated a moment. "I agree with you, in part," he said at last. "But I doubt if I can accept the conclusion at which I see you are aiming. You mean to imply that if we could so refine the chemistry of photography that our apparatus would perform as delicate work as does the human mind, that we could obtain pictures of things that do not exist so far as our senses can determine. I have heard of pictures produced by spirit hands, but, being a scientific man, I have never for a moment admitted the possibility of this form of art."

The young man smiled sarcastically and relighted his pipe.

"I do not ask you to accept spiritualism," returned the professor, rather haughtily. "You call yourself a scientist. The world once gave me that name, and not without reason. I am a scientist, and if I tell you that there are more things in heaven and earth than you wot of, I still retain my right to the high title we both claim. No, I simply want you to grasp the fact that, if the ancients were right in their assertion that the future makes an impression upon the present, it is not beyond the reach of modern science to grasp and hold that impression. Listen. I am a very old man. For many years I have sacrificed my time, money, fame upon the altar of a great discovery." The speaker arose and stood before Danton in a new guise. His time-worn face had thrown off the marks of age, his eyes sparkled with triumph, and his attentive form seemed to take on again the fullness of youth.

"I have proved, Maurice Danton, that photography can deal with the past and future; that it can give us a picture of Cæsar or the representation of a city still unbuilt. You look incredulous. You think that much study has made me mad. But you are wrong. You claim to be a scientist, and yet you doubt the grandeur of science. I tell you, Danton, that man has only just begun to make intelligent use of Nature's forces. You say the telegraph was a great discovery. Bah! Merely a crude device that should have been made available centuries ago. What's that you say? I am inconsistent. Not at all. Because I acknowledge that the older scientists saw something of forgotten truth, I do not imply that they achieved the triumphs that should have been easily won. My position is just this: By weeding the errors from the scientific past and by rendering the scientific methods of the present more delicate I placed myself in the way of making a combination the results of which will amaze you."

Danton could not resist the enthusiasm of a man who had heretofore seemed to him cold, cautious and indifferent.

"Why do you tell me all this?" he cried.

"Because," answered the professor, changing his manner at once and quietly seating himself. "Because I shall confide my secret to you. I shall place in your hands a power greater than was ever held by mortal. My sands are almost run out, my blood is cold, and the pleasures of earth have no place for me. But you are still young. You have not tasted the dainty fare the world presents to him who possesses both youth and wealth. I have loved you, Danton. When all men neglected me, you sought me out and became my friend. For years I had been looking for some one who would combine certain qualities. I wanted a young man, a man of science, a student, a man who was glad to sacrifice worldly rewards for the love of truth, a man who would come to me of his own accord and value my friendship as he did his books—for intrinsic value, not for sordid gain. In you I found the man I sought. You are a strange mixture, and for a long time I doubted your fitness for the task I have set. But long acquaintance has convinced me that you are able and willing to push my scientific achievement to its ultimate triumph in the eyes of men. Am I not right?"

"I care nothing, professor, for the material joys to which you referred. But you have aroused my scientific enthusiasm, and I give you my solemn promise that whatever aid I can render you in regard to this affair shall be cordially yours. What is the first step for me to take?"

"Read carefully this manuscript," answered the old man, handing Danton a roll of paper. "Come to me to-morrow afternoon. I will prove to you that the statements I have made therein are not the ravings of a madman."

Danton returned to his rooms and spent the night in perusing the professor's scroll. There was much in it that he could not understand, but his mental training had been of a kind that enabled him to follow in a general way the argument before him. His difficulty lay in accepting the proposition that the invisible world contained the image of things not yet existent—the shadows of approaching entities. If that could be established, there was nothing in the manuscript to startle a mind used to the contemplation of scientific achievements.

Weary with the sustained effort of the night, Danton threw himself upon his bed at daybreak and slept soundly for six hours. When he arose he felt refreshed and there came upon him like a flash of lightning the conviction that the professor's assertions were founded upon truth. By that strange process known as unconscious cerebration he had gained in his sleep a clearer insight into the problems presented to him than he had obtained when awake. He dressed hurriedly, ate a light breakfast, and hastened to the professor's rooms.

"Ah, you are early Danton!" exclaimed the old man, evidently pleased. "You have come at the right moment. A book has been written by an old acquaintance of mine at Berlin. He is about to send it to the publisher. See. Here is the announcement in a newspaper that the volume will be given to the public next month. Now your faith in my discovery is still weak. If I should show you a picture of this book's title page would you be convinced that my photography is an improvement on Daguerre's?" The old man was in high spirits and seemed to take delight in watching the changing expressions on Danton's face. He led the way to his laboratory, a small room, ill-smelling and carelessly kept.

"Now, my friend," continued the professor, "your apprenticeship is about to begin. If the book of which I spoke is to be printed and bound this month—next month—ten years from now—whenever you please, there exists an image of it in the atmosphere. Not only that, but each atom of the universe is a microcosm bearing images of all that is or was or ever shall be. Do you follow me? You know that I could obtain by photography a miniature representation of your form as you stand there. But further than that, if I could place any atom of the universe beneath a microscope of sufficient power I would find your image there also. This I cannot prove to you by experiment, but it is the only deduction possible from certain investigations that I have made in other directions. Were it not true, the miracle, so to speak, that I am about to perform would be impossible."

While he was speaking the professor had been busy with various plates and chemicals. He allowed the sunlight to play for a time on a piece of glass which he had covered with an oily substance having a peculiar and unpleasant odor. Then he closed the blinds and shut out every ray of light. There was nothing ostentatious in his manner. He went about his work as though he were about to perform the most common feat in chemistry. Danton watched him suspiciously at first, for the young man still had doubts now and then of the professor's sanity. But the man's methods were so thoroughly scientific in appearance, that skepticism seemed to be unjust to him.

"Come here," said the professor at length, and Danton groped through the darkness toward him.

"Look there." Out of the gloom a phosphorescent light seemed to come, and the outlines of the glass plate became plain. Danton leaned forward and on the plate was a small, dark speck.

"I see nothing remarkable," he exclaimed.

"Take this and place it above the black spot," said the Professor, handing him a microscope.

Danton did as he was directed, and was amazed to see clearly the title page of a book dated at Berlin in the following year. The letters and figures were perfectly distinct. After a moment the image faded rapidly and was soon swallowed up in the glare of the phosphorescent light.

"Have I proved myself entitled to your further consideration?" he asked, playfully.

"Yes, master; teach me your art," answered Danton, humbly.

CHAPTER II.

Some weeks later Maurice Danton found himself in New York—a stranger in the city of his birth. There was something in the bustle and hurry of the streets that annoyed him as he rolled up town. The marked contrast to the scholarly quiet of Heidelberg struck him painfully, and for a time he regretted his desertion of the place in which he had spent so many contented years. He had been urged homeward by a peculiar longing, a vague unrest that had increased in force after he had gained a clear insight into the Professor's method of advanced photography. Perhaps Danton had grown suddenly ambitious; perhaps the subtle magnetism of his birth-place affected him; perhaps the unsatisfied longings of mature manhood made him restless. At all events, he had returned to New York to live, and at first he found the change distinctly disagreeable.

His small income obliged him to take modest rooms in a crowded house on a cross-street, and his first night in the metropolis was rendered sleepless by strange and disturbing noises. He tossed about feverishly, wishing that the cats of America might yet become as phlegmatic as those of Germany. The intermittent roar of the elevated trains, the rumble of heavy carts, and the crying of a child in a neighboring room added to his discomfort.

After a few days he became somewhat hardened to the annoyances that had affected him at first so unpleasantly, and gradually the peculiar fascination of life in a great city appealed to his impressionable nature. He sat looking out of his front window late one afternoon, about a week after his return He had spent the preceding days in roaming about aimlessly, enjoying the unwonted sights that met his gaze. Now, as he leaned thoughtfully upon the window-ledge and watched the changing lights made by the setting sun, his strong face wore an expression of dreamy contentment.

"I think I shall like it here, after a time," he said to himself. "But I have work to do before I can enjoy myself. This city represents a great materialistic civilization. Honor is paid to wealth. Riches are power, and a poor man stands no chance in such a place as this. Thank heaven I have in my grasp a magician's wand that shall open to me the treasures of New York. To-morrow I shall begin the acquisition of a fortune. I wish I knew more about the details of speculation. My capital is small, but I run no risk with it."

He took a newspaper from the table beside him and scanned it carefully.

"Twenty-four hours is all I need, and the experiment is simple. Let me have a glance at the stock quotations one day ahead of other men, and no power on earth can prevent my attainment of wealth."

He arose and unlocked a drawer in his bureau. Before him lay a pile of green, crisp bank notes.

"I suppose," he reflected, "they thought I was crazy for withdrawing this."

There was $30,000 in the drawer, and he fingered them with awe. They represented a small part of that power for which he had craved. His little fortune had been well invested, and, from the standpoint of a man who knows nothing of chemical clairvoyance, Danton's acquisition of his capital was a reckless move. Paying investments are hard to find in these days.

The following morning he retired to a small ante-room, which he had crudely fitted up as a laboratory, and began his delicate task. Under the professor's guidance he had learned to perform the simpler feats of photography. As yet he could not produce anything from the remote future, but he was able to anticipate time by a few hours. His present intention was to gain a fleeting picture of a newspaper the day before it was issued from the press, and, with the foreknowledge thus gained, to put up his money on a margin with the certainty of large and immediate returns.

He had laid his plans carefully. He had obtained possession of his capital, and had paid a visit to Wall street to learn something of the modus operandi employed in the fleecing of lambs. He had even selected the broker to whom he would go when his prevision had given him a short cut to wealth.

He worked nervously all day, his face flushed and his gray eyes black with excitement. He required a certain drug, the preparation of which was a difficult feat. Twice he failed to obtain the correct chemical proportions, and the labor of hours was rendered vain in an instant. Late in the day, however, his efforts were crowned with success and he possessed the most important element of his experiment. Carefully locking the door of his laboratory, which was now filled with an almost unbearable odor, he came forth in the twilight haggard, worn, nervous, but inspired by a great hope that made his eyes gleam like sparks of fire in the darkness.

He had eaten nothing all day, and the thought of a ceremonious dinner was distasteful to him. Habits acquired in Germany were still strong upon him, and he went forth to a quiet beer saloon on Eighth avenue and found relief for his overwrought nerves in the sedative influence of malt liquor. Beer to a man who is exhausted from brain work is sometimes the most restful beverage in the world. Danton found it so in this case, and when he left the saloon he felt greatly refreshed. He strolled up the avenue, whose plebeian surroundings looked less sordid by gaslight, anxious to free his mind from exciting thoughts. After awhile he turned towards Broadway and finally stood in front of the Metropolitan Opera House. Crowds were pouring through the great entrance, handsome carriages rolled up and deposited their loads of gayly dressed women, while loud-mouthhd boys rushed about with librettos, much as though they were racing programmes bearing "the names of the horses, color of the riders and the weights they carry."

Danton, moved by a sudden impulse, joined the throng of music-lovers who do not own boxes, and was soon seated in the vast auditorium. The enlivening scene impressed him pleasantly, and the opera had begun before he had satisfied his curiosity regarding the occupants of the boxes near at hand. It was his first glimpse of New York society on parade, and he was struck by the number of handsome women in the house. He had visited the leading capitals of Europe, and felt a patriotic pride in the discovery that the "materialistic civilization" of the new world has been able to produce a very attractive form of patrician elegance.

Danton was not an enthusiast over Wagner's operas, but the weird music and impressive story of the "Rheingold" affected him strangely that night. It seemed to him that the moral of the old legend possessed a new significance in the light of his present purpose. Would he find the gold he sought a curse? Would he meet destruction in his search for the power lurking in the yellow nugget? For a time he felt inclined to abandon what seemed to him at the moment an unhallowed design. Then he looked about him upon the outward signs of wealth and his ambition returned.

In a box above him there appeared, at the end of the first act, a woman whose peculiar beauty made a marked impression upon Danton. He found himself watching her with more perseverance than good taste. She was not more than 20 years of age. Her auburn hair, clear-cut feature, brilliant eyes and white neck and arms formed a dazzling picture of youth and loveliness. There was in her face the repose of culture, and, perhaps, the ennui of wordly wisdom. To Danton's eyes she seemed to embody the very essence of the scene before him. She was the final triumph of the evening, the reward that should come to him who found the gold nugget.

The young man sat where he could watch her without appearing rude. As time passed by he saw that she was bored. "Why does she come here if she is not fond of Wagner?" he thought; but if he had gazed at other faces as searchingly as he did at hers, he would have discovered that this question was of very general application. In her case he feared that he had found an answer when a man entered her box and engaged her in a whispered conversation. He would have been unreasonably jealous had he not observed that the expression of ennui did not leave her face.

Small Coin.

When the civil war broke out coins of all denominations went the well-known way of the pin, and seemed completely swallowed up. Unfortunately they could not be so easily replaced as the less valuable articles. Tokens of various kinds were made first of cardboard, then of metal. A small coin about the size of the present one-cent piece was produced, having upon it various devices, such as "Not one cent," "Good enough for defense," "Our country forever." From six hundred to a thousand varieties of these tokens were made and issued. As they were taken to represent a cent by everybody, those who had copper enough on hand, and could make or procure molds or dies, realized a good profit from the making of these tokens. The size and weight were convenient, and the United States Government saw that the people were better pleased with the smaller piece, though comparatively valueless, than with the one-half ounce coin. As the object was to keep the subsidiary coins in the country, and as the people were content to use the smaller pieces, the experiment was tried in the issue of the "turkey buzzard" mixed nickel cent. They were larger, thicker, and heavier than the present cent, and did not please as well as the tokens had pleased. After trying two or three issues of the nickel coin, some with the flying eagle and others with the Indian's head, the United States Government decided upon the present style of coin.

IT does seem a little strange that Uncle Sam cannot get along without buying the filthy, infected rags from Asiatic and European paupers to make paper. They at all times are liable to infection, but at this time the knowledge that they are loaded with disease and death makes every bale that is landed at our ports a crime against the people.

SENTIMENTAL lovers who had the word "Mizpah" engraved in their engagement rings will be shocked to learn that the literal meaning of Mizpah is: "The Lord keep you from flirting or mean tricks when I am not near to watch you." It is a symbol of suspicion instead of trust.

A Costly Manuscript.

A papyrus manuscript found in the den of an old hermit in a cave near Jerusalem in the year 1880, and which experts have all along believed to have been the handiwork of St. Peter, "the friend of Christ," was submitted to a committee of the Biblical Society of London in 1890. They have arrived at the conclusion that the work is in reality exactly what it porports to be—the latest literary work of the great apostle. It has not been ascertained exactly who has charge of the relic, but it is said that a "society of British literary voluptuaries" has offered $100,000 for the document.

The Poultry Raisers' Rule of Ten.

Ten hens in a house that is ten feet square, with yards ten times the size of the house, is a rule to follow. Ten hens with one male is the correct mating, and ten eggs under a setting hen in winter, are enough. Ten weeks is long enough to keep a broiler before it goes to market, and a pair of ducks or fowls should weigh not over ten pounds. Ten cents per pound is the average price for fowls in market, and 10 cents should feed a hen one month.

An Expensive Charge.

CORRESPONDENCE.

CORUNNA,

(LAST WEEK)

Mrs. W. J. Drury has gone home to visit her parents in Jonesville, Mich.

Ice, ice, plenty of it and plenty of it and everybody can go skating whether they will or no.

Mrs. Sulivan west of town who has been sick for some time is yet very low at this writing.

We understand that the radical wing of the U. B. church will build a church here in the spring.

Mrs. Myra Campbell has returned to Ann Arbor for treatment. Her friends all wish her a speedy recovery.

Mrs. J. B. Bower north of here was stricken with paralysis a short time ago. She is little better at this writing.

Mr. Dubois and family will move on a farm northwest of here in the near future. We are sorry to lose them from our midst.

T. P. French of Hamilton, formerly of this place, paid their friends here a visit a short time ago, We are glad to see them. Come again.

The S. S. institute held here a short time ago was a grand success. They are very beneficial in bringing all churches together as they should be.

Some of our young folks expect to pay Auburn a visit in the near future on account of misbehavior in church. This sounds bad. It never pays to be irreverent in the house of God.

Grandma Green who lives south of here with her son, Levi Hewett, fell and broke her arm one day last week. This is very unfortunate for one of her age, as it will no doubt take a long time to heal.

W H. Trumbull's have returned from their visit to Toledo and several places in Michigan, where they have spent the last two weeks visiting his father, and other relatives. They report a pleasant time.

The ladies benevolent society meet every Wednesday afternoon at the mems bers houses and the aid society meets every Thursday at their homes. All not attending, should attend one or the other, and assist in this good work.

Mrs. Dillman, a good woman of this was quietly married last Sunday to a Mr. Thomas southeast of here. May peace and prosperity attend them. As this is her fifth husband, she evidently thinks marriage is not a failure.

The M. E meetings closed with several accessions. Not as many as there should have been, as they have in Mr. Graham, an able man; and he labored earnestly and well. But sin seems very enticing and many are determined to travel in the broad road.

Our town is quite lively in spite of the ice and cold and our creamery has started up again. Another reason for the stir is that people know that this is a first-class place to do their trading and always avail themselves of the opportunity.

Elder J. O. Rose, of Angola, will commence a protracted meeting at the Church of Christ in Corunna tomorrow night, Feb. 14, and continue three or four weeks. Will not Disciples living near by attend? Come, everybody, bring your friends and neighbors and enjoy these meetings. A welcome for all. Half-hour social meeting each evening before preaching.

B. & O. Excursion.

From February 28th to March 3d the B. & O. railroad will sell excursion tickets to Washington, D. C, at a rate of one fare for the round trip, on account of the Inauguration of President-Elect Cleveland to be held March 4, 1893. Tickets will be good for return passage to and including March 8th.

REMARKABLE CURES OF AUBURN AND VICINITY.

For the past four years the afflicted have been flocking in great numbers to see him, and they always return filled with the greatest enthusiasm, and the stories they tell of his remarkable diagnose and wonderful cures border on that of the miraculous. One says, "I went there on crutches and came away without them." Others say they had been sick and suffered for years, and they were cured. To see him and to be treated by him means health.

He asks no questions but gives a full history of each case as soon as he sees the patient, telling better how a person feels than they can tell it themselves. His knowledge seems perfect and his medicines are specific. They never fail. The work he accomplishes is truly astonishing.

There is no need to live in constant misery. It cost nothing to see him. The fullest examinations are free. A cure can be had for the mere cost of the medicine, He is the sick man's friend and no one is turned away unaided.

One of Auburn's most respected citizens Mr. M. N. Ward of Auburn, on the corner of Second and Jackson street, says: "I came to see Doctor Townsand four weeks ago I could hardly walk to the doctor's room without help. I have had heart disease and weak lungs and catrrah in my head for 20 years and was given up by the best physicans. I had rheumatism so my joints was so stiff I could not walk and my head hurt me so I could not rest or sleep. I was nearly deaf in right ear, but now can hear as well as I ever could. My neighbors all know how I have suffered. I can hear the clock tick in both ears. I thank God I feel well. Doctor Townsend has cured me. I have not been able to work for over one year, doctoring and taking patent medicines. I feel I am able to do two men's work now, have gained in flesh. I advise all to call on Doctor Townsend and be cured. I am willing to see any one and tell how bad I was, and let them see how well I am now,

Another respected lady of Auburn, Mrs. Rebecca Dickinson who has had a complication of diseases stomach, kidney, heart and lung disease and neuralgia pains all over, her limbs swollen so she could not step on them. She now feels nearly well, her pains have left her and her heart is well and she feels better every way.

Mr. Ward says his eye sight was so bad he could hardly see. He now feels that he could dispense with his glasses. The Doctor performed over twenty cures on his last visit. He will forfeit $5 00 for any case of catarrh he cannot cure. An eye witness to a lady who was helped to the doctor's room four weeks ago, is now doing her own work.

OFFICIAL PAPER OF DeKALB COUNTY.

JAMES A. BARNS, Editor.

Registered at the Auburn, Indiana, postoffice as second-class matter.

THURSDAY.....FEBRUARY 16, 1893.

THE Ohio has risen 45 feet at Cincinnati, and there is danger of great damage by floods.

DEMOCRATS now have 43 straight members in the U. S. senate, and with the 5 populists, will control that body on most questions.

VIRGINIA is claiming a strip of Tennessee eight miles wide, and a big suit is likely to come up in the supreme court of the United State to settle it.

ALLEN, the new demo-populist senator from Nebraska, says he will vote with the democrats in organizing the senate, and fully agrees with Cleveland on the tariff, but is for free silver.

JUDGE GRESHAM will be Cleveland's secretary of state. Though always a republican he has usually accepted most the democratic doctrines and he supported Cleveland last fall. He will be an excellent officer, though many would prefer a straightout democrat. Carlisle will be secretary of the treasury, Daniel Lamont, of war, and W. S. Bissel postmaster-general. Others will soon be chosen.

THE TIPTON TIMES comes to our table this week looking the very picture of health and happiness. And why shouldn't it? It is now printed on a new Monarch Cottrell press and folded and cut by a Bennett folder. Besides it is neat and in every way tasty, as well as abley edited. The good people of that little city will not lack for a live newspaper as long as J. O. Behmyer is above ground.

JOHN F. COLBURN, has written the president a letter from Honolulu, Sandwich Islands, in which he exposes the tricks of the party that deposed the queen. He makes a poor showing for our minister resident there also. This minister, Stevens, has since taken it on himself to put the Islands under the protection of the United States, a thing he had no authority to do. We may find it proper to annex these Islands, but we should not do so till we find out what their people want. If they want to be annexed all right. But if they object, they should be let alone, for it may turn out that the revolution, was merely a scheme of unprincipled men who want to get into power.

Favor an Income Tax

During the several weeks we were publishing Judge McClellan's speech on the Income Tax Bill, our attention was called to the remarks made by several of our exchanges, all which as far as came under our notice, were favorable to such a tax. We do not remember one article against the plan. We copy here a few of them:

The Ligonier Banner, Dec. 1, says:

The proposition to replenish the depleted federal treasury by means of a graduated income tax meets with general favor, except in Wall street.

In the Kendallville News of Dec. 8, the editor says:

The coming democratic Congress may pass a direct income tax law for the purpose of raising revenue to meet the enormous expenses of the government.

Lagrange Democrat of Dec. 9:

An income tax at the hands of the next congress will meet with popular favor at the hands of the great mass of all parties It has been advocated by the leaders of all parties who have the intelligence to discern the necessity of the present and the future.

Raising revenue by an income tax is becoming popular. Many people are advocating it. The $5,000 limit is too great. It should begin at $3,000. A man who has an income of $3,000 per year can afford to pay a small per cent., of it for the support of the government.

The Official Vote.

Congress, last Wednesday, Feb. 8 formally announced the electoral vote, as determined by the late election, and announced the result. We give it in full and advise our people to cut it out and keep it for reference. The report of the proceedings reads:

At 1 o'clock the senate, headed by Vice-President Morton and accompanied by some of its principal officers, proceeded to the hall of the house of representatives and there took part in the ceremony of counting the votes for presidential electors. Afterward the railroad automatic car coupler bill was taken up and was debated up to the hour of adjournment without any definite action being taken.

At 12.55 Vice-President Morton announced that the time had arrived for the execution of the order of the senate The senators then fell into line, preceded by the vice-president and secretary and attended by other officers, including Capt, Bassett, the veteran doorkeeper, who carried the boxes containing the certificates of presidential electors, moved toward the hall of the house of representatives. The senate returned to its chamber at 2 10, and the vice-president made a statement of the vote of the president and vice-president of United States, and said that announcement of the senate was, by a law sufficient declaration that Grover Cleveland of the state of New York was elected president of the United States and that Adlai E Stevenson of the state of Illinois was elected vice-president of the United States, each for the term beginning March 4, 1893, and that the fact would be entered, together with a list of the votes, on the journal of the senate. The formal announcement of the result by states spread upon the journal was as follows:

Obituary.

Jane McKegg was born in Washington county, Pa., February 24, 1821, and died at her home in Richland township, DeKalb county, Indiana, February 8, 1893, aged 71 years, 11 months and 14 days.

At the age of 12 years she came with her parents to Holmes county, Ohio. Fifteen years later she moved with her husband to DeKalb county Indiana, where she remained until her death. She was married August 25, 1846 to James Barton in Homes county Ohio. To them have been born four daughters and three sons. Two daughters and one son have preceded her to the spirit world, the rest are left with the bereaved husband to mourn the loss of one they so much loved. Mother Barton was received into the German Baptist church with her husband by baptism May the 3, 1863, Eld. Jeremiah Gump the officiating minister. Since that time she has been an active and worthy member of the church of her choice. And in her death the community have lost a worthy and an esteemed citizen, the children a kind affectionate christian mother and the husband a true loving companion, who was always ready and willing to share life's burdens with him, but we trust our loss is her eternal gain. Although she be dead yet she speaketh. Funeral services at the Cedar Lake church conducted by Eld. Jeremiah Gump from 1st Samuel 20 18. Thou shalt be missed because thy seat will be empty. The remains were laid at rest in the Union cemetery.

Growth and Prosperity.

The wonderful growth of Galveston, and especially that portion known as North Galveston, during the past few years, has been due not only to local improvements and the natural results of rapid settlement and capital liberally invested, but also to the rapid growth of manufacturing industries which here find an unusually profitable field. Thus we find a combination of conditions for continual growth that is unsurpassed in any other portion of the country, namely a genial and healthful climate, an industrial growth, capable of supporting a large population, and agricultural attractions that cannot be excelled. The opportunities are just as good at the present time for making money, either in city property or small fruit farms.

The latter class of farming always results in large profits to those who have been fortunate enough to invest.

The property of the North Galveston Association cannot be otherwise regarded than as offering splendid inducements alike to home seekers and investors. The fullest investigation of this property is cordially invited. The Association is represented by Rickel & Sprott, who who will be happy to furnish all information desired. The address of the General Office is: The North Galveston Ass'n, Box 963, Minneapolis, Minn. 5

Dangers of the Season.

The sudden changes in weather in the latter part of the winter and early spring are a source of colds and coughs. This season is a particularly dangerous one for persons with weak lungs or of delicate constitution. A slight cold is likely to become a serious one; and the cough that follows is the one great cause of the many deaths from consumption in the early spring. Never neglect a cold or cough. Keep a reliable remedy on hand and check the first cough, that may lead to consumption, As such a remedy the medicine called Kemp's Balsam is strongly recommended. For every form of throat and lung disorder, including la grippe cough, croup and consumption in its first stages, it probably has no equal anywhere. Get a bottle to-day.

The Legislature.

Partial reports of the work going on will be found on our inside pages, but we purpose mentioning briefly some additional points. Among the bills favorably reported, is the one in regard to weighing wheat: one to enable county commissioners to appoint a township engineer; one in regard to weighing coal: one to compel railway companies to let employes who have worked 24 hours, rest 8 hours; and one raising the penalty for carrying concealed weapons, to $500; to appropriate $15,000 to pay pay home guards, for service in the war; changing township elections from spring till fall, so as to have but one election for all; one to allow 500 petitioners to change location of a county seat, provided they furnish one acre of ground, where court house has not cost over $126,000; a law to permit county commissioners to tax people to build bridges when they are pecuniarily benefited; one prohibiting under penalty of a heavy fine, selling tobacco to persons under 16 Then there several amendments proposed to the constitution, among them are those making county and state offices all four years each; allowing 100 days for a session of the legislature, and only 40 days for an extra session; and one to enable the state to tax the gross earnings of corporations. Of course most of these bills will not be passed, and some of them should not be. Then there is a bill to permit the county superintendent to omit the monthly examinations of teachers, in those months when there is little need of it, but may hold extra examinations at other times when it is necessary in order to get teachers for all the schools. Another law is to provide a better way to vacate lots that have once been platted.

WANTED, FOR THE UNITED STATES ARMY, able-bodied unmarried men between the ages of 21 and 30 years. Good pay, rations, clothing, and medical attendance. Applicants must be prepared to furnish satisfactory evidence as to age, character and habits. Apply at 4th floor, Bass Block, Calhoun street, Ft. Wayne, Ind.

Physicians Outdone.

My wife has been suffering with female trouble of the severest kind for over three years. I have paid twenty-five dollars during the last three months, and she had no relief. She had doctored continually with the best of physicians. I bought three bottles each of Dullam's Great German Female Uterine Tonic and Dullam's Great German blood, liver, stomach and kidney cure, and can say to day that she is entirely cured.

Davenport the druggist.

It does the work. Mr. Chas. Gocha, Gaylord, Michigan, says; "I am asked, 'Did Brant's Balsam do you any good?' Well, I should say it did! LaGrippe left me with a serious cough and lung trouble, for which I took about al the cough remedies I had ever heard of, without benefit. Mr Russell, our druggist, suggested Brant's Balsam. As it was a large bottle for 25c I took one. It helped me: I used six bottles and was cured completely. (Cost $1.50) Can heartily recommend it; it's a great medicine." 25 and 50c bottles at F. E. Doc. Baird got his right hand and arm severely hurt a week ago Saturday, while at work at Bachtel's mill. It got caught in a line shaft and the flesh torn up along the arm and on the hand making a painful injury. Dr. Swarts dressed it and it is getting along as well, and healing as rapidly as such a wound can.

As will be seen by our marriages, Joseph R Lanning took charge of the clerk's office Nov. 6, 1867. There are many items of interest about these pioneer articles, and we would feel pleased to have our subscribers show them to their neighbors of the early settlers, as in that way we may learn other facts not otherwise known.

Mr. C. F. Davis, editor of the Bloomfield, Iowa Farmer, says: I can recommend Chamberlain's Cough remedy to all sufferers with colds and croup. I have used it in my family for the past two years and have found it the best I ever used for the purposes for which it is intended. 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord.

Hon. W. H. Madden of Butler, was in Monday and made his usual call on the Courier. The Doctor is as jovial as ever, and seems to enjoy life as well as he did when we first knew him, many years ago. He is one of the old original subscribers, having taken the Courier from the start, and always took an Auburn paper from the earliest days.

Mrs. Mollie Mitchell, wife of Albert Mitchell of Pleasant Lake, died suddenly after a brief illness on Saturday, Feb. 11, and was buried Tuesday. She will be better remembered by the people in the north part of the county, and especially about Waterloo as Miss Mollie Peachy, for some years a teacher. She was a most estimable lady, and her early death is a sad one.

During the recent slippery weather, we have been surprised at the absence of the old quotation about the wicked who stand on slippery places. Still, there were a number who had the hardihood to advise, "Look well to your footsteps." Probably there would have been none of these dare-devil remarks, but for the fact that everyone had all he could do to take care of himself.

Miss Addie Fields, vice-president of the Indiana W. C. T. U. will hold meeting in the Presbyterian church next Saturday and Sunday. About the worst, cold, disagreeable storm of the season, came on us last Wednesday night, lasting into the next night, when it turned into rain and sleet. Then it came on cold, and Saturday morning the mercury was 5 to 8 below zero. Sunday came on a warm rain all that night and next day. It made us several days of slippery walks that in places were dangerous.

C. H. Jackson, wife and son Howard, and H. K. Scott and wife of Angola, had a pleasant sleighride Sunday, coming down here, where they called on the old friends and neighbors. A hale old man, Jas. Wilson of Allens Springs, Ill., who is over 60 years of age, says: I have in my time tried a great many medicines, some of excellent quality; but never before did I find any that would so completely do all that is claimed for it as Chamberlain's colic, cholera and diarrhea remedy. It is truly a wonderful medicine. For sale by Robbins & McCord.

Mr. Albert Favorite, of Arkansas City, Kan., wishes to give our readers the benefit of his experience with colds, He says: "I contracted a cold early last spring that settled on my lungs, and had hardly recovered from it when I caught another that hung on all summer and left me with a hacking cough which I thought I would never get rid of. I had used Chamberlain's Cough remedy some fourteen years ago with much success, and concluded to try it again. When I had got through with one bottle my cough had left me, and I have not suffered with a cough or cold since. I have recommended it to others, and all speak well of it. 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord.

The Old Folks' Hop was well attended Tuesday evening in spite of the unpleasant weather. Borst's orchestra made splendid music, and a fine supper was furnished by the Glazier Hotel. It was one of the most pleasant they ever had. The "commissary" in care of Geo. Lanning, and presided over by Master Walter Penfield, should not be omitted in these compliments. It was a success.

No pains have been spared to make it a success in everything. Let us help the "boys." Tickets for this ball are $1.00.

Westward Ho!

Last Thursday in a driving snow storm, three teams passed through town going in the direction of the rising sun. They were "movers" and were evidently bound to see the country, and to get to their new destination with as little expense as possible. Two of the rigs were enclosed fully and had a stove, the pipe sticking out at the top and smoking gaily. It was, no doubt, quite comfortable inside these moving residences. The third team, had a light rig, with some hay and feed, and each was on runners, having the wheels belonging to the rig, lashed underneath the wagon bed or house part. They went right on looking neither to the right nor left, and were soon out of sight up the road extending from West Seventh street. It looked like a pretty hard way to travel, in these days of fine railway coaches and limited express trains.

ENGLAND'S diplomatic bluffer, Ambassador Cremer, seems in "calling down" the Khedive of Egypt to have detached a little more than he or his country is able to masticate with that grace which should characterize "the Queen's taste." Abbas, the son, is made of sterner stuff than was Tewfik, the father, and his sinuous Oriental vertebræ are receiving some wholesome Occidental bracing from some very ram-roddy gentlemen in the diplomatic service of both France and Russia.

THE Almanach de Gotha of 1893 mentions only four American ladies as having married Englishmen of ducal families. These are the Duchess of Manchester, nee Miss Yznaga; the Duchess of Marlborough, nee Mrs. Hamersley; Lady Randolph Churchill, nee Miss Jerome, married to the uncle of the present Duke of Marlborough; and Mrs. Cavendish Bentinck, nee Miss Bessie Livingston, married to Mr. Cavendish Bentinck, cousin of the Duke of Portland. There are many American ladies mentioned as having married members of the nobility of France, Germany and Italy.

THE public of the country is to be congratulated because of the fact that one of the most detestable of practical jokers has met with well-merited punishment at the hands of his victims. It will be remembered how the newspapers some weeks ago published an account of a terrible riot in Bakersville, N. C., and how the affair on investigation proved one of the boldest "fakes" ever known. J. H. Hyams was the originator of the report. In a recent fight with Capt. H. F. Perry, one of those reported dead, Hyams was badly whippd and will be the possessor of a sore head for many days.

THE manufacture of war clouds is again an active industry in Europe. France, according to some of the German statesmen, is soon to see the republic overturned and a dictatorship established, an early result of which change is to be a declaration of war on Germany. The Egyptian question, in its new phase, according to many diplomates, is going to lead to trouble between France and England, while Russia is beginning to prepare for either an attack on India or a march on Constantinople. Of course these war stories come as a godsend to William II. and Premier Caprivi. They make dozens of votes for William's army bill in the Reichstag.

THE typewriters' trust, the seductive combination of winning beauties who daily pound the keys and adjust the bands of the half-million type-writing machines down-town, has resulted in the creation of a body hostile to it. The wives and mothers-in-law of business men are forming in a solid corporation to watch the pretty manipulators of the clicking keys. Between these two unions, each of which has eagle eyes upon him, the average business man is liable to be a little worried. Fancy a visiting committee of mothers-in-law and red-headed wives colliding in his office with the inspectors of the type-writers' trust! He would be crushed between the two!

A CORRESPONDENT of the Chicago Herald, signing herself "Saleslady," takes up the cudgels for her class in a vigorous and well-written communication. She says in effect that it is no one's business save their own if female employes in stores choose to work for $20, $10 or $3 a week; that their lot is better than that of domestics, because they have some time each day to call their own. She alleges further that the girl at the counter is more frequently ill-used by the ladies whom she waits on than by her employer, and she finishes with the following declaration: "People look upon clerks as an untutored set, but the greater number of clerks are well educated, and among their number are more refined and intelligent girls than in the 'cream of society.'" All of which shows that the American woman, whether found behind a counter, in a kitchen or in a parlor, is a plucky and independent being, and that whoever treads on her toes will hear the American eagle scream.

PERHAPS the most profitable business in this country is that done by the Government mints in the coinage of silver and minor coins. During the past fourteen years the Government has coined 416,412,833 silver dollars. The quantity of silver contained in each cost from 65 to 90 cents during the period, and was in effect sold for 100 cents. On subsidiary silver coinage there is also a handsome profit. The total gain to the Treasury from both sources from 1878 to 1892 amounts to $72,736,065.75. On the coinage of 1-cent and 5-cent pieces the rate of profit is even greater. A pound of bronze, which costs less than 20 cents, is worth $1.46 when made into 1-cent pieces. A pound of nickel, costing less than 32 cents, is coined into a value of $4.53 in 5-cent nickels. For the fiscal year 1891 and 1892 there were coined of the former $1,128,295.30 at a profit of $974,197.95, and of the latter $1,536,217.65, at a profit of $1,428,021.58. During the past year, although the profits of the mints were greatly reduced owing to the reduction in the coinage of silver dollars under the law of 1890, they aggregated $2,294,288.20, which gave a net gain over all expenses of the mints and assay offices of $793,794.17.

Swimming in Salt Lake.

When I waded out so far that the water came up to my neck I scaled a bowlder and dived. As it is my custom to open my eyes under water, I did so as soon as I was fairly immersed. In an instant it seemed as if vitriol had been poured into them. Springing to an upright position as soon as possible, I tried to get the salt out of them, but the more I rubbed the more it seemed to get in. Nature relieved the smarts after awhile by pouring through the tear ducts enough of milder solution of salt to clear the irritated cornea of the fluid, and I took pains not to let the water into my eyes again. After that the bath was more enjoyable, if only as a new experience, says a writer in Goldthwaite's Geographical Magazine.

There was a singular and unaccustomed sense of lightness, and it was not difficult to float high out of water either in a reclining or sitting posture; yet a bather who is not a swimmer will fare as badly here as anywhere, for the head, being heavier than the lower extremities, has a tendency to sink, unless one has the skill to keep it above the surface. To float requires less exertion than in the sea, a slight motion of the hand being sufficient to keep the body balanced evenly, for one depends less for his buoyancy on breathing than in ocean water. On striking out to swim I was surprised at a splashing noise behind me, and discovered that it was made by my own feet, for I was so high out of water that they went into the air at every stroke. This lightness at one end of the body tends, as I have said, to depress the other, but to one who is used to swimming this is a trifle.

On emerging from the lake I found that every inch of my skin was sparkling with salt crystals, and though I rubbed and scrubbed they were not so easily to be got rid of. These crystals were sharp enough to create discomfort and to suggest an undue intimacy with thistles. My hair was full of them, and they even adhered to my clothing, so that a vigorous shaking of raiment and a fresh-water bath were in order on reaching my hotel. When I told the people in town of my swim and the manner of it, I was laughed at, and informed that it was not the correct thing to swim, except at a bathing pavilion, where one has fresh water to shower away the salt that sticks to him.

A Road and River Cycle.

The combined tricycle and boats shown in the figure is an American invention for road and river travel, described in Cassell's Magazine. Twin boats are fastened to a tricycle having wheels fitted with paddles, and when in the water they can be guided by the steering wheel, which is made as a circular disc. The boats can be disconnected from the tricycle at will, and serve to hold luggage, fishing tackle, and other paraphernalia.

HOW THE FAIR GROWS.

EVERY DAY ADDS TO ITS SCOPE AND INTEREST.

Compared with This, All Previous International Exhibitions Will Seem but Puny, Including the Recent One in Paris—Scenes in Jackson Park.

The "White City."

Chicago correspondence:

"All Roads Lead to the World's Fair" is the striking headline in a Chicago newspaper, and while the statement may appear rather sweeping at first, the careful observer will admit, upon reflection, that it is not such an exaggeration as it may seem, for it is certain that there never was an international exposition in which such widespread interest was manifested.

This winter has been a severe one at the grounds of the World's Columbian Exposition, and the intense cold has at times seriously impeded the progress of the work. However, everything is being provided with all possible haste, and to those who haven't visited Jackson Park since the winter of '91 the present scene of bustle and activity will be found to differ strangely from the panorama to be witnessed at that time.

The Fair was younger then. There were then $12,000,000 still to be expended. Contractors smiled and workmen saw before them a long season of rewarded labor. Then the great floors were laid or laying, with here and there a joist standing in the wind. To-day the snowclad domes sit as silent about the island as sat the Indians at council on these prairies a century ago.

For six months the contours of the thirteen large houses have been visible. But only lately has the hamlet of villas for the States come upon the scene. How do they look? Like any residence part of a smart town, saving the awe you may feel in hearing that New York is to live here instead of John Doe. If we were to enter this village in the north end of Jackson Park not knowing it to be "the United States," we would say the art palace in the center must be the Court House, and we would say New York must be the banker of the town, Massachusetts the leading merchant and California the Chairman of the Board of Trustees.

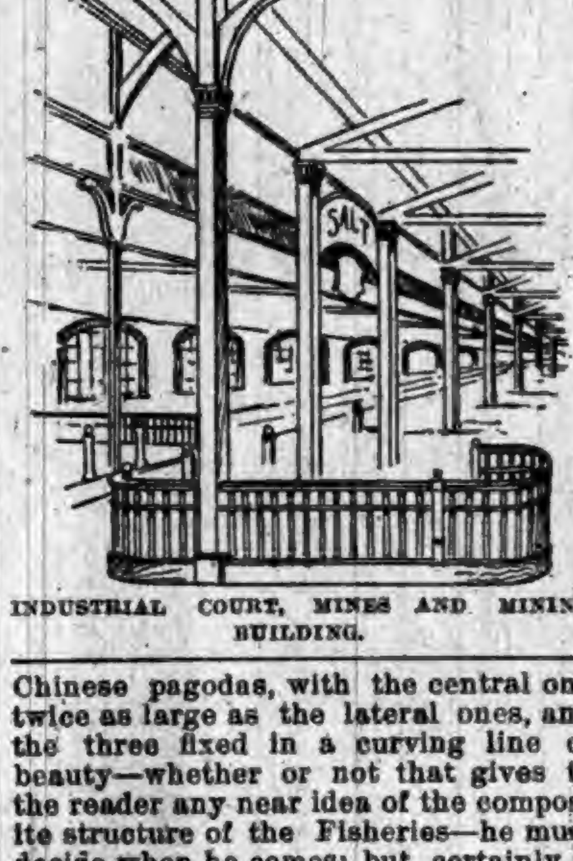
It is very pleasant and proper to stop at every doorstep and ask who lives there—Wisconsin or Indiana? And the workmen seem as glad to tell us. Now, in what other town would it be dignified to do a thing like that? The houses of the States are of all forms and colors, but none are more than stopping places—meeting places for friends. California, New York and Massachusetts, as has been intimated, have the best sites and make a good appearance.

We have not included Illinois in these remarks because the Illinois building must be reckoned as one of the main buildings of the great Fair, and not the least commanding. Six of the halls have domes—the Administration, the Agricultural, the Horticultural, the Government, the Art and the Illinois. The Art Palace is praised highly, because it is an Ionic temple, with a dome on it, and it looks uncommonly well from the south; but the Fisheries, into whose tanks the water was recently let, has won everybody's praise for its originality and fitness.

Whether we should liken it to three



INDUSTRIAL COURT, MINES AND MINING BUILDING.

Chinese pagodas, with the central one twice as large as the lateral ones, and the three fixed in a curving line of beauty—whether or not that gives to the reader any near idea of the composite structure of the Fisheries—he must decide when he comes; but certainly a pagoda is not so graceful in its lines and ornaments as is each of the Fishery pavilions.

Midway Plaisance is a very wide lane, now stockaded, which leads from Washington Park to the Fair grounds. This Midway plaisance is to be filled with all the allurements of this wicked world. Woe to the spiritual young man who shall take his sweetheart on his arm and, starting at Washington Park for the fair, shall attempt to go on past the Dahomey, the Indian, Chinese, Moorish, Turkish villages, the great street in Cairo, the captive balloon, the cyclorama of the Alps and the volcano of Hawaii, the Roman house, the Dutch settlement, the Japanese bazaar, the menagerie, all the glass blowers, and the dome of St. Peter's Cathedral! Indeed, had he not better mount the sliding railway and shoot past this whole mile of costly, incomparable temptation?

A source of great wonderment to persons visiting the World's Fair grounds during this cold weather is the elaborate heating apparatus employed to maintain a uniform temperature of 60 degrees in the mammoth Horticultural Building. The transition from cold and snow and icicles to genial warmth and tropical plants and exotics never fails to give rise to a novel sensation on the part of the visitor. The steam for preserving the lives of the valuable plants in the Horticultural Building is furnished by three boilers of 150 horse-power each, which consume twenty tons of coal per day, and are in charge of six firemen and three engineers, divided into three shifts of eight hours each. The pressure maintained is uniformly fifty pounds to the square inch. There is an elaborate arrangement of engines and fans, by means of which the heat is distributed throughout every portion of the building night and day.

Machinery Hall, the slowest of the main structures, has lately donned its exterior finish and becomes a vast and striking spectacle. But for the nearness of the colossal Manufactures Building, Machinery Hall would pass for a marvel among capacious buildings. It has three parallel rows of steel arches, and this, with its towers and portals, presents perhaps a more complex interior than any other of the great halls, for they usually have but one room—there is but one room in the Mines, the Transportation, the Electricity, the Manufactures and the Government.

The Agricultural has a most agreeable interior, broken with a cross-like upper hall of skylights. We may fancy the joy with which our farmers, shutting away the sights of the north—the music, soda water, swans, gondolas and jinrikshas of city life—will plunge into the joys of fat vegetables, heroic grains and sleek beasts that will await all comers south of the Agricultural. Spread over this floor, nearly 800 feet wealth. The stock pavilions are pretty and far away. The city will praise them vociferously—at a distance. The farmer will praise the art gallery at the same range.

A farmer visited Chicago last week. He was taken past all of the 128 structures that go to make the Exposition. He was led to the Masonic Temple and told that 72,000 persons rode in the ele-square, or 640,000 square feet, and southward outside for half a mile will be such an agricultural fair as the world has never before seen, for the world has never before asked the Mississippi Valley to make a presentation of its native vators October 20, 1892. He was shown where, fifteen stories up the botanist fell out of the elevator. The farmer was lifted the full twenty-one stories, until Ossa became like a wart. He then viewed the glory of Chicago—but he said never a word. As he mounted the train to return home he was asked, "Did you see anything wonderful in Chicago?" and then he admitted that one thing had startled him, and what, readers, was it? The size of a pumpkin he had passed in front of a restaurant on Madison street! Certainly we may believe it was a Masonic temple among pumpkins!

These agriculturists, "the great plain people of the West," will all hurry to see Chief Buchanan and Chief Cottrell, of the Live Stock. The space allotted them is ample, and hundreds of thousands of spectators can there pass the day without being even seen north of the great screen which runs from Machinery Hall east to the Agricultural, screening Venice from the mud lagoons.

It will be the largest fair of history. Compared with it the Paris Exposition of 1889 could not be put in midway plaisance. The large building at Philadelphia was as long as our big one, but only half as wide, and out of our 128 structures two others are to be measured only by the acre, machinery hall alone having 780,000 square feet of lower floor.

From the forestry to the Eskimos is one mile and three-fifths; from the forestry to the Dahomey village is two miles and a fifth—these figures by the map. The island itself is two-fifths of a mile long. Suppose you have only a day and tarry ten minutes to see this phonograph or this Jacquard loom, you will see comparatively nothing.

INDIANA LEGISLATURE.

THE bill to stop the printing of sample ballots in newspapers again came up for consideration in the House, Monday, and was passed by a vote of 78 to 3. The two members who voted against the bill were Messrs. Ader and Rodabaugh. The Barnes bill to abolish horse racing in Indiana during the winter months was passed by a vote of 73 to 1.

In the Senate two legislative apportionment bills were introduced, one by Senator Fulk, Democrat, and one by Senator Wishard, Republican, the latter of which will be supported by the Republicans. Senator Fulk's bill will not receive support from any quarter, as the official Democratic bill, now in course of construction by a caucus committee, is a very different bill. Senator Fulk's bill changes the old apportionment in the following places: The Senatorial districting is changed in the case of Brown County, which would be taken out of the district now composed of Brown, Morgan, and Johnson. Representative districts Lawrence and Orange are placed together; Jay and Adams are given one representative each, and Wells and Blackford are given a joint representative.

TUESDAY, the Deery bill to abolish the prison contract labor was defeated by a vote of 44 to 34.

The following bills passed: Requiring railroads to give employes eight hours' rest after twenty-four hours' work; to prevent township trustees from hiring teachers for terms to begin after the expiration of the trustees term of office; fixing the interest to be charged on school funds at 6 per cent.; to prevent the adulteration of sorghum molasses; authorizing township trustees to purchase not to exceed five acres for cemetery purposes; to describe promissory notes taxed as "notes owing" instead of "notes due."

Mr. Hench's bill to fill a long-felt want in criminal practice was passed. When the Supreme Court reverses a decision in a criminal case the prisoner is returned to the county jail. Then, if a rehearing is ordered, and the Supreme Court reverses itself and affirms the lower court, there is no provision for getting that prisoner back to the penitentiary. Mr. Hench's bill is to correct this defect.

The Senate wrangled for some time over the report of the Committee on Elections on Senator Kopelke's bill, which proposes to reject the section of the election law which provides for the printing of sample ballots in not less than two newspapers in each county. The committee's majority report proposed a substitute for the Kopelke bill, which fixed the printer's fees at 50 cents per square for the first publication and 25 cents for each succeeding publication, being just half the rate now provided by law. The minority report favored the passage of the bill, and it was on the motion to substitute the minority report that the Senate tangled up in a debate that lasted the greater part of the day. The majority report was adopted.

BOTH houses, Wednesday, advanced a score of bills to engrossment, and passed a number of minor measures. The pharmacy bill, which requires the employment of a registered pharmacist in every drug store in compounding prescriptions, failed in the Senate for want of a constitutional majority. It was made the special order for Friday.

The House, by an overwhelming majority, passed the anti-cigarette bill, as it is called, which makes it a misdemeanor to sell tobacco to any person under sixteen years old.

The bill to change county seats was defeated.

The following bills passed the Senate Thursday:

Extending the conditions under which savings banks may loan their surplus funds; providing for the appointment of "Investigators of the poor," at a salary not to exceed $600, in townships having a population of 25,000 or more; dividing counties into three road districts, and giving each county commissioner charge of one district; requiring the publication of the date when property is to be sold to satisfy a school fund mortgage; requiring employers to furnish seats for female employes; authorizing the collection of a tax of 15 cents on the $100 in cities and towns for electric light purposes; providing for the title and custody of certain school property; requiring notaries of public to indicate with each attestation the date of the expiration of their commissions; providing that Judges as well as juries may declare persons insane; providing for the refunding of surplus gravel road funds among the tax payers from whom it was collected; providing for the punishment of persons who bring stolen property into the State; legalizing the acts of Notaries whose commissions have expired; providing for long-hand transcripts and short-hand evidence at public expense in cases where the litigant is not able to pay for it; raising the age of consent from twelve to fourteen years.

House bills passed: Requiring railroads to give employes eight hours' rest after twenty-four consecutive hours of employment; regulating the weighing of wheat in testers.

The House refused to reconsider the vote by which it passed the McMullen bill, which is intended to reach for taxation the foreign money loaned in the State on farm mortgage. The bill provides that where suit is entered to collect a note the plaintiff must prove that the note has been listed for taxation else it is void. The vote to reconsider was a tie, 42 to 42. It is not likely the bill will pass the Senate.

THE fee and salary bill received considerable attention Friday in the Senate on the report of the committee adverse to a bill introduced by Senator Kopelke, proposing an amendment by which the salaries of all the officials in Lake County will be increased. The committee adhered to its determination to recommend no change in the law until it had been thoroughly tested.

A number of senators, however, seized the opportunity to attack the law. It was shown that in Delaware County, where the Recorder was paid but $1,700, and in Grant County, where this official receives $1,800, each was required to employ four deputies, and that the recorders had served notice upon the county that the salary of the office would not pay deputy hire. These officers, unless the Legislature gives relief, will discharge their deputies, and, after doing what individual work they can, will let what is undone pile up for the official of the future. Other instances were cited of similar embarrassments.

In the House Representative Hench struck a blow at the lobby which is fighting the co-employes bill. He arose and said:

"The struggle between the corporations and the people has got to be fought out in the Legislature, and I move that the co-employes liability be made the special order for Monday at 10 a. m."

The corporations have a strong lobby working against the co-employe bill, and it will not be passed without a struggle.

A new dog bill passed the House, wiping out all enactments now in vogue, and imposing an annual license on all dogs. This bill went through with a whoop. One of its peculiar provisions is that any person at any time is authorized to kill unlicensed dogs.

Representative Fippin's bill was engrossed, providing that the death penalty may be imposed upon persons who place obstructions upon the track or misplace switches to wreck trains.

FARMER JOHN CLARK of Washington Township, Delaware County, had his fine residence wholly consumed by fire.

Herr von Madai, who was for many years the President of Police in Berlin, was vain of his many decorations. No man in the country, outside of the royal princes, and Bismarck, and Von Moltke, could display so many decorations on his breast. Every sovereign who came to the capital as a matter of course contributed a decoration to Von Madai. "Is this photograph not good of you?" once asked a young lieutenant. "No," replied His Excellency, "I then had only fifteen decoration, and now I have sixteen."

DOINGS OF CONGRESS.

MEASURES CONSIDERED AND ACTED UPON.

At the Nation's Capital—What Is Being Done by the Senate and House—Old Matters Disposed Of and New Ones Considered.

The Senate and House.

The House Tuesday made fair progress with one of the great appropriation bills. That legislative bill appropriates upward of $21,500,000. Aside from a review of the condition of the treasury by Messrs. Dingley and Dockery—divergent views—and an attack on the civil-service law by Mr. Dearmond the proceedings were uninteresting. Senator Chandler managed to give a political twist to the debate in the Senate on the automatic-coupler bill. He brought up a resolution in the National Democratic platform which denounces the Republican party and the Republican Senate for not having provided legislation for the protection of railroad employes, and he insisted that the position of so many Democratic Senators against the bill was inconsistent with their party fealty. He twitted them with the fact that only seven of them had voted to take up the bill for the repeal of the Sherman act, knowing the declaration of the National Democratic Convention on the subject of silver, and knowing the entreaties of the President-elect to have the Sherman act repealed before March 4. Mr. Wolcott, while arguing against the automatic-coupler bill, said that no other Senator than Mr. Chandler could have found a political advantage in it. After a great deal of talk back and forth no action was taken on the bill.

On Wednesday the Senate resumed consideration of the railway car-coupler bill. Mr. Peffer took exception to some remarks made by Mr. Wolcott, reflecting, as Mr. Peffer thought, on the farmers and workingmen of the country, and he hoped that the bill would pass, no matter how much it might cost the railway companies. He had no qualms of conscience on that point. Mr. Gorman argued that the organization of railway employes could accomplish more in the way of improvement than all the legislation that could be piled on the statute book. Mr. Cullom declared it had got to be a question whether Congress would put money against the blood of railroad employes, and whether money was more valuable than the lives of these men. Various amendments were offered, but without action the Senate, after an executive session, adjourned. The Speaker laid before the House the House quarantine bill, with Senate amendment, and Mr. Raynor moved a concurrence. A few moments before 1 o'clock Doorkeeper Turner announced the presence of the Vice President and Senate of the United States, and the vast assemblage rose with one accord to do them honor. The Vice President took the chair assigned to him at the right of the Speaker, and the Senators occupied the first four rows of the seats to the right of the presiding officer. The counting of the electoral vote was then proceeded with, and at its completion the Senate returned to its own hall. When the Senate retired the House resumed in committee the consideration of the legislative appropriation bill. Without disposing of the bill the committee and the House adjourned.

Thursday was silver day in the House, and the friends of silver were victorious in the fight by a majority of 9. They sustained the demand for the previous question on the resolution setting apart Thursday and Friday for the consideration of the bill repealing the Sherman act. The whole of the day's session of the Senate after the morning hour was devoted to a discussion of the railway automatic car-coupler bill. At noon the Senate went into executive session, and the doors remained closed for more than half an hour. When they were reopened the unfinished business, the automatic car-coupler bill, was taken up, but, without concluding the consideration of the bill the Senate adjourned.

The time of the House Friday was taken up by the pension debate. The bill proposes an expenditure of $160,000,000, a cut of $6,000,000 from what was asked. Mr. Mutchler argued in support of the changes in the pension laws recommended by the committee. There were, he said, thousands and many thousands of men who were on the pension rolls to-day who had never heard the whistle of the bullet or yet the roar of artillery. Mr. Grout admitted that the amount of money required for the payment of pensions was a large one. But it must be remembered that the bulk of it was for invalid veterans or for the widows of men who had lain down their lives for their country. He was opposed to the transfer of the Pension Bureau as proposed by the bill. Without closing the general debate the committee rose and the House took a recess. The debate in the Senate on the automatic car-coupler bill was not of an enlivening or even an interesting character. The Vice President presented the memorial of the Chicago Chamber of Commerce favoring the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands, and it was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations. The bill to provide for sundry lighthouses and other aids to navigation was passed as it came from the House. The calendar was taken up and several minor bills were passed. The conference report on the bill to restore to the public domain a portion of the White Mountain Apache Indian Reservation was presented and agreed to, and the Senate adjourned.

The bill to promote the safety of employes and travelers upon railroads by compelling railroad companies to equip their cars with automatic couplers and continuous brakes, and their locomotives with driving-wheel brakes, was finally disposed of in the Senate Saturday. The substitute for the House bill of last session was agreed to and the bill passed—yeas, 39; nays, 10. The only other important piece of legislation done was the agreeing to the conference report on the fortifications bill and making the Nicaragua Canal bill the unfinished business. The session of the House was not without interest, but it was without result. The attempt of the Democrats to limit the time for debate on the pension appropriation bill was firmly resisted by the Republicans, and the strong minority came out victorious. The result was that, without termination of general debate, the House adjourned.

The Mexican Saratoga.

Saltillo, Coahuila, Mexico, [illegible] plaza in the center of the city, was under the blaze of a hundred lights and fragrant with the perfume of rare flowers. The shrubbery was stirred with the whispers of an evening breeze, and the waters played from the great stone fountain in their midst. Sixty musicians, comprising the military band stationed at Monterey, discoursed the sweetest of weird Mexican airs, and hundreds of people threaded the walks, or filled the seats placed at convenient distances about the charming place. It was a lovely scene, as I saw it this April night, and, beside what there was in it to charm the senses, here in their best garb were displayed the habits, customs and the lights and shades of Mexican life. Two evenings a week there is like a panorama moving in Monterey, and, doubtless, many other places in Mexico, but I have chanced to see it here only. There the high, the low, the rich and the poor gather on the walks and amidst banks of roses, to enjoy the beauties of their land, its delightful climate, and the recreation that their Government thus provides for them. I took my seat on the plaza the evening after I reached this strange country, to enjoy and observe the picture. Half the population of the city seemed to be out of doors and centered in this one spot.

The scene cannot well be described. Each one's fancy must paint it with such tints as will naturally suggest themselves. Perfect order reigned. Not a boisterous word or act could be heard or observed. Every one seemed to be quietly enjoying the lovely things that both God and man had provided. No noisy children romped among the flowers; no jolly laugh or hearty talk broke in upon the happiness of the hour. People here never talk loud, or are noisily animated. This perfect decorum at once attracts attention and provokes comment. I have found it as manifest in private as in public. The people appear to be always serious and tragical, rather than cheerful and hopeful. It may be in appearance only, however. It is this retiring disposition, though, that makes all classes delicately sensitive and the women jealous. People here rarely laugh, and the women always look thoughtful and sometimes even sad. They have beautiful hair and eyes and small hands and feet. They seem born and reared out of the sunlight, and in the evenings, when they stand at the glassless windows and look out through the grating, you often see faces that recall the pictures of Charlotte Corday peering from between the prison bars.—Cor. Philadelphia Press.

The Proper Position for Sleeping.

A German, Baron Reichenbach, has occupied many years studying the art of bed-making, or rather bed-placing, and maintains that improperly placed beds will shorten a man's life.

If a mere magnet exercises an influence on sensitive persons, the earth's magnetism must certainly make itself felt on the nervous life of man. In whatever hemisphere, you may always sleep with your feet to the equator, and let your body lie "true as a needle to the pole."

The proper direction of the body is of the utmost importance for the proper circulation of the blood, and many disturbances in the organisms have been cured by simply placing the bolster in a different point of the compass from that it had occupied. Let such as have hitherto been in the habit of sleeping with their heads where their feet ought to be take to heart the example of the late Dr. Elschwester, of Magdeburg, who died recently at the age of 109 years.

The most unhealthy position, we are told, is when the body lies due east and west. Some observers assure us that to sleep in such a posture is tantamount to committing suicide, and that diseases are often aggravated by deviations from the proper postures.—London World.

Decidedly Shaky.

A trembling hand, an uncertain step, fidgetiness, indicated by restless shifting from one place or posture to another, usually mental annoyance at unexpected noises, are among the indications of extreme nervousness. These seem trifling, but the health of men and women in this condition is "decidedly shaky," liable to be overthrown disastrously by causes which the vigorous might defy. To fortify the nervous system, general vigor must, through the medium of re-enforced digestion, and a renewal of an impaired power of sleeping at night, be raised to a healthful standard. A guarantee of this is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which re-establishes digestion, bile secretion and the habit of body on a permanently regular basis, thus renewing that bodily equilibrium, which is followed by a gain of strength and nerve tranquillity. For kidney complaint, rheumatism, neuralgia, and as a preventive of the first attack or subsequent return of malarial disorders, this medicine is without a peer. Thrice daily take a wineglassful.

A Shrewd Parent.

"I don't know what is the matter with my son. Since he went to the university he hasn't written to me once."

"Why don't you do as I did? When I didn't hear from my Emil I wrote as follows: 'My dear boy, how are you? Enclosed you will find a $20 bill.' But I took good care not to enclose the bill. The result was that he wrote by the next mail, complaining that the money had not reached him."—Fliegende Blaetter.

Refreshments for the Million.

Automatic coin-feed machines, which is the modern name for nickel-in-the-slot devices, are being introduced in London by a philanthropic association, for the supply of solid and liquid refreshments at a low price. Freshly made beverages, such as tea, coffee, and aerated waters are to be obtained, as well as malt and spirituous liquors. The main idea is to make this system of sale beneficial to the masses by offering them cheap but good articles of food and drink; but it is said that its application will be extended to the supply of handkerchiefs and small articles of dress. The price at which the various articles are to be sold would be so low as to rapidly saddle the organizers of the scheme with a heavy deficit, and it is proposed to render the system self-supporting by utilizing the machines and the wrappers and carriers of some of the goods as means of advertising.

Trade in Gun Flints.

Not many people know that there is still a considerable trade in flints for guns. Yet thousands of flints are shipped every year to Africa, where the natives are still using old guns, when they can get no other, and these flints meet with a ready sale, payment being given in ivory and other valuables. Nearly all the flint comes from the chalk cliffs along the English Channel, where it occurs in inexhaustible quantities in the form of nodules varying in size from a finger to a child's head. Tons of it are brought to this country, unintentionally, in chalk, and in the neighborhood of a plaster mill on the outskirts of Newtown, L. I., bushels of flints are piled around the fields. There is little or no true flint occurring as a native product in America.—New York Sun.

Answered.

It is not always safe to be too confident in your assertions, even to an ignorant man, for he may get the better of you in an argument. This truth was well illustrated in a story told at a recent conference in England on technical education in villages.

One speaker, referring to the prevalent ignorance about common things, said that he once saw a laborer digging flints in the chalk, and asked him if he thought they grew.

"No," was the reply. "I don't think about it; I knows they do."

"Then place a flint on your chimney-piece, and see how much it grows in a twelvemonth."

A Slave Trader's Buried Gold.

A search for buried gold is being conducted under peculiar circumstances by a man and woman, eleven miles out on the Nolensville pike. The parties engaged in the search are E. C. Beardsley of Pittsburgh, who claims to be State Geologist, and Mrs. L. A. Cook of New Orleans. The story goes that Mrs. Cook had a dream that a slave trader buried $185,000 in gold in earthen jugs during the war and that this fact and the location of the gold was revealed to Mrs. Cook in a dream. The parties are stopping at a local hotel and visit the supposed location of the buried treasure every day.—Atlanta Constitution.

THE proprietors of Ely's Cream Balm do not claim it to be a cure-all, but a sure remedy for Catarrh and Cold in the head.

I HAVE been afflicted with catarrh for 20 years. It became chronic and extended to my throat, causing hoarseness and great difficulty in speaking; indeed, for years I was not able to speak more than thirty minutes, and often this with great difficulty. I also, to a great extent, lost the sense of hearing. By the use of Ely's Cream Balm all dropping of mucous has ceased and my voice and hearing have greatly improved.—Jas. W. Miss Huntley.

Hood's Cures

The marvelous cure of Miss Lettie Huntley, of Cortland, N. Y., has attracted widespread attention. She was nigh to death's door with hemorrhages caused by ulcers in the stomach. Could eat nothing. When the physicians said there was no hope, her mother urged her to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. She reluctantly consented, and in a few days felt stronger, bloating subsided, appetite gradually returned, and in a month she could walk across the room. In six months she was as well as ever in her life, and has been in perfect health ever since. She says: "I know that

"Each Spoonful has done its Perfect Work,"

Is the verdict of every woman who has used Royal Baking Powder. Other baking powders soon deteriorate and lose their strength, owing to the use of inferior ingredients, but Royal Baking Powder is so carefully and accurately compounded from the purest materials that it retains its strength for any length of time, and the last spoonful in the can is as good as the first, which is not true of any other baking powder.

The Farmers' Telegraph.

"A rural farming district in Michigan," says the Engineering Magazine, "has provided itself with a telegraph line eight miles in length, connecting a large number of scattered farms with the village store, the proprietor of which officiates as telegraph operator, express agent, postmaster, and so on. The total cash expenditure for the outfit is said to have been only some $200, while the expense of maintenance, which is but a trifling sum, is assessed equally upon the owners. The small cost and enormous convenience of such a system as this in country districts ought to lead to a more general adoption of the plan. Especially after the expiration of the telephone patents in 1884, such a system of intercommunication by wire would be possible in every township throughout the country. The individual expense would be almost insignificant, and in the item of useful travel alone would save many times its cost every year."

Opportunities for Recommendation.

A literary man relates that he made a proposal of marriage to a charming young woman, and she asked for a day or two in which to consider the matter. The next afternoon he received from her a package accompanied by a note, inquiring, "Do you think it is safe?" Opening the package he found these books: Froude's "Letters and Memorials of Jane Welsh Carlyle," Daudet's "Artists' Wives," "The Unhappy Lovers of Men of Genius," and a copy of a well-known magazine containing an essay advising young women not to marry literary men.

United States Government

World's Fair Souvenir Coins—

The Official Souvenir of the Great Exposition—

5,000,000 of which were donated to the World's Columbian Exposition by the Government, are being rapidly taken by an enthusiastically patriotic people.

As there early promised to be a demand for these Souvenirs that would render them very valuable in the hands of speculators, the Exposition Authorities decided to place the price at

and sell them direct to the people, thus realizing $5,000,000, and using the additional money for the further development of the Fair.

Considering the fact that there were but 5,000,000 of these coins to be distributed amomg 65,000,000 people, in this country alone (to say nothing of the foreign demand,) and that many have already been taken, those wishing to purchase these mementoes of our Country's Discovery and of the grandest Exposition ever held, should secure as many as they desire at once.

For Sale Everywhere

Realizing that every patriotic American will want one or more of these coins, and in order to make it convenient for him to get them, we have made arrangements to have them sold throughout the country by all the leading Merchants and Banks. If not for sale in your town, send $1.00 each for not less than five coins, by Post-office or Express Money-order, Registered Letter or Bank Draft, with instructions how to send them to you, all charges prepaid, to

CURED BY LIVURA.

MR. F. B. ARCHER.

LIVURA M'F'G. Co., DEAR SIRS:—"For about 5 years I have been afflicted with Liver trouble, causing me to become very Bilious. I had headache continually, my appetite was very poor, and a deathly faintness at the pit of the stomach accompanied by a terrible distress. During the past two years my Kidneys became very weak and pained me so badly I could not rest. Owing to extreme nervousness I was unable to attend to my business, and in January I came down with Nervous Prostration. Eight different Physicians have had me under their care, but I grew worse instead of better.

Learning of PITCHER'S LIVURA I began taking it and my improvement was noticeable from the first. I have taken 3 bottles and am ENTIRELY CURED, able to attend to my work, and have not felt so well for 6 years. I give all the credit to

The New Great South American Kidney Cure.

The acknowledged superior cure and immediate relief for all derangements, painfulness and decay of the kidneys or bladder, Bright's disease, diabetes or any complaint that hurts or despoils either of these delicate organs. This new remedy has been thoroughly tested by learned physicians and found far superior to any medicine yet discovered for quickly relieving all weaknesses, aches, pains and distresses arising from disease of any part of the urinary passages. It is great relief for the old, middle aged and children, male or female. It relieves at once retention and pain in passing water, and it is very effective in relieving prostatic troubles in the old, and for nightly incontinence of water in children, or others, caused by weakness of the bladder. It may be worth to many a hundred times its cost. This is a remedy of great value to ladies, because they are very liable to weakness and pain peculiar to their sex. Sold by Robbins & McCord, druggists, Auburn, Ind. 11

Obituary.

Abner Forbes Pinchin was born near Fort Ficconderoga, New York, Sept. 28th, 1822, his father being a soldier of the war of 1812, and his grandfather a revolutionary soldier. At the age of eight years he went to live with a sister in the state of Vermont, where he attended school and obtained such education as the place afforded. At the age of sixteen removed with his sister to Huntington county, Ind., and in the fall of the same year he came to Troy township, DeKalb county, remaining two years, when he returned to his native home in New York, where he remained four years learning the blacksmith trade. From this place he went to Racine, Wisconsin, remaining in the west two years, then returned again to DeKalb county and engaged in farming in Troy township.

On the 9th day of Feb. 1845, he was united in marriage with Amelia P. Aldrich. To this union were born two children, both of whom have since died. Mrs. Pinchin died in 1855. On the 19th of Sept. the same year, he was united in marriage with Harriet Knisely. Two children, a son Eugene, and a daughter Emma Beidler, of this union survives him, Mrs. Pinchin having preceded him in death some eight years.

In 1856, he left the farm, and removed to Hamilton, where he commenced the practice of law, which he continued during his life. In 1861 he became a U. S. recruiting officer, and continued in this service, about two years, during which time he enlisted about one thousand soldiers. In 1863 he enlisted in the 129th, Reg. Ind. Vol. Infanty, and in 1864 was commissioned first lieutenant. He participated in the Battles of Resaca, Atlanta, Franklin and Nashville. By his bravery he was largely instrumental in turning the tide of battle in favor of the union forces at the battle of Franklin. He received several wounds there that affected him the balance of his life. After the close of the war he resumed the practice of law, coming to Butler in 1866, and occupied the same home until his death.

His funeral which was largely attended, took place from the Christian church of which he recently became a member. Rev. Fryberger, of the Lutheran church officiating assisted by Rev. Tedrow of the U. B. church. His remains were laid in their last resting place in Leonard's cemetery by the Grand Army post of Butler, of which order he was a member. Mr. Pinchin was a man of quiet discernment, wonderful equanimity of temper, brave to a fault and whom no threats of punishment or reward could turn from what he believed to be the right. His memory will long be cherished by those who knew him best.

Drs. Townsend Coming.

February 21 and 22.

Among many testimonials we find these: I had spinal curvature that doctors told me was incurable and I am now well. Another said: I was given up by fourteen doctors, who told me I had Bright's disease of the kidneys, but thanks to Drs. Townsend I am a well man. Another: I was bedriden for over ten years with a complication of female diseases. Some of the most eminent specialists, including three professors in medical colleges, and they all told me I could not get well. Four years ago I placed my case in the hands of the Drs. Townsend, and in 5 months and 4 days from the time I commenced treatment I dressed myself and walked across the room, and in another month I felt as well as I ever did in my life and have remained in excellent health ever since. Another says: I had epilepsy for fifteen years and was cured. Another: My whole nervous system was broken down and I was practically an old man at 31. I could not sleep, my hands trembled, I would get dizzy and forgetful and became so bad that I had to give up business. I consulted many doctors, the best I thought, in the country, and finally went to Europe, and spent over $9,000 and three years' time and was no better, but gradually got worse. I returned home to die and closed up all my business affairs. At last a friend, who had been cured, advised me to go to the Drs. Townsend. Without any faith, but to please him, I went, and to my great surprise they told me they could cure me, and they made good their their word, for from the first dose of medicine I commence to improve, and in twelve months I was completely cured. A lady says: My case was pronounced to be tubercular consumption by seven of our best physicians, and under whose treatment I got worse all the time. The Drs. Townsend cured me in just four months. One says: I had catarrh that affected my head so I was almost crazy. It went into my ears, and oh! such a roaring, I was almost wild; it had gone down also upon my lungs and the doctor said it was the bronchitis. Thanks to the Drs Townsend I am entirely well. Another says: I was cured of a bad cancer. A lady of great refinement, who had received serious injuries during a confinement, was cured after other specialists utterly failed. Thousands a cases similar to the above might be cited.

Examination by letter or in person free and sacredly confidential. If unable to see the doctors write full peticulars. Thousands treated by correspondence. Address, with stamp:

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

At this time a good newspaper would have been of great value as a medium of communication with the public enabling friends of the railroad to submit their claims to support but such a paper was wanting. A man named H. D. Carll had started in Auburn, a paper under the title of DeKalb Democrat but the name had no magic and the man little ability and the editor, disappointed, bitterly complained of lack of necessary and expected support.

In this regard, the rival town of Waterloo had marked advantage. There, the obvious necessity of being on the line of the road established identity of interest and the Waterloo City Press ably edited was a strong factor for the good of the community.

The beginning of 1868, T. Y. Dickinson and J. F Radcliffe were joint editors and publishers. In the fall, B. F. Kennedy succeeded Dickinson and in December, Mr. Radcliffe withdrew and started in Waterloo, a newspaper styled the Air Line, which was well received and merited patronage.

The term of Spencer Dills as County school examiner expired in June, and on the 5th of that month, Wm. H. McIntosh was appointed to the office by the board of county commissioners, to serve for a period of three years.

Mr. McIntosh was at the time, concluding a highly successful year's engagement at what was known as Kell's Seminary, located east of Huntertown, Ind., and the appointment to him was as gratifying as it was unsolicited and unexpected. His subsequent labor as an educator over and in the schools of DeKalb county, was marked on his part by conscientious assiduity, faithfully seconded by the untiring efforts of devoted teachers and ardent pupils.

Examinations held monthly at Auburn disclosed grave deficiencies in qualification on the part of applicants for license to teach and not to block the opening of all the schools, many were passed whose knowledge of the required branches was very limited.

An attempt to partially remedy this defect by visiting schools to assist, and advise willing but inexperienced teachers, was promptly checked by an order from the county commissioners forbidding official visitation and there only remained for the officer to make use of a normal school of which he should be the principal to give proper personal instruction to be supplemented by such help as the county five-day institute could afford.

Spencer Dills accepted an offer of the public schools of Waterloo and later was highly spoken of as a more than ordinarily successful teacher.

At this point it is of interest to quote Calvin P. Houser, on the existing state of education in the county and his opinion of the outgoing and incoming school examiners. Spencer Dills and William H. McIntosh in an article written for the Republican of Nov. 14, 1883. "In the midst of prosperity and flattering success, we frequently forget that others lived before us and laid the foundation of our institutions and of our ultimate success in life. Pausing a moment, glancing backward through a brief vista of years, we call to mind the most noble of DeKalb's educators, Spencer Dills, who took up the standard when teachers' institutes were sparsely attended and their influence little felt in the schools; when there were no brick school houses in the county and not one single so-called patent school desk where now there are none other; when blackboards and globes were curiosities, school terms short and system in the school room was wanting. Although Spencer Dills was called from earth in early manhood while on the threshold of usefulness, he had inaugurated a revival in school work whose effects yet continue.

This spirit of progression was taken up by Prof. McIntosh, our next county examiner; young and enthusiastic, he added new zeal and inspired the teachers with confidence and at one time conducted the very best institute ever held in DeKalb county, without the aid of foreign instructors."

The examiner opened a select school in the Academy on Aug. 17th. In the high school department there were forty scholars of whom five have long been residents of Auburn, viz: Letitia High, wife of Solomon Shearer, Eunice Lockwood, wife of Ben Zeigler. Richard Baxter, now a member of the school board, Alice Widney, wife of A. Lewis and Harriet Ditmars, wife of David Ober. So far as known, all the others are living, and most are doing well. Dr. A. J. Carper was in attendance that term as well as Reuben Sawvel present county treasurer. and better scholars could not be desired.

Most have forgotten the Catlin girls, Mary and Emma; the Houghton girls, Samantha and Etta; the Latson girls, Hattie and Sarah; the Goetschiuses, Mary and Philander; the Fullers, Truman and Lucetta; Emily Ling, wife of S. W. Bair; Mattie Miller, Josie Nelson and Harriet Williams. Some of these have been themselves teachers of superior merit but none are town residents.

The winter session of the Auburn schools began November 30th, and continued three and a half months. Wm. H. McIntosh was superintendent and principal of the high school.

The teachers in the grammar, intermediate and primary departments were, Mollie M. Denius, Frank Clark and Hattie Steele. The salaries respectively paid per month were $65, $40, $35 and $30. The scholars were fairly graded and the lady teachers were women of experience in their calling, but the schools in scholarship, punctuality and deportment were lamentably deficient; and Miss Denius in the grammar room especially found her powers of government taxed to their utmost to preserve order and secure even a partial degree of studiousness.

As a matter of fact either the schools had suffered a marvelous decline or had been accorded a fictitious reputation and the writer has known district schools taught by Henry Coe, John Eakright and others, that were in all respects their superior.

Despite indifference to learning, manifested by irregularity and ill conduct on the part of many, such was the tact and courage of the teachers in the grammar and intermediate grades that the schools on closing revealed creditable progress and were fairly representatives of the Auburn of 1868.

Mr. Blaine's Personal Magnetism.

From Harper's Weekly.

That Mr. Blaine, in spite of his shortcomings, attracted the attention and engaged the interest of his countrymen in so remarkable a degree was in greatest part to his extraordinary power of personal fascination. No public man in the United States, in our day, united in himself so many of those elements of popularity which will not only "make friends" among the politicians and charm the multitude, but also win the good will, and occasionally mitigate, if not disarm, the criticism of men of thought and principle. A naturally vivacious and versatile mind, well stored with that kind of information which makes conversation interesting and attractive; a ready, brilliant wit, and the capacity of enjoying the wit of others; a manner of cheery, jovial, apparently confidential good fellowship, making everyone coming in contact with him feel himself the object of special interest. genuine, sympathetic good nature, rather inclined gratefully to remember a friendly act than to resent and punish an unfriendly one: an uncommonly retentive memory for names and and faces; a quick perception of the movements of popular opinion, and a ready inclination to yield to them; an eloquence neither remarkably argumentative nor elevated, but endowed with a peculiar dash, giving the impression of courageous frankness—all these qualities contributed to that "magnetism" with which Mr. Blaine attracted and held a large following of personal admirers by no means confined to his own political party. It may be said that if he was not in the true sense a leader on the field of sentiment. His followers and friends sincerely believed that if he were put in a proper place of power he would certainly do something brilliant that would redound greatly to the advantage of the American people and to the glory of the American name, although nobody seemed to to have a definite and clear conception of what that brilliant achievement would be. No doubt he was himself inspired by the ambition of making this republic the ruling power on the whole American continent and one of the most influential powers in the world, no matter what might become of our safe and time-honored traditions of foreign policy.

MRS. ELMIRA HATCH.

HEART DISEASE 20 YEARS.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

DEAR SIRS: For 20 years I was troubled with heart disease. Would frequently have falling spells and smothering at night. Had to sit up or get out of bed to breathe. Had pain in my left side and back most of the time; at last I became dropsical. I was very nervous and nearly worn out. The least excitement would cause me to faint. I was also much troubled with fluttering. For the last fifteen years I could not sleep on my left side or back until I began taking your New Heart Cure. I had not taken it very long until I felt much better, and I can now sleep on either side or back without the least discomfort. I have no pain, smothering, dropsy, no wind on stomach or other disagreeable symptoms. I am able to do all my own housework without any trouble and consider myself cured.

THOUSANDS

Elkhart, Ind., 1888. MRS. ELMIRA HATCH.

It is now four years since I have taken any medicine. I am in better health than I have been in 40 years. I honestly believe that Dr. Miles' New Heart Cure saved my life and made me a well woman. I am now 62 years of age, and am able to do a good day's work.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
DR. G. C. OSGOOD, Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
DR. J. F. KINCHELOE, Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

THEIR GOLDEN DAY.

Last Thursday as previously noted in the COURIER. Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Rush celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their married life. Friends over town and many outside of Auburn looked forward to the day, as one that would bring together again many of the old time neighbors of the principal parties. Wm, McIntyre and Elias Zimmerman made themselves especially valuable in completing the "outside" arrangements, while W. B. Brown and wife, arranged for the comfort and pleasure of the meeting at their home, for it was plain that a large house would be needed. The invitations read "from three to six," and about half past three the guests began to arrive. As already noted, Mr. and Mrs. Rush had found their own comfortable residence too small, and the daughter and son-in-law, threw open their spacious residence. Congratulations and the interchange of greetings were the order, for many met them, who had not for a long time before, and old neighbor greeted old neighbor with a heartiness that few others can understand. The aged couple, were in good health, and high spirits, and were of course, the center of attraction. At about five o'clock, their pastor Rev. A. S. Wooton of the First M. E church, asked that the bride and groom of fifty years, arise, as he had something to say. As they did so, a hush from the busy talkers, extended over the room, and in the quiet that followed, Mr. Wooton proceeded with his speech, which we here produce:

"DEAR FRIENDS: An extraordinary occasion calls us to this beautiful home. A golden wedding is a rare event in this life, the homes of which are open to so many sweeping and remorseless changes. Weddings begin our mature careers but they seldom shed their brightness on, or fill the day with music that comes near the end of a long pilgrimage. We are right in characterizing this event as extraordinary. A happy pair, assuming gladly solemn vows, start together on the road of life. As the old shoe is thrown after them, what true prophet can take up the burden of prophecy and declare when the end shall be. May be in a few years one of the pair is heard mourning like a dove for the mate lost forever. Most people too soon must pass through the greatest of all tests on the human heart, the waiting to feel the touch of a vanished hand and to hear a voice that is still, with the conscious knowledge that he waits in vain. But of to-day no sad strain is written. Everything turns to gold as the old alchemists desired, and suggests Wall street and the single standard. Every couple who celebrate their golden wedding are practically mono-metalists whatever may be their theory about free silver. The heart says give us sweet Hungarian airs or strains from Midsummers Night Dreams, not the dead march in Saul.

This is a golden wedding. At the first wedding the high contracting parties are not required to impart much of their history. All they need is a license from the clerk of the circuit court and a little nerve in the presence of that august personage, the dominie. But a golden wedding would not approach completeness without a little biography. Before we congratulate our young friends, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Rush, it is well in the language of the press to turn a headlight on their history.

Wm. E. Rush is an original Ohio man. Why he never insisted on a government appointment for this reason must remain a secret sealed in his own breast. Born in Royalton, Fairfield Co., in the year 1814, Nov. 17. Brother Rush has attained the royal and fair age of 78 years 5 months, and 29 days. He expects to stay up all night to see the 20th century break over the world, and soon thereafter answer all the interrogatories of the census man. He will tell with delight, the children of the next ten years, all about his visit to the Columbian Exposition and his trip to St. Louis on the electrical line. But the historian must not further digress. The parents of Brother Rush originated from Maryland. They left the land of their birth for Ohio with its dense forests and measureless possibilities.

The life of Brother Rush has been like that of many Americans who find so many open doors of opportunity. He has stood behind the counter selling goods. He has made fine furniture. He has served the community as postmaster and has held to the orthodox doctrine, to do with his might whatsoever his hand found to do. For many years Brother Rush has been a member of the church. His life has been an epistle known and read of all men. His presence is a benediction.

But we must not lose sight of the bride of 50 years ago. It is the bride who is the center of attraction in a wedding. She is always better looking than the bridegroom. She dresses better. The white veil becomes her because her heart is purer than the veil and warmer with affection than the soft airs that fanned the orange blossoms in their natal land.

Jemima A. Rigby was born near Lancaster, Ohio, in 1820, of parents in whose veins flowed the blood of the aristocracy of Virginia and a splendid article of Scotch Irish. She has not defined herself on Mr. Gladstone's theory of "Home Rule." Doubtless she wishes him to "Rush" the measure through.

Sister Rush grew to young womanhood and then fitted herself to teach in the public schools. She taught two terms and then would teach no longer. She gives as a reason for leaving the occupation of school teaching a dislike for the profession; but an impartial historian must say in a footnote in small type that there is external evidence that she quit the school room because of a pleasing proposition from a good looking and prosperous young man known to his friends as Wm. E. Rush.

But the current of history must not be checked in its onward flow, ever in the interest of the truth. Time went on like a song, because early in life Miss Jemima A. Rigby gave herself to Christ and the church. Fifty years ago there was a wedding near Royalton, Ohio. The preacher in charge of Royalton circuit M. E. church, Rev Thomas H. Hurd, rode up to the house on horseback and after the horse was put away, he went into the house, and then in the presence of the family and ten guests he joined in holy matrimony Wm. E. Rush and Jemima A. Rigby Feb. 16, 1843. The preacher lies beneath the sod. His sermon is ended. He dismissed the audience for the last time with the apostolic benediction. The sexton locked the church forever. Only one of the guests lingers on the shores of time, an aged man waiting a little longer for the marriage supper above.

The next day after the wedding nearly everyone in Royalton rode out and escorted the party into town for the infare dinner. A gay throng gathered that day. Brother Rush informed me that the town fiddler was not there. He makes a remarkable statement concerning their wedding. He says they were not belled. I am sorry they missed this musical feature of a wedding, because I fear that it has always given them some anxiety for fear they would be, and besides all this we must face heroically the fact that it is not beyond the possibility of their having to endure a belling yet.

Fifty years of wedded life. What a world of changes and interest is crowded into these years. Doubtless there has been more sunshine than cloud. Eleven children were born to Brother and Sister Rush. They are all here to-day, but five of them are invisible, and angelic guests. Some are here in heart.

"They are all—all, here."

The following are the names of the children given in the order of their age: Sarah A. Rush, Mary D. Rush Buchanan, John F Rush, Chas. E. Rush, Martha J. Rush Dawson, Harry Rush, B. K. Rush, Josie Rush Brown, Frank Rush, Mark L. Rush. The youngest died while but an infant a few days old. It had no name.

With the exception of a few years Brother and Sister Rush have lived in Auburn since 1849. They have seen the growth of this town and country. They have identified themselves with the best interests of the place. morally, socially, intellectually and religiously. They have labored and we younger persons enter into their labors. Fifty years of conscientious service as heads of a household bearing the responsibility of rearing children and discharging nobly the offices of domestic life, maintaining a helpful relation to society, setting a good example, deserves the praise of this company to Brother and Sister Rush.

May death be very tardy in calling on this venerable couple. This evening is serene. The sky is cloudless. They see some of their children every day. Sweet grandchildren could not bear their departure. May wind and wave be gentle; but when the voyage is nearly done may they see some bright morning the burnished spires of the Heavenly Jerusalem as they stand on the deck of the brave old ship that sails to that port."

At the conclusion of Mr. Wooton's remarks, which were quite witty, as will be seen, and put the whole audience in the best of spirits, he read the usual prayer in the Discipline and then had the couple join hands and then without a full ceremony, he introduced the bride and groom, who smilingly received the congratulations of their friends. Wm. McIntyre then arose, and said there was to be another speech, and called on Elder Ward, who in a few words, beautiful and well chosen as his sentences always are, spoke of the worthy couple before him, and the desire that they should be properly remembered. He said he was authorized to present them a sum in gold, the amount of which was fifty dollars, a sum very appropriate to this occasion. Here Mr. McIntyre called attention to the fact that it was $51, Mr. McIntyre having with his usual provident forethought added a dollar for the coming year. This sum was increased to $91 by contributions of gold pieces by the children. Then there were many other gifts, mostly of articles in gold, given by other friends, making a very interesting display.

Elder Ward made the correction, and saying that as it was all in one purse, he felt in duty bound to give it all to the bride, which he did. We are sorry we could not get his remarks in full, but they were off-hand, and we cannot remember them fully. After congratulations, they had a bountiful supper, and it should be remarked right here, that to please the groom, there was a splendid "pound cake" made by the bride herself, just such as they had partaken of fifty years before. As our readers have of course read the above speech of Mr. Wooton, it will not be necessary here to give the biographies or the incidents of the far off festivities of that cold day in the "hard winter" of 1843. Among the guests present, were Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Parks of Kendallville and Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Long of Butler. Four of the children were present, Mrs. W. B. Brown, Mrs. Florence Buchanan, Mrs. Mattie Dawson of Denver, Colo. and Frank Rush of this place. Two sons were absent in the far west, S. H. Rush of Spokane Falls, Wash., and B. K. Rush of Forman, North Dakota; but both sent letters, congratulations and other tokens of filial love. Among the others who sent regrets, were: Rev. H. J. Norris of Logansport, Rev. H. Leonard, Fayette, Ohio, Mrs. A. C. Osborn, Angola, Mrs. Mott and Mrs. Hodge, Auburn; Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Cochran, Ontario, Calif.; Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Gillis, Stockton, Calif.; Mrs. S. A. Cox, Fredericktown, O.; Miss Lida McFarland, Rockford, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. O. Ebright, Royalton, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Rigby, Fostoria, Ohio; Harry L. Buchanan, Pleasant Hill, Mo.; Mrs. S. E. Rigby, Lancaster, Ohio. Among the regrets from neighbors in Auburn, who could not be present are: Mrs. Fanny Smith, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Henry, Mrs. S. Pearse, Mrs. H. A. Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Campbell. All that is pleasant and interesting in one of these rare occasions cannot be said in a newspaper article. We have but a part, and no amount of space, would give the hundreds of good wishes and hearty greetings this worthy old couple received on this golden occasion. And the COURIER adds its best and heartiest congratulations.

We present in this column a list which has been selected from our choicest properties, and are the best and cheapest.

TOWN PROPERTIES.

An elegant two-story frame dwelling with all necessary out buildings, small fruits and all the modern conveniences which go to make a beautiful and pleasant home. Will be sold cheap for cash, or will accept two-thirds cash; balance in one year.

A very desirable residence property on North Van Buren street. This property has good, almost new buildings, well, cistern and some fruits, and a price that will astonish you.

A vacant lot on West 7th street.

A nice residence on Seventh street right handy to schools and churches, and within a two-minutes' walk of the Court House.

A most desirable residence on south Jackson street, which we offer at a bargain, and will give the purchaser the privilege of paying out in monthly payments, if he so desires. Terms, $500 cash; balance in monthly payments.

FARMS.

We offer, first, a splendid Seventy acres in Union township, well tiled, good fences. Land that cannot be beat for gardening and for small fruits. Will sell cheap for cash, or on the most favorable terms on long time. Lays within three miles of Auburn.

Eighty acres of good land, within one mile of Newville. Good buildings, orchard, and, better soil cannot be found in DeKalb county. Easy prices, and terms to suit the purchaser.

We have a number of farms and town properties on our books, which we are not allowed to advertise, because of the simple fact, that they are offered so cheap that were it known the public would draw the conclusion that the owners are hard up for ready cash, which we all know would be a mistake.

We are agents for those lands in Kansas and Nebraska, which can be had on the most favorable terms ever offered, to-wit: The purchaser makes a small cash payment, just enough to show that he is in earnest, then yearly, thereafter, he pays (delivers at the nearest market) one-half of the crops raised on the land. If crops are unfavorable and he raises no crop, then he makes no payment that year, but is carried over until next year, and so on, until he pays out. Shall we have your application for one of these farms?

We shall be pleased to see you at any time and show, Free of Charge, any of the properties we have on our lists. Write or call on us for any information regarding rates, time of trains to any place on "God's green earth," and remember that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad pays the hack fare to all points in competition where the fare is $2. or more.

NEWS OF THE PAST WEEK

A PENNSYLVANIAN TO BE ATTORNEY GENERAL.

Frog Skin Grafted on a Human Body—A Gas Combine—Judge Gresham's Successor—Miners Killed—Two Hundred Thousand Persons Starving in Finland.

INLAND PRESS.

An Interesting Meeting Held at Chicago.

The Inland Daily Press Association, composed of proprietors of daily newspapers in Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, and Michigan met at the Victoria Hotel, Chicago, in the seventh annual session. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Quincy A. Hossler, Times, Warsaw, Ind.

Vice Presidents—E. R. Galson, Palladium, Benton Harbor, Mich.; W. M. Narvis, Journal, Muscatine, Iowa; Pierce Burton, Express, Aurora, Ill.; H. F. Bliss, Jamestown, Wis.

Secretary and Treasurer—Ira S. Carpenter, News, Michigan City, Ind.

Tried to Rob a Bank.

The other evening four masked men boldly attempted to rob the City Bank of Leechburg, Pa., thirty miles from Pittsburgh on the West Penn railroad. They were discovered before they had accomplished their design, and one of the robbers was arrested. The three escaped after a desperate encounter with the police officers. During the fight one of the robbers shot and almost instantly killed Schaefer, Chief of Police of the town. A description of the robbers has been telegraphed to all surrounding towns and a posse is in hot pursuit, tracking the fugitives in the snow.

Judge Gresham's Successor.

Washington special: Up to this time no candidates have appeared from Indianapolis for Judge Gresham's seat on the bench at Chicago, which will be vacated after March 4. Judge Gresham having been appointed from Indiana, it is expected that there will be a number of Hoosier candidates for the place, although their chances of securing it will, it is admitted, be lessened by the fact that Judge Woods was appointed from Indiana. The only candidate thus far is Judge Jenkins, of Wisconsin, who will have the solid indorsement of the Wisconsin delegation, headed by Senators Vilas and Mitchell.

A Pennsylvanian to Be Attorney General.

A special from Brookville, Pa., says: George A. Jenks has received from President-elect Cleveland the official announcement of his appointment of United States Attorney General. If he expected the honor he has successfully concealed his expectations. The place was offered to Mr. Jenks the other day by telegraph, and after consultation with his pastor, the Rev. Dr. Conway, he decided to accept. Mr Jenks was kept busy all afternoon receiving his fellow-townsmen, who came to offer him their congratulations. In going into the Cabinet Mr. Jenks leaves a law practice worth $20,000 a year.

Gas Combine.

Detroit special: The Michigan Gas Company, piping natural gas from Ohio to this city, and the Detroit and Mutual Gaslight Company, producing artificial gas, have been consolidated into a new company with $4,000,000 capital and $1,000,000 bonds. The old capitalizations were the same. The new company is largely owned by Eastern capitalists. The deal was arranged by the New York house of I. B. Newcomb & Co.

Famine in Finland.

St Petersburg special: In connection with the destruction by frost last summer, famine and disease are now prevalent throughout Finland. More than 200,000 persons are dependent upon charity. Towns and villages are thronged with beggars. Some five hundred thousand peasants are barely able to find the means of subsistance. They have eaten most of their draft animals and domestic pets.

Frog Skin Grafted on a Human Body.

Newburyport (Mass.) special: Mrs. J. Gilman Adams, who was badly burned a few weeks since, submitted to a novel and seemingly successful surgical operation. The wound was so large that it was impossible to obtain human skin for the purpose of grafting, so the skin of frogs was used. Nearly 300 grafts were put on. The frogs were chloroformed before the skin was taken from them.

Locomotive Explodes.

A Texas and Pacific freight engine exploded in the yards at Fort Worth, Tex., killing one man, injuring half a dozen others, and creating terrible havoc. Huge pieces of the engine were hurled to almost incredible distances.

Protest Against Home Rule.

The Grand Orange Lodge of Belfast, Ireland, has sent out a vehement manifesto against Mr. Gladstone's home rule bill. The manifesto demands either union with Great Britain or complete separation from Great Britain.

Miners Killed.

Four miners were killed by a cave-in at Joplin, Mo. Their names are John Krokroskia, D. Hanes, Henry Pyle, and H. Mitchell. R. E. Coy was injured and may not recover.

INDIANA GAS PLANTS.

They are Purchased by Capitalists, Who Propose to Form a Great Natural Gas Combination.

Cincinnati special: A number of Cincinnati capitalists, together with organized capital from Chicago, Meadville, Pa., New York and Boston, if the plans do not miscarry, will soon have formed in Indiana a great natural gas combination. For several months the entire natural gas fields of that State have been thoroughly inspected by competent agents and the combination after receiving their reports, it is said, have decided to consolidate all the plants at Crawfordsville, Thorntown, Darlington, and Lebanon. The experts who have been examining the fields, and looking into the books of the different companies now in possession, have found everything satisfactory, and in a short time the question of purchase will be fully decided upon. It is stated that among those directly interested in the syndicate are Gov. Hoadley, formerly of Cincinnati, and now of New York; Richard M. Platt, Horatio Seymour, Jr., John D. Rockefe[illegible] York and Cleveland; J. C. R[illegible] Henry Sturtevant, Amos Clarke of Boston; Archer Archer, Col. J. B. He[illegible]rington, Carter Harrison of Chicago, E. E. Zimmerman, R. A. Burkhardt and Briggs Cunningham of Cincinnati.

COAL COMBINE CRUSHED OUT.

The Reading Railroad in the Hands of a Receiver.

Philadelphia special: The most tremendous shock the railroads and business circles of the East have experienced in many years was caused by the sudden announcement that the Reading road was down at last. Since the great slump of last week on the New York stock Exchange traders hostile to the road have predicted its speedy downfall, but there was still great confidence among Philadelphia holders that the weight of capital behind the Reading would carry the road through the crisis. The strain was too much, however, and the management succumbed. The attorneys for the road appeared in court and asked that a receiver be appointed to take charge. A. A. McLeod, Chief Justice Edward Paxson, and E. P. Wilbur were appointed receivers and the offices have been turned over to them. The news has caused a frenzy of excitement in the city.

The collapse of the combine has already caused a number of failures. In New York W. F. Russell and T. F. Delaney, two big traders in the Consolidated Exchange, have gone under. Other smaller failures are reported.

New York special: The Philadelphia and Reading railroad is in the hands of a receiver. Its credit and its power in the financial world are gone and the ownership of its panic-blown, widely scattered stock is unknown. The rise and fall of one of the most extensive and ambitious railroad corporations ever attempted are embraced in the comparatively brief period of one year and a fortnight. It was just a year ago this month that the formation of the great Reading-Jersey Central-Lehigh Valley alliance was publicly announced. Railroad men and Wall street financiers were surprised and impressed by the magnitude of the combination. In mileage it was the largest railroad system in the East and its ownership of coal mines made it apparently the arbitrator of the coal markets of the country.

ROASTED.

Eighteen People Burned in Far Away Hungary.

Buda Pesth, special: A carnival dance was given in Duetsch Pereg. When about 100 persons were dancing in in the hall, on the first floor, a child playing in the cellar dropped a lighted taper through the bung-hole of a cask of petroleum. The cask exploded, killed the child, tore up the dance floor, and scattered the burning petroleum among the dancers. A dozen persons enveloped in flames ran for the windows and doors spreading fire and panic among the rest of the company. Half of the people in the hall were at the end from which there was no exit and as the floor on the side near the windows had been torn up by the explosion, they were obliged to run the whole length of the blazing room to escape.

Ten persons fell through to the cellar and were burned to death. Seven more, whose clothes had caught fire, died shortly after reaching the open air. Three were trampled into unconsciousness in the panic and were burned as they lay on the floor. Five men and seven women whose clothes were half burned from their backs, are in a critical conditition. Many others have slight fractures or burns. But thirty or forty persons escaped without injuries.

GOVERNOR McKINLEY

May Lose Every Dollar He Possesses.

Youngstown (O.) special: Robert L. Walker, a prominent banker and capitalist has made an assignment. The failure will be wide in its effects, involving Gov. McKinley, and the latter may lose every dollar he possesses. He has indorsed Walker's paper from $20,000 to $50,000. If it reaches over $20,000 the Governor will be ruined.

Governor McKinley was sent for and reached here in the evening. He said: "All I desire to say is this: I will pay every dollar of paper that I have signed for Robert L. Walker as fast as it matures." The Governor decided to stay here attending to business in connection with the failure and will not attend the Ohio Society banquet in New York.

Judge Jackson Confirmed.

Washington special: If there was at any time a disposition on the part of the Democrats to oppose the confirmation of Judge Jackson to be an associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, that opposition vanished when the Senate went into legislative session Monday. There was not even the formality of a vote. The legislative journal was read, containing the nomination of Judge Jackson, which had previously been reported favorably, and when the President of the senate said: "If there are no objections, the nomination will stand confirmed," not a Senator opened his mouth. In this quiet way all the opposition disappeared and Associate Justice Jackson will, as soon as convenient to him, qualify for the place to which he has been appointed by a Republican President.

Avenging Brothers.

At Moberly, Mo., John Hughes, colored, made insulting advances to a young lady in the street. He was quickly arrested and hustled into the lock-up. While the attention of the guard was diverted, three unknown men, but supposed to be brothers of the young lady, entered the cell-room and literally showered bullets at the man. Four shots took effect, one entering his mouth and coming out under the jaw, and another splitting his knee cap and the others hitting him in the body. He is not dead, but will probably die. The girl's brothers were arrested. Hughes was studying for the ministry. Excitement runs high.

Shot Through the Window.

Pulaski (Tenn.) special: News reaches here from a remote part of Lewis County, about twenty-five miles from Pulaski, that two Mormon preachers who have been in that section for some time past preaching Mormonism, being repeatedly warned to leave the country, while preaching to a small crowd, were assassinated by a masked band of men, who rode up to a side window of the house in which the Mormons were holding the meeting, and, firing through the window, killed both instantly. No one else was injured. It is not known who did the shooting.

The State of Ohio to Battle the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Columbus special: Attorney General Richards is getting ready to institute suits against the Pennsylvania Railroad to oust it from stolen property taken possession of by it in Cincinnati. He has had the testimony taken by the legislative committee copied, and may this week go before the Legislature with a request for an appropriation to pay an assistant in the prosecution of the case.

Wreck on the Pittsburgh.

At Monroeville, Ind., second section of freight train No. 73 on the Pennsylvania railroad ran into the rear end of the first section, telescoping the caboose and several cars and throwing the engine of the second section off the track. On the engine were Engineer Ernest Knode, Fireman Clarence Graham and Brakeman Martin Blackford. The engine left the track and the three men were bruised and seriously burned by escaping steam. Graham was pinioned between parts of the broken engine and he died soon after being taken out. Knode cannot live as he is terribly scalded.

Another Cabinet Officer.

Mr. Cleveland announces that J. Sterling Morton of Nebraska, who visited him at his request recently, was tendered the Secretaryship of Agriculture and accepted it. Mr. Morton is one of the most prominent Democrats in the State of Nebraska. He has been in the State Legislature and was talked of as a candidate for Governor last fall. Very little is known of him in the East, but he has been a prominent figure in the West for a number of years. He owned a proprietary interest in an Omaha newspaper at one time.

Wind and Water.

Melbourne special: Steady rain for several days has caused the rivers of Queensland to rise rapidly and threaten a repetition of the recent floods. Gales have accompanied the rainfall so that between wind and water most of the railway and telegraph lines have been rendered temporarily useless. Ipswich, Brisbane, and several smaller towns are partly under water. In Brisbane some ten or twelve lives have been lost. In Northern New South Wales, the floods have done enormous damage to crops.

Why Don't They Sell?

The Columbian souvenir coin has proved a failure. Congress made a gift to the exposition managers of $2,500,000 worth of the coins, and the managers expected to sell them for $1 a piece, realizing $5,000,000. Instead of that only $826,000 worth have been sold up to date, and over $4,000,000 worth of the pretty pieces are left in kegs in the safety vaults. The coin does not seem to have hit the popular fancy to anything like the extent that its designers expected.

Gray to be Recognized.

Indianapolis, special: Hugh Dougherty of Bluffton, and James Murdock, of Lafayette, are at the Denison. Mr. Dougherty said: "Cleveland and Gray are not enemies as is reported so often, and I can positively say that Gray will be recognized in a way that will be perfectly satisfactory to himself and friends. Just what this will be I am not at liberty to state, and I cannot state at what date it will be announced." Mr. Murdock indorsed Mr. Dougherty's statement.

Run Down and Killed.

In attempting to drive across the track of the Ohio Southern railroad, near Fruitdale, Ohio, Capt. James C. Crawford and his son, William, aged 17, were run down and instantly killed. The horse was also killed and the buggy demolished. Capt. Crawford was a successful farmer and served with distinction in the Eighty-first Ohio Regiment during the rebellion. He leaves a widow and several children.

Death of Rollin Robinson.

Rollin Robinson of Palmyra, Mich., died in that city, aged 83. When a boy he worked in the Wayne Sentinel office at Palmyra, N. Y., and assisted in printing the first edition of the "Book of Mormons" or Gold Bible for Prophet Joseph Smith, who was one of the original "Three Apostles." At one time Robinson owned a line of boats on the Erie canal. He had served in the State Legislature.

President Harrison's Indianapolis Home.

J. C. Shaffer, who has occupied President Harrison's home at Indianapolis has moved out and the house will at once be repaired and made to look as much as possible like the old home as it was under Mrs. Harrison's care. The President, accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. McKee, and her children, will arrive there Sunday, March 5. Mrs. McKee will live with her father for some time.

Bluffing Again.

New York special: Charles Mitchell, the English pugilist, covered Corbett's ten $1,000 bills with twenty $500 bills, then objected to the division of the purse to be fought for and so the negotiations ended all in the air for the present. Corbett's representative was willing to allow the loser $1,000 for training expenses, but Mitchell wanted the purse divided on a basis of 80 and 20 per cent.

A Glove Man Commits Suicide.

W. C. Leonard, proprietor of the glove factory in Elkhart, Ind., was found dead in his bed. He had committed suicide by taking morphine, due to mental aberration.

Sulphite Mill Destroyed.

The Sulphite pulp mill, owned by the Richards Paper Co., in South Gardiner, Maine, was burned. Loss $200,000; insurance $180,000.

THE TOPEKA TROUBLE.

TEMPORARY SUSPENSION OF HOSTILITIES EFFECTED.

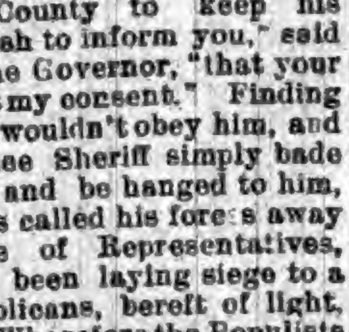
The Populists Will Not Attempt to Recapture Representative Hall, but Will Let the Courts Act—A Proposition Submitted to the Governor.

Dogs of War Called Off.

It seems now quite probable that the Kansas legislators' unrivaled specialty performance of burlesque legislation is not to terminate in red and horrent war. The comedy feature will be kept up to the close. It predominated on Thursday. The Governor, in his capacity as first officer of the State, ordered his militiamen out to protect the Populist cause, but the militiamen, though they did appear on the scene, gently but firmly declined to protect. They would go home first. Later the Governor was politely requested by the Sheriff of Shawnee County to keep his hands off. "I wish to inform you," said the Sheriff to the Governor, "that your action is without my consent." Finding that his soldiers wouldn't obey him, and that the Shawnee Sheriff simply bade him get hence and be hanged to him, the Governor has called his forces away from the House of Representatives, where they had been laying siege to a group of Republicans, bereft of light, heat and food. Wherefore the Populists will content themselves with hiring a hall down town and hold their legislative sessions apart from rude and interfering foes.

SPEAKER DOUGLASS

It would seem now that, with two houses of representatives in full blast, several armed farmers, a few troops, and the Sheriff of Shawnee, Kansas ought to be able to take care of herself. And then she has a Governor, too, albeit his subjects are manifestly disinclined to be governed. It is not likely that blood will be shed by any general collision, whatever may happen between hot-headed individuals.



REPRESENTATIVE RYAN

A correspondent says: "The spectacle exhibited at Topeka is disgraceful. The Populist party has defied the peace authorities of the county and resisted arrest. The Republicans have thrown themselves into an active and open defiance of the highest authority of the State.

THE STATE CAPITOL, TOPEKA.

Speaker Dunsmore said that the Populist House would continue to hold sessions in the basement of the State House and later, if the trouble is not settled soon, another hall would be hired. He said the House had no longer anything to do with the scheme to recapture the hall; that was now wholly in the hands of the Governor, and what he proposed to do nobody knew or could know. The serious portion of the controversy may be regarded as ended for the next twenty-four hours at least. The Governor has gone home to sleep and so has the Sheriff. The commander of the militia being no longer "in it" and being even without a base-ball bat, has nothing more to say. By to-morrow the cruel war will all be over.

The Populist House, in its session in the basement, formally resolved against the letter-carriers carrying provisions to the Republicans upstairs. The whole letter-carrier force of Topeka was employed in the work. The men, with well-filled bags, would appear in their gray uniforms and demand admittance to the state-house. United States District Attorney Ady and the United States Marshal were both on hand to see that they were not molested in their duties. They were not, of course, but it is no secret that their bags contained provender. In fact, the letter-carriers make no secret of what they were doing.

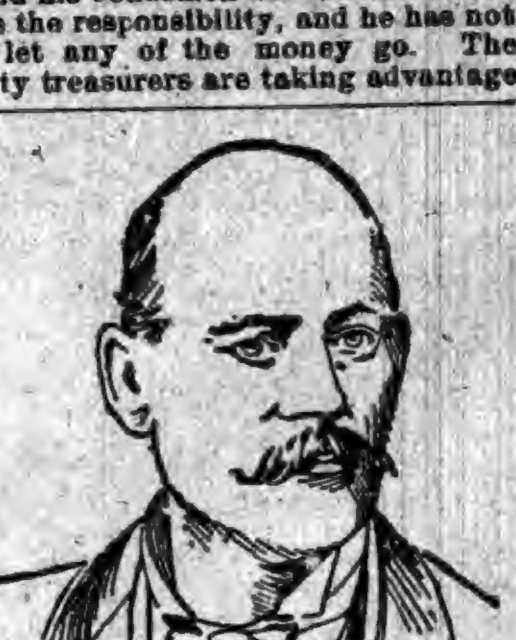
Attorney General Little said that no attempt would be made to remove the Republicans from Representative Hall by the Governor. "The Sheriff has organized a mob," said he, "and threatens to pounce down upon the militiamen in the State House. The men in the Capitol are trembling with fear for the consequences of an attack of this kind, and we will do nothing to precipitate it. The Sheriff's mob is armed with guns and clubs, and there is no telling what they will do if they should assault the military. The Populists will do business in another hall, and the military will be used to protect them there; if any attempt is made to disturb them the Governor will defend them at all hazards."

Representatives Rawson and Gruble, members of the Populist House, attended the afternoon's session. They said that sixty-four members, one more than a quorum, were present. Both of them were asked what would they do in case the Supreme Court decided the Douglass House to be a legal organization, and both replied that they would abide by the decision of the court. They insisted, however, that the court had no right to interfere.

Cause of All the Trouble.

In the present Legislature of Kansas the Senate consists of twenty-five Populists and fifteen Republicans. It is claimed that the House consists of sixty-four Republicans, fifty-nine Populists and two Democrats. On joint ballot, it is claimed, there are eighty-four Populists, seventy-nine Republicans and two Democrats. The Republicans have a majority and a quorum in the House. But the Populists allege that four Republicans who were defeated at the polls procured certificates of election through fraud and hold seats on the Republican side of Representative hall. The Populist "House" declared these Republican usurpers not entitled to seats, and seated the contestants on their own side of the hall. This action gave the Populists sixty-three members on their side, with only sixty on the Republican side. But the Republicans in dispute still sit with their side and vote. So each wing has an alleged quorum. The rival houses have been making faces at each other ever since their organization, but up to Tuesday no blows were struck.

It was announced that thousands of Republicans from various parts of the State were rushing to Topeka and will be in the ranks defending the Republican House. Along with this came the information that trainloads of Populists were expected. Another report is to the effect that the Republicans challenged the Governor to submit the legal points at issue to the State Supreme Court, and that he replied, in substance, that he would submit nothing to a Republican court. On the other hand, it is reported that he challenged the Republicans to await the passage of an appropriation act, and then test its validity in the courts. This was declined. In the meantime the Populist Legislature appropriated money for current expenses and the Republicans enjoined the State Treasurer from making payments. He is a Populist, and said he should disobey the injunction. Still, he and his bondsmen did not like to assume the responsibility, and he has not yet let any of the money go. The county treasurers are taking advantage of the confusion, and may refuse to pay tax collections to the State Treasurer.



GOV. LEWELLING.

Peffer Says "Starve the Rebels."

Governor Lewelling has been deluged with telegrams from Populists in all parts of the State tendering assistance in the way either of money or men. Among the dispatches received were the following:

Guard the State safely. Starve the rebels out.
W. A. PEFFER,
JOHN DAVIS.

Pittsburg (Kan.) is ready with 1,000 men to sustain you in standing up for Kansas.
CITIZENS' COMMITTEE.

Call on Jewell County for men or money; all ready.
C. M. ROSS,
M. R. SUTHERLAND.

Should the exigency require, Montgomery County will furnish a regiment of 1,000 men to sustain you in enforcement of law and order.
R. P. KERCHIVAL.

Miami County is with you; stay with them.
W. T. SMITH, Chairman.

ADVISES ANNEXATION.

President Harrison's Hawaiian Communication to the Senate.

The message of the President in transmitting to the Senate the treaty of annexation concluded between Secretary of State Foster and the Commissioners of the provisional government of Hawaii was as follows:

I transmit herewith, with a view to its ratification, a treaty of annexation concluded Feb. 14, 1893, between John W. Foster, Secretary of State, who was duly empowered to act in that behalf on the part of the United States, and Lorrin Thurston, W. N. Castle, W. C. Wilder, C. L. Carter, and Joseph Marsden, the commissioners on the part of the Government of the Hawaiian islands. The provisional treaty, it will be observed, does not attempt to deal in detail with the questions that grow out of the annexation of the Hawaiian islands to the United States. The commissioners representing the Hawaiian Government have consented to leave to the future and to the just and benevolent purposes of the United States the adjustment of all such questions. I do not deem it necessary to discuss at length the conditions which have resulted in this decisive action. It has been the policy of the administration not only to respect but to encourage the continuance of an independent government with the Hawaiian Islands so long as it afforded suitable guarantees for the protection of life and property and maintained a stability and strength that gave adequate surety against the domination of any other power. The moral support of this government has continually manifested itself in the most friendly diplomatic relations and in many acts of courtesy to the Hawaiian rulers. The overthrow of the monarchy was not in any way promoted by this Government, but had its origin in what seems to have been a reactionary and revolutionary policy on the part of Queen Liliuokalani, which put in serious peril not only the large and preponderating interests of the United States in the islands, but all foreign interests, and, indeed, the decent administration of civil affairs and the peace of the islands. It is quite evident that the monarchy had become effete and the Queen's Government so weak and inadequate as to be the prey of designing and unscrupulous persons. The restoration of Queen Liliuokalani to her throne is undesirable, if not impossible, and unless actively supported by the United States would be accompanied by serious disaster and the disorganization of all business interests. The influence and interests of the United States in the islands must be increased and not diminished. Only two courses are now open—one the establishment of a protectorate by the United States and the other annexation full and complete. I think the latter course, which has been adopted in the treaty, will be highly promotive of the best interests of the Hawaiian people and is the only one that will adequately secure the interests of the United States. These interests are not wholly selfish. It is essential that none of the other great powers shall secure these islands. Such a possession would not comport with our safety and with the peace of the world. This view of the situation is so apparent and conclusive that no protest has been heard from any government against proceedings looking to annexation. Every foreign representative at Honolulu promptly acknowledged the provisional government, and I think there is a general concurrence in the opinion that the deposed queen ought not to be restored. Prompt action upon this treaty is desirable. If it meets the approval of the Senate peace and good order will be secured in the islands under existing laws until such time as Congress can provide by legislation a permanent form of government for the islands. This legislation should be, and I do not doubt will be, not only just to the natives and all other residents and citizens of the islands, but should be characterized by great liberality and a high regard for the rights of all the people and of all foreigners domiciled there. The correspondence which accompanies the treaty will put the Senate in possession of all the facts known to the executive.

DOINGS OF CONGRESS.

MEASURES CONSIDERED AND ACTED UPON.

At the Nation's Capital—What Is Being Done by the Senate and House—Old Matters Disposed Of and New Ones Considered.

The Senate and House.

The Senate chaplain had the unique experience Monday morning of beginning his prayer for a legislative body not a single member of which was present to get the benefit of it. In the course of half an hour there were enough Senators present to constitute a quorum. The Senate refused to consider the New Mexico Statehood bill in the morning hour—yeas, 14; nays 33. Senator Cullom introduced a joint resolution to transfer to the State of Illinois at the close of the Columbian Exposition the naval exhibit of the United States Government as a naval armory for the use of the naval militia of Illinois, and asked to have it considered and passed. Senator Cockrell objected, saying that this was simply the entering wedge for Chicago to get everything that would be sent there for exhibition. The resolution was referred to the committee on naval affairs. The Senate then took up the Nicaragua Canal bill and Senator Frye addressed the Senate in support of the measure.

The Nicaragua canal bill was before the Senate Tuesday for a couple of hours, but was then laid aside so that the sundry civil appropriation bill might be proceeded with. The canal bill was the subject of two speeches and of a running discussion, in which Mr. Sherman, who is in charge of it, took a leading part. After a short conflict between the Democrats and Republicans of the House the Democrats were obliged to yield gracefully and to agree to the terms which the Republicans presented. These were that general debate on the invalid pension bill should be continued until the minority was accorded six hours debate. During the discussion of the bill in committee of the whole, Mr. Hatch indirectly gave notice of the course which he would pursue in reference to the anti-option bill. He had, he said, waited patiently for days in order that the consideration of the appropriation bills should be completed. But he now gave notice that unless the appropriation bills were disposed of in a reasonable time he would ask for the consideration of a measure (the anti-option bill), which, being a revenue bill, had a right of way.

The Nicaragua canal bill, though having the advantage of being the "unfinished business," had to give way Wednesday in the Senate to the sundry civil appropriation bill. All the amendments to that bill reported by the committee on appropriations, including the World's Fair items, were disposed of with the exception of the series relating to river and harbor improvements, and these were in full tide of debate when the President's Hawaiian message was delivered, and then, without the delay of a minute, on Senator Sherman's motion, the Senate went into executive session. The invalid pension appropriation bill monopolized the attention of the House. The general debate was enlivened by Mr. Boutelle of Maine, who made one of his vigorous and characteristic speeches, but the House at large looked upon the controversy without excitement, and it ended without any gain on either side.

The debate in the House over the pension-appropriation bill was brought to a dramatic and almost violent conclusion late Thursday afternoon by a scene which was only prevented by the Sergeant-at-arms and his mace from degenerating into an exchange of blows. The excitement was intense. The Speaker appealed to members to put an end to this most unseemly scene and take their seats; but it was several minutes before his appeal proved of any avail. When order was finally restored the House, finding it was in no temper to proceed with the consideration of the bill, adjourned. The session of the Senate was occupied in the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill. An amendment involving the continuance of the office of supervisor of elections gave rise to a long and heated political discussion.

The sundry civil appropriation bill occupied the attention of the Senate Friday. The amendment which had been discussed Wednesday, and the effect of which is to continue in force the law for Federal supervision of elections, was carried by a party vote. All the committee amendments having been disposed of, and the bill being open to general amendment, the question as to the issue of 3 per cent. bonds to maintain the gold reserve was precipitated on the Senate. The amendment was offered by Mr. Sherman, and a point of order was raised against it by Mr. Stewart. The point was, after discussion, overruled by the Vice President and an appeal from that decision was laid on the table by a vote of 28 yeas to 18 nays. The merits of the amendment were discussed for the rest of the day, and the adjournment came before the debate closed. The pension bill was passed by the House and went through free from the various pension amendments which have been proposed of late. It appropriates the sum of $166,400,000 for pension payments during the next year. It is the largest pension item on record, and, indeed, the largest appropriation of any kind which the House of Representatives ever made. There were no personal conflicts on the floor, although there was a strong undercurrent of bad feeling. In four or five instances a passionate word would have worked the trouble. The postoffice appropriation bill was considered without final action.

The Senate Saturday passed, by a vote of 36 to 16, Senator Sherman's amendment to the sundry civil bill. It authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury, at his discretion, to issue 3 per cent. five-year bonds to an amount not exceeding $50,000,000, in order to recover gold to the Treasury. Senator Mills' amendment to make the bonds redeemable at the pleasure of the United States was defeated; as also was one offered by Senator Stewart providing that the bonds shall not be deposited as a basis for national bank issues.

March of Pestilence.

THE cholera has never crossed the Pacific Ocean.

IN the small-pox pestilence of 1187 over 1,000,000 died.

PLAGUE broke out in London in 962; 50,000 persons died.

IN 954 "swollen throat" plague destroyed 40,000 lives.

IN 1885 cholera destroyed 100,000 persons in Italy alone.

FIRST general plague in the world took place B. C. 767.

IN 1361 a fever in London and Paris caused fearful mortality.

ABOUT 890 small-pox spread all over Europe and North Africa.

TERRIBLE pestilence at Constantinople in 746; 200,000 perished.

A LONG-CONTINUED plague in Europe, Asia, and Africa in A. D. 558.

"BLACK MOUTH" in London in 1094; one-third the population died.

IN 1172 Henry II. forced to evacuate Ireland on account of plague.

IN 1204 Ireland was almost depopulated by famine and pestilence.

IN A. D. 427, mysterious pestilence in Arabia; men's eyes dropped out.

THE "black death" appeared in Italy in 1340. Spread all over Europe.

IN A. D. 250, 5,000 persons died daily at Rome. Total deaths, 1,000,000.

FAMINE and plague in Ireland in 1095; one-half the population destroyed.

IN A. D. 252 great pestilence throughout the Roman Empire; 3,000,000 died.

IN A. D. 430, dreadful plague in Britain; the living could not bury the dead.

IN 1349 Britain and Ireland visited by black death; 2,000 deaths daily in London.

PLAGUE in London, 1111; men, cattle, fowls, and dogs died with same symptoms.

ALEXANDER of Tralles, A. D. 525, mentioned a visit of cholera to Greece in 521.

IN A. D. 569 small-pox prevailed in Arabia and the East. Great mortality.

MORE THAN A BILLION.

Present Congress Beats Its Predecessor in Appropriations.

The Fifth-second Congress has seen the billion-dollar appropriation of its predecessor and gives promise of going over thirty millions better, says a press dispatch. Lest some should doubt the assertion that this Congress will also be known as a billion-dollar affair a few figures may be quoted. They were obtained by the correspondent from the appropriations committee and are accurate. They show that the appropriations for the first session of this Congress were in round numbers $507,000,000. The appropriation bills for this session have not all passed the Senate, but they have all passed the Democratic House, and as they will undoubtedly be increased by the Senate by probably ten millions—it is certain they will not be decreased—they are safe for the purpose of conservative computation.

How the Figures Look.

There are thirteen of them and in round numbers they are:

Legislative bill	$21,000,000
Sundry civil	39,000,000
Diplomatic	1,528,000
Military Academy	430,000
Postoffice	82,869,000
Indian	7,535,000
General deficiency	20,950,000
District of Columbia	6,733,000
Army	24,202,000
Pensions	166,400,000
Fortifications	21,000,000
Naval	21,234,000
Agriculture	3,196,000
Permanent appropriations	115,468,000
Total	$531,545,000
Appropriations last session	507,000,000
Grand total	$1,038,545,000

Such are the figures. If at the conclusion of the present Congress they show there is any change in the various sums the changes will in every case be increased. The correspondent sought an expression of opinion from the leading Republican and Democratic members of the appropriations committee. Mr. Dingley, Republican, of Maine, and Mr. Dockery, Democrat, of Missouri, both of whom will fight for the reputations of their respective parties at the drop of the hat. Mr. Dingley said: "I think that it can be stated within reasonable certainty that the appropriations for this session will reach the sum of $531,000,000. And as the appropriations for last year were $507,000,000 the total for the Fifty-second Congress will amount to $1,038,000,000, as against $988,000,000 made by the Fifty-first Congress, an increase of about $50,000,000, which is represented almost entirely by the pension appropriations."

Mr. Dockery, the Democrat, said: "The appropriations at the first session of this Congress amounted to $507,701,380.57, and the probable appropriations of this session will be about $537,000,000, or a total of $1,038,000,000 in round numbers."

Mr. Dingley's statement that the total Republican appropriations for the last Congress were only $938,000,000 is disputed by the Democrats, who claim that in addition to that sum the Fifty-first Congress passed the direct tax bill and the bill for back pay and bounty claims. The sums necessary for those bills were not known then, but they were to be paid whatever they turned out to be, and they were found to amount to over eighteen millions in all, of which three millions were for back pay and bounty claims bill. At any rate, the present Congress has exceeded in its appropriations its predecessors, and will be referred to by posterity as Billion Dollar Congress II.

POPULISTS TO GET EVEN.

Will Try to Call Back Appropriations to Several State Institutions.

Topeka, Kan., special: A Populist member said he would do all he could to secure the passage of bills withdrawing appropriations for the State University, State Normal School and other institutions that sent young men here to help defend the Republican house. Adjutant General H. H. Artz said that in less than six months he hoped to have the Kansas state militia in such shape that when he should call for the aid of troops he would have a thousand men on whom he could depend to obey orders.

It was rumored about town that Governor Lewelling had been assassinated. Sheriff Wilkinson and some deputies went to the Capitol immediately, but found no truth in the report. The scare started from the fact that a man, who is believed to be only half-witted, had threatened to shoot the Governor on sight. The fellow is still here, but has not been placed under arrest, as the Governor does not think it necessary. The Populists have created something of a sensation by the announcement of their intention to move the State capital from Topeka to Salina. About $100,000 is said to have been subscribed for this purpose and twenty-five acres of land have been given.

JUSTICE JACKSON CONFIRMED.

His Nomination Indorsed by the Senate Without Even the Formality of a Vote.

If there was at any time a disposition on the part of the Democrats to oppose the confirmation of Judge Jackson to be an associate justice of the Supreme Court of the United States, that opposition vanished when the Senate went into executive session Saturday afternoon. There was not even the formality of a vote. The executive journal was read, containing the nomination of Judge Jackson, which had previously been reported favorably, and when the President of the Senate said "If there are no objections the nomination will stand confirmed," not a Senator opened his mouth. In this quiet way all the opposition disappeared, and Associate Justice Jackson will, as soon as convenient to him, qualify for the place to which he has been appointed by a Republican President. The injunction of secrecy was not removed from the proceedings.

RECEPTION FOR HARRISON.

Arrangements Being Made to Welcome Him on His Return to Indianapolis.

The Indianapolis admirers of President Harrison are arranging to give him a reception when he returns from Washington. Several club organizations will take part in it. The arrangements are in charge of the Columbus Club, and meetings of special committees were held for the purpose of taking the preliminary steps in the matter. There will be addresses of welcome by prominent members of the party, and the clubs will join in a street demonstration. It is said that the President has discouraged the efforts of his friends to show their appreciation, but has not positively declined the proposed honor.

How the World Wags.

FLOODS have inundated parts of the city of Middlesborough, Ky.

ARIZONA offers $3,000 for the body of Kid, the outlaw, dead or alive.

MANY buildings have again been flooded at Port Deposit, Md.

IT is reported that the plan for a New York brewery trust has failed.

A TERRIFIC hurricane has swept the Samoan Islands. Many buildings were destroyed.

FIRE destroyed Schmidt's wall paper store at Crookston, Minn., causing a loss of $16,000.

REAR ADMIRAL A. L. CASE, U. S. N., died at his home in Washington. He was 80 years old.

A ST. LOUIS firm shipped four car loads of fireworks for the inauguration display at Washington.

ROASTER AND BAKER

IMPROVED
ROASTER & BAKER
FOR MEATS, FOWL, FISH, ETC., AND FOR BAKING BREAD, CAKES AND PUDDINGS.
BEST SIMPLEST AND CHEAPEST

THE STEAM produced by the process of cooking cannot escape, is absorbed by the article in the roaster, and acts as a basting. There is no evaporation, no drying up or burning, hence no shrinkage or loss of weight, and all the flavor and nutritious qualities of the food are retained. Tough meats are made tender, and any article roasted or baked will be sweeter, healthier and more digestible. Put the food in the roaster, place the roaster in a well heated oven; the roaster will do the cooking. It requires no attention. Can only be bought from dealers, the trade supplied by:

CHEMICAL CLAIRVOYANCE.

The Story of a Man Who Knew of the Morrow, Written for This Paper.

BY EDWARD S. VAN ZILE.

Toward the end of the opera Danton, whose gaze had for a moment sought the stage, felt that the girl was looking at him. He turned and their eyes met. Did a faint tinge of red suffuse her cheeks? Perhaps so. There is a peculiar magnetism sometimes existent between two persons that overleaps the bounds of ceremony and causes kindred spirits to recognize one another in a way of which "society"—that hypocritical prude—would not approve. Danton felt in some mysterious manner that this woman had found in her momentary glimpse of a stranger a sensation new to her. Was it conceit, coxcombry, the egotism of a man unused to the ways of the world that had brought him this conviction? Perhaps the sequel of this story may answer the question.

Danton returned to his rooms that night in an agitated state of mind. His ambition which had been heretofore engaged only with the acquisition of wealth now took on a new direction. Riches became in his eyes simply the tools by which he might effect a purpose near to his heart. The face of the woman he had seen gazed at him in the darkness and he determined to make her his wife. A reckless and romantic decision, perhaps, but Danton was not a common-place man and at that moment the poise of the scholar had been overcome by the passion of a lover. His French temperament had been toned down and subdued by his hermit life at Heidelberg, but a volcano is never rendered less powerful by long suppression.

After a few hours of fitful sleep he awoke at daybreak. He dressed hastily and entered his labratory. His experiment upon the success of which he now felt so much depended, required a few hours of careful preparation before its crisis could be reached. He lighted his pipe and began his task. His heart beat high with hope. The art he employed did not enable him to produce the image of an entire newspaper, but he felt confident of photographing the page he desired. After he had made every preparation he entered his bedroom and found a morning journal tucked beneath the door. Feverishly he cut out the page bearing the quotations he needed for a basis of comparison. He had decided to speculate in mining stocks, as he had noticed that the market had shown great fluctuations of late in certain securities and he wished to make his coup as effectual as possible.

Danton had reason to believe that in his present effort to take advantage of the Professor's teachings he was playing his only card. The fear had come to him that the delicate art which he thought, when he left Germany, he had mastered, was apt to play him false at any moment. The chemicals with which he was now working had been given him by the Professor, but the accidents of yesterday had nearly exhausted them. His aged teacher had refused to give him certain formulæ, but had told him that he had said enough to enable Danton to pursue his studies in the new photography alone. The young man doubted this and felt convinced that his one chance for fortune lay in the success of his present experiment.

He re-entered his laboratory with nervous step. His hand trembled as he took up the glass pane bearing the last drops of his precious drug. In his excitement he almost dropped the plate. After he had placed it upon a table, with a microscope beside it, he drew up a small desk and laid thereon a pad of white paper. Then he returned to his bed-room and swallowed a generous dose of brandy. He felt the need of a stimulant at the great crisis now upon him. Locking the door of his laboratory behind him he darkened the room and stood ready to peer into the future through a magnifying glass.

"Thank God! I have won the day," he cried, as he looked into the microscope and saw that his chemistry had accomplished his design.

"There are to-morrow's mining stocks. Quick! Let me take them down."

Upon the pad of white paper he hastily wrote the quotations before him. Then, as he was about to turn away, curiosity seized him and again he examined the upturned page of to-morrow's newspaper. A telegraphic dispatch attracted his attention. It read as follows:

"TUXEDO, N. J.—Yesterday afternoon a strange occurrence took place here. A man leaped from a passing train at the station, rushed through the entrance to the park, in spite of the guards, and made a mad break for the lake. He was pursued, as it was thought that he must be a crazy man or an escaped criminal, but he was not overtaken before he had performed a most heroic deed. By a remarkable coincidence he reached the lake just as Miss Rivington, daughter of E. B. Rivington, the railroad millionaire, had broken through the ice and found herself in imminent danger of death. The unknown man jumped into the water, and, at the risk of his life, saved Miss Rivington from an awful fate. Nothing is known about the rescuer, but he is a gentleman, evidently sane. He is not an acquaintance and he refuses to give his name. His opportune arrival is looked upon as a miracle."

As Danton read the last word the vision vanished in the glare of phosphorescence, and, hastily throwing up the blinds, he seated himself upon a chair. His face was pale and beads of perspiration covered his overhanging forehead. He knew that he was the man referred to in that dispatch. There was something uncanny in the thought that he had been directed, as it were, by supernatural means, to sacrifice his quest for wealth to perform a Quixotic and perilous deed. But there was no doubt in his mind that he was the man who should leap from a train at Tuxedo that afternoon. He did not seem to feel that he had any choice in the matter. Listlessly he compared the stock quotations he had jotted down with those in the day's newspaper. Mechanically he noticed that a rise of twenty points would take place during the day in a certain stock. He realized that his $30,000 would enable him to clear a handsome fortune in this sudden bull movement, and for a moment he regretted that he possessed no friend or acquaintance to whom he could intrust the negotiation. Then he looked at his watch, glanced over the time-table of the Erie road, which he found in the paper, and in a half-dazed way prepared for his unexpected journey. He had learned something about Tuxedo from American students at Heidelberg, and was not wholly at a loss regarding the way thither.

He was about to leave his room when the thought of his money entered his head. He could not take it to the broker's in time to catch his train, and it was not safe to leave it where it was. Unlocking the drawer of the bureau containing his little fortune he placed the notes in the inside pocket of his waistcoat, fastened his bedroom door after him and was soon on his way towards the ferry. Arriving at Jersey City he asked for a ticket to Tuxedo.

"This train does not stop there unless you are a member of the club," he was told at the office.

"Never mind," he returned, "I know my own business, do I not?"

An answer in the negative might have met this bold questioner had the ticket seller been a close observer of human nature. Does a man know his own business who gives a dollar bill to a bootblack, buys a novel and leaves it in the waiting room and acts in a general way as though he had left his reason on the other side of the river?

Danton entered the train in a curious state of mind. He felt as though he had been driven forward by an influence he could not resist. As he leaned back in his seat and reviewed the events of the morning, he began to realize that his course illustrated the arguments of fatalistic philosophy. His inability to resist the power wielded by the dispatch snatched from to-morrow's newspaper convinced him that man is not a free agent. He was obliged to go to Tuxedo. It was not a question of inclination but of necessity. He had laid his plans to make a fortune, his experiment had proved successful; and here he found himself rushing through the dreary wastes of New Jersey toward the highlands of New York, the unwilling instrument of fate. He wondered if he was weak-minded, if his will was less strong than that of the average man. Then he found himself thinking of Miss Rivington, whose life he was ordained to save. Was she as handsome as the girl he had seen at the opera? Would she be grateful for his inexplicable arrival? Would she feel that an introduction was the necessary prelude to his heroic interference? What would he do if the Truxedo people looked upon him as a madman?

"Tickets!"

He handed the conductor his cardboard.

"Are you a member of the Tuxedo Club?" he was asked.

"No."

"We can't stop there. You should have waited over a train."

Danton was not surprised to hear this. He knew that he must leap from the train, according to the programme laid out for him by his infernal photography. For an instant he regretted that he had ever met the Heidelberg professor. Then his mind took on a more practical cast, and he asked a man near him about the station at Tuxedo, how soon they would reach it and whether they passed it full speed.

"Don't yer try to jump the train, stranger," said the good-natured farmer to whom he appealed; "'tain't safe. Ef ye vally yer life ye'll stick right here."

Danton smiled and moved forward to the smoking-car. Lighting a cigar he watched the dreary landscape until the train was well up among the hills of Orange County. Then he hastily stepped from the car to the platform, threw away his cigar, buttoned his coat tightly around him and at an opportune moment sprang to the ground from the scurrying train. He was stunned for an instant, but, gaining control of his senses by a mighty effort, was rewarded by a sight of a gray stone entrance to his left, which he rightly conjectured to be the gate to Tuxedo Park.

CHAPTER III.

Danton paused for a moment, as though to collect himself for a mighty effort. Then he started at high speed full towards the entrance. A man in uniform barred his path, but he knocked him aside boldly, and ran up the winding road. He could hear behind him the hue and cry caused by his unceremonious methods, but he did not fear pursuit. Had not the dispatch assured him that he would not be overtaken?

Where was the lake? The question worried him somewhat as he rushed forward in spite of his fatalistic conviction that he would find it at last. But it is not pleasant to be an intruder in a half-wild domain and under pursuit as an escaped convict or madman, and his present peculiar position annoyed him. What if his morning's experience had been a dream—a vision called up by nerves unstrung? What if there were no lake, no Miss Rivington, no life in peril?

Still he urged forward, panting now a little as the ascent grew more bitter, and longing for some indication that a lake and labor lay before him. Still could he hear the shouts of his pursuers, and still his heart sank with the dread of ridicule. But see? Before him lies a sheet of ice imbedded in the bosom of the hills. He springs forward with a cry, and turns from the road toward the lake. His shout is answered by a wailing note that seems to shiver through the woodland and die in dismal echoes against the distant shores. In another instant he stands upon the bank, and right before him the water ripples above the ice, and a black hole ten yards from the shore bears an ominous look.

Danton does not hesitate. He knows that beneath the sullen water before him there is the form of a maiden whose life depends upon his bravery. Throwing aside his hat and coat, he rushes out on the crackling ice. Then as he feels his foothold sinking beneath him, he plunges headforemost into the gurgling pool. A moment later he comes to the surface and in his arms he bears a burden hard to sustain in that deadly hole. The ice breaks beneath his hand as he grasps it. He struggles toward the shore, but the weight of the senseless women against his shoulder renders his efforts feeble and unavailing. Even at such a dread moment Danton was able to observe that the woman he was trying to save was the same whose radiant beauty had thrilled him at the opera. Her auburn hair touched his face, her rounded figure reclined on his breast, and even the icy chill of those cruel waters could not prevent the warm blood from surging to his heart as he looked down upon her peaceful face. Death in such company would lose half its terrors. Of such is the kingdom of love.

But they were not to die. The guards who had pursued Danton had reached the shore, and, with some difficulty, succeeded after a time in dragging the young man and maiden from their perilous position. Both were insensible when they were laid upon the bank, and it was not until some hours afterward that they were pronounced "out of danger." When Danten came to himself, he found that he had been taken to the club house and given the most careful attention. By his bedside sat an elderly gentleman who eyed him kindly.

"Thank God, you are yourself again," exclaimed the old man, taking Danton's hand. "You have saved my daughter's life at the risk of your own. How can I express my gratitude?"

"This is Mr. Rivington," remarked Danton, as though in reverie.

"Why, how do you know?" asked the gray-haired man in astonishment.

"By chemical clairvoyance," answered Danton, to himself, closing his eyes and feigning sleep.

A few hours later he sat before a blazing fire in the magnificent hallway of the club house. He had eaten a handsome dinner and was puffing a cigar in tranquil enjoyment. A number of men had gathered about him, anxious to find out who this heroic stranger was.

"Gentlemen," he said, "my name is Maurice Danton. My grandfather was a New-Yorker fifty years ago. I am a student, a Heidelberg hermit. I know nothing of your ways or the life of the New World. You wonder how I happened to jump from a train and reach the lake to-day at an opportune moment? That is my secret. You will respect it, I know."

He looked around upon his auditors smilingly. There was a murmur of applause, and one impulsive listener seized Danton's hand.

"You're a good fellow, old man, and what you want to keep to yourself you shall. But it's queer, you know—it's queer.

Danton knew it was, so kept silence.

It is not often that the Tuxedo Club rejoices in a sensation peculiar to itself. The Danton-Rivington affair was, therefore, a delectable morsel, partially because of its mystery and partially because the vulgar world outside would never understand its full significance. Danton at one bound had become a hero to the inner circle of American society, and his first evening at Tuxedo was rendered as pleasant to him as possible.

"Mr. Danton," said a fine-looking man to him about 10 o'clock, "if you are not too tired, I should like to have you join me and a few good fellows at my cottage. We are going to make a night of it over champagne and poker. Perhaps you would rather rest after your exciting day. If not, I should be pleased to have you accept my invitation."

"I will go with you gladly," returned Danton, who knew that he was in no condition to sleep. Approaching Mr. Rivington he said:

"I trust, sir, that your daughter is well forward on the road to recovery."

"She is sleeping quietly, my dear fellow. She has asked me to see to it that you call upon her to-morrow. You will give her that pleasure?"

"Indeed I will," answered Danton, bowing and rejoining his host for the night.

Danton knew little about poker. He had played the game now and then at Heidelburg with American students, but had never mastered the fine points of the pastime. But to-night he was in an excellent mood. His brain was feverish and he felt a strange sense of power that did not desert him after he had imbibed several glasses of champagne.

There were four in the party; the host, a wealthy bachelor of fine bearing; a younger man just out of college, an elderly club man anxious to pay his dues from his winnings at cards, and Danton. They began their game at 11 o'clock. At 1 o'clock gains and losses stood about equal and the old man began to grow querulous.

"Let's raise the ante and the limit," he suggested, and his proposition met with unanimous applause.

The youngest man of the quartette, a blonde, insipid youth, imagined himself in love with Helen Rivington, and the fact that Danton had saved her life filled him with jealousy. Having come into a fortune of three millions, he felt that any opposition to his wishes was an insult; and in Danton he perceived an obstacle to the highest ambition of his soul. In these degenerate days harmless weapons are used in society, and Helen Rivington's lover longed to defeat Danton at a game of cards. There was a time when even a blonde, insipid youth would draw his sword and fight for the lady of his choice.

"This is a jack pot," said the host at length.

"Stand," said Danton.

"I'm in," cried the college graduate, flushing slightly.

"We're all in," continued the host, after a nod from the elderly roisterer.

The betting began in a lively manner. Danton knew that he held a strong hand, and his confident manner served him in good stead. He had made a number of misplays, and his present apparently reckless backing of his cards urged on his rivals in the hope that he had made another mistake. After a time there were over $7,000 on the table.

"My cash is out, but here's my note," said the host at length raising the last bet.

Danton took a roll of bills from his pocket and counted out $10,000. His companions looked at him in astonishment. Even at Tuxedo a man who can throw thousands of dollars upon a table at a crisis is a rarity.

"Raise you ten thousand," said Danton, calmly.

He had placed his opponents in an unpleasant position. They had already risked a large sum of money, and naturally disliked to sacrifice their wagers on what might prove to be a "bluff." There was also reason to believe that Danton did not know enough about the game to play it with success. However, the host and the man of years withdrew, and left the field to the unavowed rivals for the hand of the rescued girl.

"See your ten thousand, and raise you another ten," exclaimed the blonde youth recklessly, scribbling a few lines on a piece of paper.

Danton calmly counted out another ten thousand in bills, and then raised his opponent five hundred.

"He weakens," thought the insipid lover to himself. "See your five hundred and raise you a thousand."

"See your thousand and raise you another thousand," remarked Danton.

"Gentlemen, this must stop," exclaimed the host, excitedly. "You may both be worth millions, but I don't like to see so heavy a game played in my rooms."

"Very well," said the young man, writing another I. O. U. "There's your thousand, Mr.—Mr. Danton. Call you."

"I have four jacks," said Danton, throwing his cards upon the table.

"The devil you have," cried his opponent, who held a full house and felt confident of victory.

Danton gathered in his winnings quietly. He did not like this method of making money, but he was not an ideal hero and preferred success to defeat in any line of endeavor. Perhaps, after all, a man who is willing to employ chemical clairvoyance in a mining speculation is not apt to feel squeamish when he gains a small fortune at poker.

CHAPTER IV.

The following morning Danton awoke to find himself famous. His heroism as a life-saver had made him popular; his prowess at poker had made him respected. A man who carries a fortune in his pockets and risks it boldly is a novelty in the emasculated East. Even in a Colorado mining-camp Danton's manipulation of his four jacks would have made him a local celebrity.

There were other reasons for his cordial reception the next day. Some of the old-timers at the club house remembered his grandfatecr and had helped his father to dissipate his heritage. One young man who had been educated at Bonn had heard of Maurice, so our adventurer's story was confirmed and his claim to recognition established.

About eleven o'clock he met Miss Rivington in the parlor. She was very pale, and dark circles beneath her eyes told of a sleepless night. She came forward and gave him her hand.

"How can I thank you?" she asked, smiling.

"By permitting me to see you often," he answered boldly.

Danton had grown worldly-wise in a day. He was now worth enough money to satisfy a modest ambition for the time, and he had determined to return to Germany some day and obtain from the professor a few more phials of clairvoyant fluid. With his present capital, another glance at the stock quotations of the future would render him a worthy son-in-law for Rivington, the millionaire.

"I will do that gladly," returned Miss Rivington, blushing slightly as she seated herself on a sofa and motioned him to her side. "I think we will be good friends. Gratitude is a firm basis for friendship, is it not?"

"Perhaps so until we can find better."

She looked at him earnestly. Their eyes met and Danton smiled almost triumphantly.

"We have seen each other before yesterday," he remarked.

"Yes—once," she said in a low voice as though she were confessing to a priest. Then, after a moment of silence, she asked:

"Will you not explain the mystery to me?"

"What mystery?"

"Your question is evasive. What mystery is there but one? They tell me that you jumped from a passing train and rushed wildly toward the lake. How did you know that I was in peril?"

Danton turned red and glanced at her uneasily. If he told her his story she would think him a mad man. But how could he explain his peculiar deed? He realized that his advanced science would seem absurd to her. Finally he said:

"Some day I will tell you how it happened. At present I feel as though I had not known you long enough to permit me to be frank with you."

She frowned slightly. Her curiosity was aroused, and she was used to having her way.

"I thought we had sworn to be friends. Surely frankness is essential to confidence.

Danton's cheeks flushed and his eyes glowed as he looked into her fair face.

"Bluntness is almost too coarse an instrument with which to carve the form of friendship from the cold marble of social intercourse," he remarked.

"I forgot your French origin," she returned; "you prefer epigrams to truth. May I ask what tools you will use in forming friendship between us?"

He smiled at her question.

"I see you are determined to cut my secret from me with the deep edge of your wit. I fear I must surrender."

"You are a strange man. You did not hesitate to save my life, but you are not willing to satisfy my whim."

"Is it nothing but a whim?" he asked, in a tone of disappointment.

"No, it is not. It is something I cannot explain. I know you think me rude; but place yourself in my position. I see a man at the opera one night whose face has a peculiar fascination for me. Don't blush. I am frank, if you are not. I have never seen him before, and never expect to see him again. But I cannot help thinking about him, and I come up here to get him out of my mind. Then at the moment when I have given up all thoughts of life, he comes to me, as though by a miracle—and—and——"

Her voice died away in a sob. Danton took her hand and his heart beat wildly as he gazed into her tear-dimmed eyes and said:

"A miracle, indeed. The miracle of love. I am frank, now; too frank, I fear, but I cannot remain silent. I love you. I loved you when I saw you that night and I love you now with a passion against which ceremony, precedent, all the barriers of society cannot avail. Are you angry with me?"

She trembled slightly, looked down for a moment in a helpless way, then threw her arms around his neck and kissed him.

The heavens had opened for Danton, and before him lay the paths of Paradise. What if society did gossip and grumble? What if Mr. Rivington frowned and stormed? What if their love was only three days old? Was it not strong enough to defy all opposition and vindicate itself before the world? What think you who have followed Mauric Danton from Heidelberg to Tuxedo?

Historical Data.

Historical data consists of many things other than manuscripts or books. Monuments evidently of very ancient date have decipherable inscriptions which have no doubt been quite well translated and which tell of antiquity long antedating Homer. At the beginning of this century the most learned men had so little corroborative evidence of the authenticity of the Old Testament that they gravely doubted that authenticity. Ancient history then had little that appeared trustworthy farther back than three or four centuries before Christ. Up to that date people other than the Jews were regarded as mythical at best. But in 1799, when a French engineer discovered the Rosetta stone, he found with it a key to Egyptian history and civilization antedating the Old Testament by more than 2,000 years. This was the beginning. In 1842 Batta discovered Sargon's palace at Khorsabad. In 1845 Layard uncovered Assurnatsirpal's palace at Nimroud, and later, in 1853, Sennacherib's palace at Nineveh, to be followed in 1873 by George Smith's discovery of Assurbanipal's library of 30,000 volumes at Nineveh. Following these discoveries came the decipherment. Grotefend was the first to interpretet the Persian signs, and Rawlinson deciphered the Behistun trilingual inscription. The Assyrian wedge-writing, too, gives the literature, historical, mythological, commercial, geographical and international, for all the period covered by the Old Testament history. We therefore now have much illustrative of the Old Testament narratives.

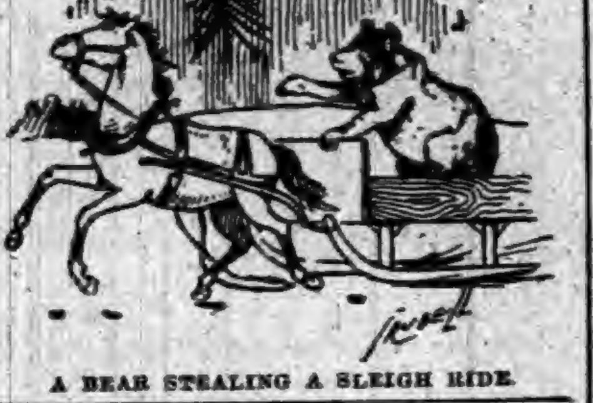
INVESTIGATORS now agree that electricity, magnetism, heat and light are all manifestations of one element or force in nature, and such manifestations can be transmuted one into the other. Electricity can be transmuted into heat and heat again into electricity and electricity into power, and power, or force which moves material objects from one place to another, can again be transformed into heat, light etc.

NOTHING has been heard of late from the weather sharp who thinks the winters are growing milder. He may have been frozen death.

A BEAR STEALS A RIDE.

It Gets Into a Sleigh and Beats the Horse Into a Gallop.

A bear stealing a sleigh ride was one of the novel sights witnessed in Sullivan County, Pennsylvania. Lumberman J. Dayton Desmond, of Summit Level, tied his horse, which was hitched to a rickety pung, near a spruce tree plantation at Sundown Hill and went into the woods to examine the timber. When returning to the rig he heard the horse snorting and on coming into full view discovered a bear vigorously belaboring the animal. The bear had torn the blanket off the horse and had thrown the seat out of the pung. Before Mr. Desmond reached the scene the horse broke his fastening and dashed away, the bear all the time striking the animal with its paw as though it wanted to ride faster. Mr. Desmond took up the seat and gave pursuit, catching up to the horse on the side of a steep hill. He dealt the bear a severe crack on the head, and in its rage the bear's forefeet broke through the bottom of the pung. While struggling to disengage itself the hind feet also passed through, rendering the beast powerless. A farmer at this juncture came on the scene and on stopping the horse which, on reaching the top of the hill, began to run again, upset the pung. The bear disengaged itself from the wreck, but was followed and killed.



A BEAR STEALING A SLEIGH RIDE.

Jones and Son.

There was a good deal of sickness in the neighborhood, and little Willie Jones was feverish. Mrs. Jones was attending him. Jones, himself, could hear the goings on from his den down stairs.

The first thing he heard distinctly was a loud, explosive "No!" Then some words of gentle persuasion, and again "No! No! Naw-o-o!"

"Just one little spoonful, Willie!"

"Naw-oo! O-o-hoo! Naw-oo-hoo! I d'waanter! I d'waanter! I d-whuh-pip-bip-waanter! !"

Jones rapidly ascended the stairs.

"What's the matter with him?" he said, quietly, to Mrs. Jones.

"I can't make him take his medicine."

"Let me try."

Jones made a great show of putting the medicine away for good and all, but he slyly transferred a spoonful into a tumbler. Then he stepped over to the water faucet and turned on the water full head.

"Boy's throat is parched and dry. What he wants is clear, cold water: not medicine. He's thirsty, that is all!"

Then with the medicine diluted in a glass half full of water Jones walked wisely over to the boy's bed.

"Here, my little man," he said, breezily, "Don't want the bad medicine, do you? Take a drink of cold water."

Willie silently pushed the glass away.

"O, see here! Papa came way up stairs to give you this. Take a drink, little man."

Willie silently pushed the glass away.

"Take a little for papa," said Mrs. Jones.

"I'll manage him all right," said Jones, in an undertone. "Here, Willie!" he added, with a trace of severity in his tone, "I want you to drink a little water."

"I d'waanter!" replied Willie.

"But you must. Come, now."

"Don't be cross with him, papa; he isn't well."

"That's the reason I want him to take it. Here, young man! No more fooling now! Open your mouth and take some med-water."

"I d'waanter! I d'waan—"

There was a struggle. The glass clicked two or three times against the boy's set teeth and as many times the water ran down over his chin. Willie was red and wild looking. So was Jones. Arter a time Mrs. Jones remarked, quietly:

"I don't think you can do anything with him that way."

Then Jones stood erect.

"I don't think," he snapped, "that anybody can do anything with him, anyway. You humor him and coax him and he rides over you. By and by there'll be no living with him. Mebbe he is a little bit sick, but, Great Scott! he'll be sicker if he doesn't take his medicine. He needn't be a mule because he is sick."

Jones set the glass on the mantel and went down stairs.

Twenty-four hours later Jones sat in a big chair with his hands in his trousers pockets and a surly gaze fixed on the ceiling.

"Are you ill to-night?" asked Mrs. Jones, after he had remained in that position for a trying length of time.

"No!" It was a simple answer, but very prompt and emphatic.

A few moments later Mrs. Jones lowered her book again.

"What is wrong, Henry?" she tenderly inquired.

"Wrong? Nothing."

A little later Mrs. Jones dropped the book to her lap for the third time.

"You swallow as if your throat was sore," she said.

"I guess I'll live," replied Jones.

"There! Your throat is sore and I knew well enough it was. You must take a hot drink and go straight to bed."

"I'll take nothing."

"But, Henry, you'll be down sick if you don't. Let me make you some hot lemonade."

"No!"

"Why, you must take something, Hen—"

"I tell you I don't want any hot drinks, and I don't intend to take any, and that settles it."

And Jones didn't take any hot drinks, and that night he had a fever, and once when his mind wandered Mrs. Jones heard him mutter:

"He mustn't be a mule because he's sick."—Free Press.

Well, they are a few from a long list of distinguished writers of fiction who are under agreement to write for Town Topics (Weekly) and "Tales from Town Topics" (Quarterly). Each week's issue of Town Topics will contain a short story and one or two chapters of a novel from one of these great authors.

Town topics is enlarged to 32 pages, so that this improvement—the introduction of the highest class of stories—can be made without curtailing the many other features of the journal, which have made it the greatest weekly for the entertainment of men and women—people of culture—ever published.

Tales from Town topics, the now world-famed Quarterly will hereafter contain in each number, in addition to the many excellent things culled from past years' issues of Town Topics, a complete original novel. To secure the best, a prize of $1,000 is offered.

No one who enjoys the highest class of fiction, and would be au courant with all that pertains to good society, can afford to be without Town Topics every week. There is so much interesting reading in it and in the "Tales," that a club subscription to both will supply any family with abundant reading of the most entertaining character all the year.

A WYOMING lady has been drawn on the United States jury.

SUNDAY, Pope Leo celebrated the fiftieth year since he became a priest.

NORTH DAKOTA has elected a straight out democrat, W. N. Roach, U. S senator.

CONGRESS may possibly have an extra session of a few weeks, beginning in March.

GOLD is going out of the country and the government is going to issue fifty millions in new bonds, to buy up that much gold.

GOV. MCKINLEY is financially ruined by the failure of Robert L. Walker of Youngstown, for whom he had endorsed many notes.

J. STERLING MORTON of Nebraska, will be secretary of agriculture in the cabinet. He was democratic candidate for governor, and claims to have originated "arbor day."

FOUR years ago Cleveland left a surplus of 100 millions. Harrison has spent this, and the treasury must now issue new bonds to get money. Republican incompetency.

JUDGE JACKSON, the democratic U. S district judge, selected by Harrison to succeed Lamar, on the supreme bench, was last week confirmed by the senate without opposition.

THE figures show that the comparative cost of procuring gold and silver, is about the same as the ratio of their coinage value, viz., 25 8-10 to 512½, the number of grains of each that make a dollar.

DEMOCRATS now have 44 senators out of 88, which with the vote of the vice-president gives them a majority no matter how the populists vote. But the latter will be with us on tariff reforms at least.

THE legislature of Wyoming has adjourned without electing a senator. The governor will appoint one if he finds he has the power to do so, and as he is a democrat, that will secure one more democratic senator.

SINCE writing our article on "Bleeding Kansas," we learn that what we predicted in that item, really happened, and that the courts decided that the republican House was the legal one. It will be carried to the supreme court.

GEN. BEUREGARD is dead. He was one of the most famous of the rebel generals. His most noted fight was Shiloh, where he commanded after Gen. Albert Sydney Johnston was killed. Lately he has been president of a railroad.

THE legislature will probably pass the anti-railroad insurance law asked for by railway employes. There is likely also to be a law compelling all fast trains to stop at all county seats. This would be good news to Albion, and nothing more than justice.

JUDGE JAMES S. FRAZER, of Warsaw, is dead. He was once a supreme judge of this state, and was the American commissioner to adjust the Alabama claims, the English commissioner being Right Hon. Russell Gurney, and the third was Count Louis Corti, of Italy.

THERE is a bill in the legislature to legalize the incorporation of Ashley, as it appears there was some doubt about it. Our readers of course know that the town is on both sides of the county line. DeKalb county has given its authority to the incorporation, but Steuben has not.

SEVERAL legislatures have passed bills against the wearing of hoop skirts. We see that our own body of lawmakers has started the same silly business. It fairly makes one blush to think that in this day and age, lawmakers would descend to such a level as seek to control dress or food. What next will they do?

OUR school book law has been amended by the legislature, in such a way that the books can be sold by retail dealers instead of by trustees. The dealers get 10 per cent for handling, 5 to be paid by the school board and 5 by the company that has the contract for furnishing the books. This is a fair plan, for the dealer should have something for his trouble, and yet the individual buyers get the books at the same low rate as before. The people of Indiana should be proud of their school book law, given them by a democratic legislature.

HON. M. F. FRANKS, our representative did a very sensible thing last week, by voting to restore the appointing power to the governor. Dr. Teal did the same. The power to appoint officers, etc., to places in the various state institutions should remain with the governor as he would have to dismiss them if they proved incompetent. But if the legislature made the appointment, and the appointee was a failure, the legislature would not be in session to dismiss him. Besides, the governor would be more apt to make a good selection. If the legislature were to select, one member would vote for a pet of another, in order to get a vote for some pet of his own. And perhaps neither of their pets would be fit for the place. We earnestly hope the governor may again be made the sole agent for these appointments and then be held responsible for them.

HON. L. E. CHITTENDEN, who was registrar of the treasury under Lincoln, has an article in the Independent of Feb 2, in which he relates how he learned by an actual experience that it was the custom of anyone receiving a subordinate appointment in the government service to pay one-half of the first year's salary to the person procuring the appointment for him. He says he got no credit for refusing to receive this customary reward, but on the contrary, was regarded as a very foolish man who had neglected his opportunities. It would be interesting to know if this custom still exists. If it does, it affords some explanation for the unseemly fights often made for the dispensing of patronage. Here is a good field for investigation by the civil servece commissioners. If the custom still exists and the facts can be ascertained, Mr. Cleveland can be depended on to put an end to it.

THE QUEEN of the Sandwich Islands and her niece in England, who by law is to succeed her, have both sent very sensible letters to the president of the United States asking for fair play. They ask what have they done, that a U. S. minister at Honolulu should have soldiers landed from a U. S. war vessel, and force the queen to abdicate. All fair minded Americans will demand the unfortunate queen has an impartial hearing, before our government takes any decided action. We believe the United States should have the controlling interest and influence in the Islands, but a great and powerful nation like this should not take any unjust course toward a weak, but friendly power. We hope and believe, however, that a day is coming when the United States will own the Sandwich Islands. We believe too, that the great country north of us, Canada, a country as large in extent as our own will also some day be a part of this great union, whose "manifest destiny" is to occupy all of our North American continent.

A True Case of Animal Magnetism.

The Loudonville, Ohio, Advocate of Feb 9, has the following strange item:

George Andress, now deceased, had a little dog named Dick, rather a pretty animal, that he was very much attached to. When George would come in off the road and go to bed, the dog would immediately jump in after him. Nothing strange was ever noticed about the animal, until George was taken seriously ill, when the dog took sick also. As Mr. Andress' sufferings increased, so did the dog's. For two weeks, up to the time of George's death, the dog showed every symptom of suffering that his master did. Finally at 10:15 Saturday night, the dog died. At 10:30, fifteen minutes later, George Andress passed to the unknown beyond.

It should be added that the George Andress named, was a brother to our friend S. J. Andress of Jackson township. His brother died Feb. 5th, and was buried the 7th, as will be seen from the following notice taken from the same paper:

Ex-Sheriff R. F. Andress, of this place received a telephone message from Galion last Sunday morning bringing him the sad intelligence of the sudden death of his brother George which occurred in that city on Saturday night from heart disease. The deceased was employed on the Erie railroad as fireman and was a very stout and robust man. The funeral was held Tuesday, the remains being buried in the cemetery at Galion.

Our Women Violinists.

"The development of violin playing among women in America and Europe, in recent years, has been most remarkable. In addition to the number of very successful professional violinists, there are many young society girls who play remarkably well," writes Frances M. Smith, in a beautifully illustrated article in the March New Peterson. "Many fair wielders of the bow have arisen, and it seems almost that we are returning to the times of long ago, when ladies of high rank and station used to charm away the hours by playing on the violin and viol. Poor Anne of Cleves, after her divorce from Henry VIII, amused herself by playing on a sort of viol; and Queen Elizabeth had a violin."

Where They Came From.

Angola Herald:—The statistican of the Michigan City Dispatch, has been digging up some interesting prison news lately. In a recent issue he says: "The birthplace of each of the 763 convicts in the penitintiary proves an interesting study. Of course the home product predominates, but a total of 29 states and 11 foreign countries are represented. The figures are as follows:

Indiana, 357; Arkansas, 1; California, 2; Colorado, 1; Connecticut, 4; Georgia, 3; Illinois, 35; Iowa, 5; Kentucky, 42; Kansas, 1; Louisiana, 1; Maryland, 3; Massachusetts, 6; Minnesota, 1; Missouri 12; Michigan, 16; Maine, 3; Mississippi, 3; New Mexico, 1; New York, 39; New Jersey, 6; North Carolina, 4; Ohio, 91; Pennsylvania 31; Tennessee, 6; Texas, 2; Virginia, 5; West Virginia, 3; Wisconsin, 6. Total, 690.

The foreign-born members, 73, are as follows: Canada, 11; England, 10; France, 1; Germany, 26; Ireland, 18; Italy, 1; Prussia, 2; Russia, 1; Scotland, 1; Sweden, 2; Switzerland, 1. Grand total, 763. Of this number 121 are colored."

Davenport the druggist.

It does the work. Mr. Chas. Goebel, Gaylord, Michigan, says; "I am asked, 'Did Brant's Balsam do you any good?' Well, I should say it did! LaGrippe left me with a serious cough and lung trouble, for which I took about all the cough remedies I had ever heard of, without benefit. Mr Russell, our druggist, suggested Brant's Balsam. As it was a large bottle for 25c I took one. It helped me: I used six bottles and was cured completely. (Cost $1.50.) Can heartily recommend it; it's a great medicine." 25 and 50c bottles at F. E. The big snow storm that came up last Friday, covered up the icy roads again and turned the bare places into good sleighing again. Still, the sleighing had remained good most of the way, and sleighs were running all the time. It has been many years since we have had as much good sleighing as we have had this winter.

The Knights of Pythias listened to their regular annual sermon Sunday forenoon. It was delivered by Mr. Healy at the Presbyterian church, which was crowded full by the Knights, their friends and the usual congregation. The sermon was one of unusual eloquence and power, and the Knights gave every word the closest attention. We hope to see them there often.

Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Yesbera gave a delightful reception to the Jolite club at their spacious home on West Seventh street, Friday evening. Of course there were present, also many other friends, and all passed the evening so pleasantly that the fleeting hours seem all too short. Then there was a splendid lunch, the preparation and serving of which did the host and hostess great credit. They were unanimously voted splendid entertainers.

Baltzer Koontz at Spencerville, in sending in his subscription to pay to '94 adds that in his dealings with the COURIER for nineteen years he has found square dealing. We appreciate this compliment all the more, because it comes from one who has always dealt honestly with us. A subscriber moved away lately, owing us more than three years on the paper; another who owed more, died, and went to——, but neither one bore the honored name of our friend at Spencerville.

The protracted services at the Lutheran church closed Sunday evening with much success. Eight joined church Sunday, making forty five in all since the meeting began. During the 18 months that J. D. Brosy has been pastor of the Lutheran church he has received sixty-two persons into church fellowship. It was said that the communion services Sunday, were the largest ever held in that church, one-hundred and eight having communed. This is encouraging indeed.

Our St. Joe correspondent has an interesting article from the famous "Ulster County Gazette." Of course the copy he speaks of may be a genuine one, but it should not be forgotten that the country was flooded a few years ago with millions of copies taken from the original, by the very modern process of photography, or similar recent methods.

Charlie Pommert has another interesting animal as interesting and strange as the little prairie dog. It is an opossum, a real live, rusty looking fuzzy 'possum, such as, when roasted, are the delight of the negroes down south. It is not a large one, being evidently rather young, and has seen some of the hardships of winter. But he is a genuine article.

Albert E. Smith of St. Louis, has been in the city a few days a guest in the family of Dr. James Adams. He is a bond and investment broker and dealer in real estate securities. He has made several visits with the friends here at different times, being also a relative of Mrs. Camp, formerly Miss Belle Staley, one of our teachers. He is a young man it is always a pleasure to meet.

The person who reported the Old Folks' Hop to the Ft. Wayne Journal is a good one, and ought to have a patent on the article, as most of it was invented. We name one item, where it says Mr. and Mrs. Davis, and daughter, Edna, were there. Edna was in Indianapolis visiting the family of State Pension Agent Ensley, and her parents were not present, as they are in deepest mourning over their son Fred. Other parts of the article are on the same level. We congratulate the Journal on having one item absolutely correct—the Old Folks had a hop.

Women, thousands of them, whether in society, family, factory or store, from neglect of health laws, family cares, too hard or confining work, and many causes become completely run down, lacking nervous and physical vitality, until they just drag themselves through life, feeling always tired, discouraged and lifeless. Commissioner Hoffelder and his two sons and a son of Fred. Schlosser and Mr. Reinig's son were here yesterday, taking a business look of the town.

The Fruit House at Ft. Wayne is advertising "new maple syrup" when there has not been a thaw since the spring of '92. Probably also, with this "new maple syrup" he sells a grade of buckwheat flour that is about on a par with it—not a grain of buckwheat in it. This is an age of adulterations.

A hale old man, Jas. Wilson of Allens Springs, Ill., who is over 60 years of age, says: I have in my time tried a great many medicines, some of excellent quality; but never before did I find any that would so completely do all that is claimed for it as Chamberlain's colic, cholera and diarrhea remedy. It is truly a wonderful medicine. For sale by Robbins & McCord.

Herman Groscop and wife moved to Ashley on Monday, and will make that bustling town their home. He and Mr. Lieberenz will enter into a partnership for the manufacture of brick and tile, and as there will be a vast amount of building done there this summer, a great part of which will be of brick, they will probably have a heavy business. We hope so, for Mr. Groscop is an industrious young business man, and our people would be glad to see him and his wife succeed with the best.

T. H. Sprott and his little son Jarl, are off on the great trip to Texas, an excursion in the interest of the North Galveston Association. This company is laying out a city on the mainland, across the channel which separates the old Galveston and its island from the main shore of Texas. It is bound to become a great commercial center. This is the association whose property we are advertising. Rickel & Sprott are the agents here, and are so well satisfied of its merits that they talk of establishing a branch agency down there. They know a good thing at sight.

Mr. Albert Favorite, of Arkansas City, Kan., wishes to give our readers the benefit of his experience with colds, He says: "I contracted a cold early last spring that settled on my lungs, and had hardly recovered from it when I caught another that hung on all summer and left me with a hacking cough which I thought I would never get rid of. I had used Chamberlain's Cough remedy some fourteen years ago with much success, and concluded to try it again. When I had got through with one bottle my cough had left me, and I have not suffered with a cough or cold since. I have recommended it to others, and all speak well of it. 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord.

The Hotel Opening.

The Glazier Hotel had its formal opening last Thursday evening, when about 200 invited guests and friends assembled there to partake of Mr. Glazier's hospitality, and enjoy a few hours of social recreation. All were made welcome and made to feel at home. The fine suites of rooms on the second floor, received the ladies first, and there, they were later on joined by the gentlemen. Social games, conversation and general enjoyment marked the hours as they sped away till "supper" was announced. There was a grand rush, though a perfectly good natured one, for the dining room, and this was soon filled to its fullest capacity. Three times more this was repeated, and still there was an abundance left. Everything was bright, neat and and new. Everything was fine and enjoyable, the waiters were attentive and polite, and no one had cause to complain either of the quantity or quality of the excellent spread before them. At a late hour the tables were cleared away and a few dances were indulged in by a few who cared for it. And the last guests as well as the first, were bowed politely out by the smiling host and went home feeling that Mr. Glazier deserves abundance of success in his new venture, the management of the "Glazier Hotel."

ON THEIR WHEELS.

A Tour Through Southern California on Bicycles.

Los Angeles Times—R. W. Cobb, of Auburn, Indiana, and William Noble, of this city, made a cycling run over Southern California, combining business and pleasure. Their route was via Alhambra El Monte, Pomona, Ontario, North Cucamonga, San Bernardino, Redlands, Riverside, Perris, Elsinor, Temecula, Fall Brook, Escondido, Poway, San Diego and Coronado, returning via the coast riding the beach much of the way to "San Juan by the Sea"; thence to Santa Anna and Los Angeles, covering over five hundred miles.

From what is learned these gentlemen had a most delightful experience from start to finish—"perhaps, excepting the last two days in the rain"—which overtook them at Capistrano. They; however, determined to continue homeward, and took to the railroad ties, where practicable, and finally to the country roads. Raining at intervals, the adobe roads were almost impassable, and at times, both the wheels and the wheelmen were stuck in the mud. A few like experiences were sufficient to convince the boys that anything else was better, so the foothills and grassy ravines were resorted to, and the run over hills, green pastures and beside still waters proved a beautiful ride until the San Gabriel river was reached. This was an obstruction, but had to be crossed. One of the boys took a flying start down the embankment and tried to ride the raging stream, but was capsized and got a ducking. After fording the river the roads were in fair condition the rest of the way, and the wheels brought the boys into town in quick time. Some startling accounts were given of fast rides, hill and mountain climbing. Mr. Cobb carried a kodak, and has a novel way of taking his own picture with others while on the fly or while falling over a precipice down a mountain side.

THE discovery that a gentleman perfected the incandescent lamp away back in the sixties is not surprising. Such discoveries are always being made. However, the gentleman's ingenuity in hiding his light so effectually under a bushel is almost as remarkable as the invention, and his modesty deserves more reward than an unappreciative world is likely to bestow.

A CHINESE anecdote of Buddha, to illustrate his observance of the first of "the ten precepts," "thou shalt not kill any living creature," relates that in the winter he hid a louse in the hole of a tree, wrapped it in silk and regularly fed it; that he filtered his water, not for his own sake, but in order to prevent swallowing and thus destroying any living thing in it. This shows that there may be too much of a good thing even in observance of moral precepts.

DR. SAMUEL LOCKWOOD, President of the United States Hay Fever Association, believes that the pollen grains of ragweed are the main source of irritation in cases of hay fever. He thinks that when these pollen grains settle on the mucous membrane they begin to swell and protrude a little tube or rootlet which pushes its way down into the mucous membrane, practically taking root there. Hence those localities or atmospheres which are free from such pollen are comfortable abodes for persons subject to hay fever during the season when they would elsewhere be prone to suffer from it.

SO MANY Boston physicians fell into the way of assigning heart failure as the cause of death that the Board of Health refused to accept such certificates and demanded a more exact statement of causes. They might as well have said that their patients died because they were "short of breath." The old familiar phrase as truly represents the cause of death in many cases as does heart failure. Indeed, death comes either through stoppage of the heart's action or stopping of breathing. One may take brief precedence over the other, but neither shortness of breath nor heart failure can supply a satisfactory statement of the cause of death for statistical record.

A PITTSBURG hotel keeper has been sued for damages by a railroad conductor because the night clerk failed to call the conductor for his train. The conductor missed the train and lost his job. He asks for $3,000. We believe it will be the testimony of most travelers or people living in hotels that clerks and bell boys take a fiendish delight in waking up people who leave "calls." Not only are they rejoiced to arouse the man who wants to be turned out at some unholy hour, put they include all his neighbors. In modern hotels where there is pipe telephone or telesome connection between office and rooms the business is simplified somewhat. In old-fashioned hotels, such as linger in many Southern cities, the arousing of all the guests by thumps on the door of one is a part of every night's history. The Pittsburg night clerk must have been new at the business or he would have shaken the dreams of the plaintiff guest even if he had been felled in doing it.

THE Egyptians are getting as excited as in the time of Arabi Pasha. The young Khedive, like Arabi, is being made the representative of the national longing for independence of foreign control. But the Khedive, like Arabi, must yield. England has her grip on the land of the Pharaohs, and there is no likelihood that it will be loosened in the near future. The English will probably be astonished, as usual, that the material benefits they have brought to the country do not weigh against the sentiment of nationality, but the fact that they are not popular with the people they govern will never induce them to give up the power they hold. England is in Egypt for her own profit and will stay there until the European powers are ready to fight to expel her. The fact that her rule is also beneficial to Egypt is not due more to the cold justice of the English nature than to the fact that orderly administration that is best for industry is the administration that can get the most money out of a country. Order and security bring riches, and riches bring in taxes. So Egypt will continue to be discontented and prosperous.

REPRESENTATIVE BLEECKER, of Minneapolis, introduced the following bill in the Minnesota House, and it was referred to the proper committee with instructions to report as soon as possible:

SECTION 1. It shall be unlawful for any person to manufacture or sell, or to offer for sale or to use or to permit the manufacture, sale, or use of any hoopskirt or hoopskirts or anything like thereunto within the limits of Minnesota.

SEC. 2. Any person violating this act, or in any way assisting the violation of any provision of this act, shall be punished by a fine of not less than $25 for each offense, and, in default, shall be incarcerated in the county jail for a period not exceeding thirty days.

Three cheers and a tiger for the bold Bleecker and his bill! As we say in the vernacular, that's the stuff! It may be entirely pardonable for a town to use a little bustle to extend her outskirts, but it is very different with a woman. The hoopskirt is not in harmony with the spirit of our American institutions. Its introduction would kill off the hammock industry; bicycling would lose half its charm, and men would be forced out of street cars and elevators and be obliged to walk in the middle of the street. A few months ago when the Minnesota Legislature in its wisdom saw fit to legislate against tights on the stage the country arose as one man and several chorus girls and took exceptions to the wisdom of such an arbitrary display of prejudice against high art and anatomy. Now, however, the contemplated reform touches a responsive chord in the heart of the great American public. The country is willing and ready to stand tights, but hoopskirts, never! Bully for Bleecker!

The Cat.

The Egyptians are the first people among whom we find notices of the cat. It figures largely upon the monuments as a domestic pet, and was honored when dead. Comical stories are told by Herodotus, of the anxiety to save the cats when a house caught fire, and of the grief when one died. The cat seemed to have served as a retriever in fowling expeditions, and even in fishing. It seems strange that no mention of the cat occurs in the Bible or in any Assyrian record. Professor Max Muller is quoted as saying that even in India it was but recently known as a domestic animal. Its Sanscrit name is marjara, from a root meaning "to clean," from the creature's habit of licking itself at its toilet. The cat's mousing habits were well known to the Romans, and even to the Etruscans, as shown by antique gems and even wall paintings. The mouse-killer domesticated among the Greeks has been shown by Professor Rolleston to have been the white-breasted marten. Besides the cat, the Egyptians domesticated the ichneumon, popularly known as Pharaoh's rat, which is still to be seen in houses at Cairo.

THE SHODY INDUSTRY.

DUTIES BRING PROSPERITY TO BOGUS WOOL MEN.

How Wool Tariffs Foster the Making of Cloth from the Most Filthy Rags—Hawaii and the Sugar Bounty—Pennsylvania Tariff Reform.

How Cheap Coats Are Made.

Those who think that there is no connection between high duties on wools and woolens and the rapidly growing use of shoddy and adulterated woolen goods should read the exceedingly interesting article on shoddy, in the November supplement to the New York World, by Mr. W. R. Estell.

Mr. Estell, under the auspices of the Reform Club, visited many leading shoddy factories and collected information on the most recent methods of making and using this bogus wool. He tells us that shoddy is made from every imaginable quality of woolen rags, from the new tailors' clippings to the most filthy scraps gathered from garbage barrel and gutter. After being assorted according to color and quality, they are put through the various processes employed in manufacturing shoddy.

Shoddy of the best quality is made from new all-wool rags. The rags are torn into shreds by means of a revolving cylinder, called "the devil," covered with thousands of short, sharp teeth. So close do these shreds resemble real wool that detection is almost impossible. The shoddy is mixed with a little "live" wool, spun into yarn and made into the "all-wool" suits we hear so much about. Manufacturers thus foist upon the American people clothing, which has been worn out before by four or five different people. The last appearance of shoddy as clothing is in the form of satinets, the admixture of cotton and shoddy out of which our $5 suits of clothing are made. Even then we are not rid of it, for it is put through another process by which it is ground fine as dust, after which it is called "flocks" and used for filling the cheap mattresses and pillows which the poorer people buy.

Mr. Estell also tells how the rags in which wool and cotton are mixed is subjected to various processes which have for their object the destruction of the cotton, thus leaving the wool, though in an impaired condition, yet fit to be torn into shoddy. The "union" goods, as such rags are called, are bathed in acids in some instances and exposed to gas in others. The acids and gas eat the cotton or other vegetable fibers, leaving "wool extracts."

Shoddy and "wool extracts" are made into yarn and wove into cloth. But since duties have made foreign fine wools so high that none but the rich can afford a genuine all-wool suit made of soft wools, many devices have been introduced to supply the demands for low-priced imitation fine-wool suits. One way of making "cheap coats" is to run the cloth—perhaps already half shoddy—through a "flock liquor," containing wool dust. The dust adheres to the surface and is pressed firmly into the cloth by being passed between large rolls. Another way of giving a soft, velvety texture and of adding to weight of cloth, consists of "flattening" the yarn. This is accomplished by blowing "flocks" and fine shoddy against the threads while they are being twisted into yarn. Of course cloth made of such stuff has its faults. These, however, are hidden from the unwary purchaser in various ways; the "flocked" or "fulled" sides of the cloth are pasted together and the cloth is then worked up into ready-made clothing; with openings left in the lower corners of the coats to prevent accumulations of "flocks and shoddy."

Mr. Estell shows how the growth of the shoddy industry has kept pace with the decline of the wool-raising industry, and by quotations from the manufacturers of shoddy themselves proved that "shoddy" and not "free wool" is the enemy of the wool-raisers of America. Such men as Mr. Muhlhauser, of Cleveland, the largest manufacturer of shoddy in America, if not in the world, frankly said that the admission of foreign wool into this country would mean the destruction of the shoddy manufacturing business, and better prices to the American sheep growers for their wool.

Upon this point the following evidence is cited:

The New York Press, the leader of high tariff newspapers, and then edited by Robert P. Porter, contained in its issue of Aug. 23, 1888, the following news item:

> SHUT DOWN BECAUSE OF THE MILLS BILL.
>
> The manufacturing firm of J. G. Fenning & Co., at Ludlow, N. Y., shut down their works yesterday, throwing out of employment some forty operatives of both sexes. They were engaged in exacting wool from delaines and other rag materials, to be used in the manufacture of shoddy cloth. They say the passage of the Mills bill in the lower house of Congress, admitting wool free of duty, has deterred them from continuing their industry.

The following is taken from a circular circulated in 1888 by the Republican National Committee, signed by seventeen rag and shoddy dealers:

> There is only one way to avoid this loss to ourselves, and that is by the defeat of the candidate of the free trade party, Grover Cleveland. We have determined in the coming election to support the candidates of the protection party, Harrison and Morton. Their election we consider to be indispensable to the maintenance of our business.

While in the last campaign the following, from the Johnstown (N. Y.) Republican, of July 27, 1892, is a typical instance of the straightforward and frank avowal of the direct dependence of the shoddy industry on high protection:

> PROTECTION IN AMSTERDAM.
>
> It does not require much penetration to discover that the McKinley tariff law has proved a blessing to Amsterdam. On every hand there are numerous evidences of the good effects the measure has had upon business of every kind in this now very busy manufacturing city.
>
> Four years ago there was not a shoddy or extracting mill in this city worthy the name. To-day the mill of Santa Bros. is one of the largest and best equipped in the State.

It is the high price, because of tariff duties, which our American clothing manufacturers must pay for the foreign wool which is indispensable to the manufacturers of good cloths, that drives them to the use of shoddy instead of native wool.

An examination of the statistics relating to the price of wool, and the price of shoddy as given by the American Wool and Cotton Reporter, shows that every upward stride of the manufacturer of shoddy has been followed by a decline of the price of American wools.

While prices of bogus wools have been well maintained prices of real wools have gone down rapidly and unceasingly until the election of 1892, when the lowest prices on record were reached. Since then real wools are in better demand and prices have recovered several cents per pound. With free wool our shoddy manufacturers may be expected to take a back seat and leave room for manufacturers of all-wool cloths. In a few years our farmers and laborers will be indulging in as comfortable clothing and blankets as are now common in nearly every other cold and civilized country.

Pennsylvania Tariff Reform.

The Philadelphia Record, a good tariff-reform paper (except upon the coal combine, the sugar trust, and the textile, glass and iron industries of Pennsylvania), estimates that duties of 1½ cents per pound on sugar, 2½ cents on coffee and 5 cents on tea would yield an annual revenue of $80,000,000, and that these duties would "constitute the basis of an ideal tariff for revenue only." It admits that "political protectionists, of course, would furiously assail this policy, and dolefully lament over duties that rob the people of a 'free breakfast table;'" but says that "if they should really desire a free breakfast table let them move for the repeal of the high duties on earthenware, glassware, table cutlery, table linen, napkins and all other taxed accessories of the American citizen's morning meal." It thinks that the "tariff beneficiaries, whose interests deserve consideration, recognize that the only alternative lies between this ideal tariff for revenue and a ruthless cutting of protective duties." "These protectionists would prefer moderate revenue duties on sugar, coffee and tea to a sudden and sweeping removal of protective duties upon textile fabrics of every description, products of iron and steel, earthenware, glassware, etc., and their interests therefore will bring them, in spite of themselves, into acquiescence in the Democratic tariff policy."

The Record professes to believe that this policy will not make good Democrats of the beneficiaries of protection, but will just please the American people who "have never quarreled with taxes that go directly into the public treasury."

And this is the way the Record interprets the results of the election: The people want to pay higher duties, do they, and treat the protected manufacturers with such kind consideration that all will become good Democrats? Their main object, then, is to build up a Democratic party by protective tariffs to please the manufacturers better than McKinleyism! We beg leave to differ from such Pennsylvania steeped-in-protection conclusions. They may be partly right in theory, but they are practically and politically all wrong. The people drew no fine-haired distinctions between revenue and protective tariffs. They voted for lower duties to get relief. They all use sugar, tea and coffee, and will see and feel any tax that any party may hereafter put upon these articles. The name of the party that will do so will be "Mud."

Wool Is Booming.

Prospects for free wool are having an effect upon the market not anticipated by McKinley and his political wool-growing friends. Since 1890 the wool market has been flabby and prices have declined to an unprecedented extent. Since Nov. 8, however, the market has shown more life, and about the middle of January prices began to rise. By the end of January they had advanced 2 or 3 cents per pound on Ohio fleeces and many other grades. Here is the way the American Wool and Cotton Reporter of Feb. 2 opens its wool trade page:

"It is doubtful if there has been any previous time in a year when dealers in wool have felt better than at present. This is a market in which one may let a customer go out and feel that another will soon come in; it is very strong, both statistically and in accordance with laws of supply and demand.

"The strong features noted last week, ending Jan. 24, have been more marked during the week under review, some kinds of wool being higher than quoted at last writing; Australian, for example, has developed more strength, and Ohio fleeces are a cent better even than reported for the week ending Jan. 24; XX is worth 31 cents; there are, at date, free inquiries all along the line for Ohio wools, which are not obtainable in considerable quantities; many houses accustomed to handle Ohio wool have not a fleece in store; those who have any possess small stocks, for which they are asking full prices; 30 cents has been repeatedly declined during the week, one of the largest mills in the East having offered to take all that might be furnished at that figure."

Hawaii and the Sugar Bounty.

Hawaii produces about 265,000,000 pounds of sugar annually. It has been suggested, with some apprehension, that if we extend a protectorate over the islands, or in any fashion attach them to our territorial possessions, we shall have to pay to the producers of this sugar the same bounty which we are now paying to sugar-growers here. At that rate the bounty on Hawaii's sugar would amount to more than $5,000,000 annually.

But there is no occasion for apprehension on that score. Whatever we may do with respect to Hawaii, we are not going to annex a new sugar-bounty charge upon the Treasury. On the 4th of March the Government of the United States will pass under control of a party which utterly repudiates the policy of taxing the people for money with which to pay men for engaging in unprofitable business. The Democratic party is not going to extend the sugar bounty. It is going to abolish it.—New York World.

THE only tin-plate mill in operation now is the McKinley plant, that grinds the tax out of the American consumer.

Things Which Have Lately Happened Within Its Borders—Some Pleasant and Some Sad Reading.

White Cappers Get It.

The first White Cap case ever tried in Perry County terminated very hard for the defendants at Cannelton. It will be remembered that about a year ago Lewis and Otto Faulkenborough, Ed O'Keith, and Hinton Carr visited the house of John Underhill, about midnight, with the avowed intention of whipping Underhill. Otto broke down the door with a rail, then the four men rushed in on Underhill and gave him a terrible beating. At the last November term of court Carr confessed to the Prosecuting Attorney, therefore he was made a State witness and allowed to go free, and, in consequence the defendants' bond was increased from $500 each to $1,000. The other day the two Faulkenboroughs pleaded guilty in open court. Otto tried to implicate a man by the name of Marsh Land, but the other two defendants said Land was not in the crowd. Otto got five years and a $200 fine. Sentence was suspended as to Lewis on account of he being a minor at the time of the offense, but he was ordered to pay the fine. Otto is considered one of the hardest men in Perry County. He had many enemies, few friends, and his friends only consisted of men like himself, or men who feared him.

MORTON JONES, a young farmer, six miles north of Frankfort, met with a fatal accident. His horses ran away, throwing him against a tree, in which position the rear wheel of the wagon struck him, crushing him to death.

AS A result of the recent gas explosion at Lebanon the Lebanon Light, Heat, and Power Company is made defendent in a suit by Martin Hohl for $25,000 damages; $15,000 for personal injuries and $10,000 for damage to his property.

AN infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Weesner of Sumerset, was burned to death. The little one was playing about the house, and grasping a lamp on a stand, pulled it over. The oil took fire, and, flaming up, burned the face and breast of the child. She died.

MISS MAGGIE DUGAN, daughter of John Dugan of Plainfield, who, with her sister, was injured last summer by a Vandalia train east of this place, is losing her mind. It is thought that the constant brooding over her injuries, which destroyed her handsome appearance, is the cause of her dementia. Miss Dugan was a bright, intelligent woman, and her present pitiable condition is deplored by her hosts of friends.

THE other morning the dead bodies of John Osterman, a farmer living ten miles east of Fort Wayne, and his wife were found in bed at their home. At first it was supposed to be a double suicide, but on investigation by Prosecutor Colerick and Coroner Kessler it developed that Osterman poisoned his wife and himself. A week ago he went to Fort Wayne and stole a steam guage, and it was found in his house. It is supposed he feared arrest, and put arsenic in the coffee at supper. The old folks, both being over seventy, were destitute. The house they lived in was a hovel and barren of furniture. During the past winter they suffered, not for fuel, but because the only stove they had was almost worthless.

THERE are two lawyers and two preachers among the convicts at the Northern Prison.

THE other night a gang of thieves failed in an attempt at robbery at the home of Farmer John Lindsay, near Muncie. A wagon was driven to Lindsay's barn, and over $100 worth clover and timothy-seed loaded in ready to be carted away. As the men drove off the rear axle of the wagon broke in two. The thieves were badly scared by the noise made, hurriedly unhitched the team of horses, and left the wagon and contents. Mr. Lindsay is now searching for the owner of that wagon.

INDIANA LEGISLATURE.

THE only business transacted in the Legislature Monday was the passage of two constitutional amendments by the House. The first provides that hereafter corporations shall pay taxes on the gross receipts. The second amendment provides for extending the legislative session from sixty to 100 days, making extra sessions when called to be of forty days' duration. The amendment providing for the extension of terms of all county officers to for years was defeated.

THE House, Tuesday, ordered the co-employes' liability bill engrossed. Among the Committee reports was one from the Committee on cities and towns, recommending Mr. Bodabaugh's charter bill for Fort Wayne and another favoring his annexation bill. Both reports were approved.

There will be fewer long-winded speeches in the House hereafter. Mr. Ader offered a resolution, which was adopted, limiting all speeches on committee reports to five minutes, and on engrossment and third reading to ten minutes.

The Senate killed a number of unimportant bills that came up on Committee reports, and spent the balance of the day discussing the Building and Loan Association bill, which was finally ordered engrossed with a few minor amendments.

IMPORTANT action was taken by the Senate, Wednesday, in engrossing the bill incorporating loan, trust, and safety deposit companies and enabling them to act as trustees of the estates of deceased persons and as guardians of persons of unsound mind, etc. The Senate also took approving action on the bill giving minority parties the right of representation on election boards.

The House approved a resolution looking to the appointment of a special committee to investigate and report on fees and salaries.

The House struggled for several hours over the Senate bill providing for elections but once every four years in cities and towns and making present offices hold over till 1896. By a close shave the bill reached engrossment.

The general appropriation bill was introduced in the House by the Ways and Means Committee, and was made the special order for Friday at 2 p. m.

The House called up the majority and minority reports of the committee on the bill appropriating $50,000 in aid of the National Encampment, G. A. R., and the majority report, recommending an indefinate postponement, was approved by a vote of 51 to 45. This settles the question of State aid in the negative. A bill has passed the House, however, empowering the City Council to levy a special tax of $75,000 in aid of the proposed encampment.

The House passed the bill creating the office of Boiler Inspector and calling for the inspection of all steam boilers in the State.

IN the Senate, Thursday, Magee's bill, making it unlawful for Warden's of prisons to let the labor of convicts to contractors at less than 95 cents a day was ordered engrossed without division. Among the bills passed in the Senate was one making it unlawful to practice pharmacy without a certificate to be issued by the Circuit Court Clerk on diploma from a college or school of pharmacy; increasing the jurisdiction of the Appelate court to cover cases involving $3,500 and enlarging its jurisdiction in misdemeanor cases, and fixing the rate of interest on Congressional and common school fund loans at 6 per cent. A bill was introduced and pushed to engrossment in the Senate which is approved by the State Board of Charities, and looks to the abolition of corporal punishment in the prisons, except in extreme cases.

THE bill extending the time of all officers of cities, towns, and corporations to 1894, and making the terms four years thereafter, was called up and pushed to its passage in the House. Evansville and Indianapolis of the cities of the State are alone exempt.

The Speaker laid before the House the majority and minority reports, the first suggesting amendments which exempted the librarian, engineer, and custodian of the Capitol Building from appointment by the Governor, while the other recomended an indefinite postponement of the whole business. Debate was cut off under the previous question, and on an yea and nay vote the Governor won by a majority of 61 to 33.

TWO IMPORTANT amendments were made to the school-book law in the Senate, Friday. One amendment permits the placing of school books contracted for in the hands of the local dealers instead of being furnished directly to the County Superintendent or Township Trustee. The dealer is prohibited from selling in advance of the contract price. Another amendment gives school commissioners the right to make changes in books, so as to bring them up to the required standard.

Senator Boord, the youngest man in the Senate, introduced a bill to prevent the manufacture and sale of "hoop-skirts" in the State. The bill declares that the fashion of wearing "hoop-skirts" was revived by a combination of fashion producers and dress goods manufacturers, the hoops requiring more dress goods and creating an unnatural demand, and that women were compelled to wear them for fear of being ostracised by society in general. The penalty of violating the law was fixed at a maximum of $1,000 fine with thirty days' imprisonment.

The House took another whack at the bill wiping out the Pennsylvania Central Insurance business, and it undid the work by which the question of insuring with the company was left optional with the employe. This is the second time the bill has been reconsidered, each time with different results.

The co-employes liability bill was passed by the House, 69 to 17, without discussion.

Consideration of the general appropriations has gone over until Monday.

Minor State Items.

CHARLES KOHLMEYER, a young farmer of Knox County, was killed by being kicked in the breast by a Texas pony.

THE Wabash Hospital at Peru, has about thirty patients, the largest number that has been confined there for some time.

A LEAGUE of young ladies has been formed in Shelbyville with thirty-one signers up to date, who say they will not wear hoopskirts.

JOHN HEISHMAN, near Corydon, had his left leg so badly crushed in a hay press that amputation was necessary, and he died from the effects of the operation.

MOST of the negroes along the Mississippi river are grossly ignorant. It is said that not one in twenty has any practical knowledge of reading or writing. Many of them get in arithmetic no further than the single record—as a memorandum—of a number which they usually put down exactly as spoken; thus, 200502 for 252. In consequence some of their pretty cotton accounts look as big as a national debt statement.

A Stupendous Bridge.

A bridge across the Firth-of-Forth, Scotland, is projected, and, indeed, is already under way, which, if finished, will be one of the most remarkable bridges in the world. The main girder will be within a few feet of a mile in length, and will rest upon cylindrical piers, each of which will weigh 16,000 tons. It will, of course, be high enough for all vessels to pass underneath, and about 42,000 tons of steel will be required in its construction. The estimated cost will be $7,500,000.

THE Asiatic breeds and also the Plymouth Rocks are too large and coarse to fry after they attain their growth. The Leghorn family, however, are different, they being better when pretty well grown than earlier. The Minorcas, Black Spanish, and Leghorns are the best breeds for eggs.

THE goose lays about twenty eggs, but at times they will reach as many as forty. Four weeks are about the time for incubation, or, rather thirty days, and the market is more favorable to geese under one year of age.

The Old Venetian Carnival.

The carnival then lasted six months, and masking was a universal habit. It has been said that in the beginning the mask was a token of fraternal condescension on the part of rich and noble toward their inferiors. It leveled all ranks, like the grave, though in a more agreeable manner. But this utopian justification of it soon passed out of date. It became instead the very best possible vehicle for intrigue and social corruption. That in effect was what it was. During carnival time no one thought of going out of doors except in disguise. The maid sent on an errand must first don her mask—of which no doubt, her lover, or lovers, had the key. The mother with a child in her arms masked both herself and the child.

Was John Bunyan a Gypsy?

In the St. Mary Magdalene's (Launceston) parish register (Vol. I, fol. 74) is this entry, in 1586: "Marche the ivth dale was christened Nicholas, sonne of James Bownia, an Egyptia rogue." This Mr. F. H. Groome offers as a fresh link in the chain of evidence that John Bunyan was a Gypsy. "Egyptia," he says, is evidently "Egyptian," and "Bownia," he asks, may it not be Bownian? If so, have we not here a veritable gypsy Bunyan? It is a far cry from Launceston, in Cornwall, to Elston, in Bedfordshire, he adds, were nomads not in the case, and, in time, the interval between the baptism and the birth of the "inspired tinker" is but forty-two years.

New Use for the Phonograph.

It has recently been stated that Superintendent Johnson of the Deaf and Dumb Institute at Indianapolis, has been making experiments with the phonograph, and believes that in connection with it he can teach the majority of the deaf mutes under his charge to talk. He finds that the instrument concentrates the sound at the drum of the ear in such a way that many of the pupils otherwise deaf are enabled to hear. He intends to carry the experiments further, and thinks the phonograph may become a means of teaching the use of their voices to some mutes whose inability to speak is due to the fact that they have never heard speech.

How We Grow Old.

The thread that binds us to life is most frequently severed ere the meridian of life is reached in the case of persons who neglect obvious means to renew failing strength. Vigor, no less the source of happiness than the condition of long life, can be created and perpetuated where it does not exist. Thousands who have experienced or are cognizant—including many physicians of eminence—of the effects of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, bear testimony to its wondrous efficacy as a creator of strength in enfeebled constitutions and debilitated and shattered systems. A steady performance of the bodily functions, renewed appetite, flesh, and nightly repose attend the use of this thorough and standard renovant. Use no local tonic represented to be akin to or resemble it in its place. Demand the genuine, which is an acknowledged remedy for indigestion, malaria, nervousness, constipation, liver and kidney complaints and rheumatism.

How She Walked.

A school teacher in one of the primary schools in Concord tells me the following: Some days ago she was endeavoring to make clear to her young pupils' mind the meaning of the word "slowly." She walked across the room in the manner the word indicates.

"Now, children, tell me how I walked." One little fellow who sat near the front of the room almost paralyzed her by blurting out:

Catarrh, Heart Failure, Paralysis of the Throat

"I Thank God and Hood's Sarsaparilla for Perfect Health."

Could Scarcely Walk

I had a very bad spell of paralysis of the throat some time ago. My throat seemed closed and I could not swallow. The doctors said it was caused by heart failure, and gave medicine, which I took according to directions, but it did not seem to do me any good. My wife urged me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, telling me of Mr. Joseph C. Smith, who had been but was entirely cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. After talking with Mr. Smith, I concluded to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. When I had taken two bottles I felt very much better. I have continued taking it, and am now feeling excellent. I thank God, and Paris Childless.

A letter says that Paris is almost childless. Tradesmen wish their wives to help in the shop, and in order that the wives may be free to do this the children are put out to nurse in the country. The same custom is general among all working people. More than fifty per cent. of the children born in Paris die in the baby-farmer's hands, this correspondent declares, before they have reached their second year. Forty creches have been established in the city, but the counter-influence of these has been trifling. A nurse of whom no questions are asked charges 25 francs a month for the keep of a baby; those who are registered and overlooked demand 60 francs more. They find their customers among the prosperous middle classes, but the working people cannot afford to go to them.

He Got His Gold.

Two prospectors at Wilkeson, Wn., came near making a remarkable strike that might have turned the tide of gold hunters from the San Juan country. As they were industriously digging away a miner came wildly rushing upon them and began to dig into the earth less than a dozen feet away. In a few minutes he unearthed an oyster can and started off with it, chuckling joyously. He had hidden forty $20 gold pieces in the can on the hillside weeks before and believed it to be secure until he heard casually that men were prospecting there. The prospectors were within ten feet of his "hide" and digging straight toward it when he rescued his property.

The Oldest Medicine in the World is probably
DR. ISAAC THOMPSON'S CELEBRATED EYE-WATER.
This article is a carefully prepared physician's prescription, and has been in constant use for nearly a century. There are few diseases to which mankind are subject more distressing than sore eyes, and none, perhaps, for which more remedies have been tried without success. For all external inflammation of the eyes it is an infallible remedy. If the directions are followed it will never fail. We particularly invite the attention of physicians to its merits. For sale by all druggists. JOHN L. THOMPSON, SONS & CO., TROY, N. Y. Established 1797.

Salutations.

The Chinese settlers on the island of Sumatra have a strange and ludicrous form of salutation. When they meet each other, say after an absence of a month or longer, they do not shake each other's hand; they smile broadly and each grasps his own hand, shaking it vigorously for a few moments.

Dangers of the Season.

The sudden changes in weather in the latter part of the winter and early spring are a source of colds and coughs. This season is a particularly dangerous one for persons with weak lungs or of delicate constitution. A slight cold is likely to become a serious one, and the cough that follows is the one great cause of the many deaths from consumption in the early spring. Never neglect a cold or cough. Keep a reliable remedy on hand and check the first cough that may lead to consumption. As such a remedy the medicine called Kemp's Balsam is strongly recommended. For every form of throat and lung disorder, including the la grippe cough, croup, and consumption in first stages, it probably has no equal anywhere. Get a bottle to-day.

F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

Gentlemen;—I desire to make a brief statement for the benefit of the suffering. I had been afflicted with catarrh of the head, throat and nose, and perhaps the bladder for fully twenty-five years. Having tried other remedies without success, I was led by an advertisement in the Sentinel-Democrat to try Hall's Catarrh Cure. I have just finished my fourth bottle, and I believe I am right when I say I am thoroughly restored. I don't believe there is a trace of the disease left. Respectfully,

Mr. Clarey says that he would not be without the Cubeb Cough Cure for his children. Davenport, the druggist.

Bleeding Kansas.

Kansas is having political trouble almost as bad as those of the early days of that bleeding territory. They have been wrangling all winter in their legislature, having two houses of representatives. Last week they got so wide apart that the republican "house" was driven out of the state house by orders of the populist "house". Then the republican "house" armed itself, and forced away the guards stationed about the doors and halls, and got into their room again. There, they were nearly starved by the outside populists. The governor, a populist, called out the state militia and kept up a siege for a few days. In the meantime the republicans called for help from their friends over the state; then the populists called in their friends. Both sides came armed. Also the sheriff of the county in which Topeka is located called out an armed posse of 1,000 men, to secure peace and order in case there was further danger. He also had the promise of help enough from other republican sheriffs, to swell his force to 10,000. Finally the governor ordered the military to drive the republicans out of the state house, but as most of the soldiers were republicans, they refused to obey. Then the governor tried to compromise by an agreement to submit the case to the supreme court, as to which body was the legal legislature. But later on he became convinced that the decision of the supreme court would be against him, and then modified his terms. He agreed to let the republicans have undisputed posession of the representative hall, and be free from arrest or disturbance. Then he demanded and received the same terms for the populist house, that held their sessions in another hall. These terms, the republican House promptly accepted. The war was, for the time, over, and for the first time in five weeks the flag was raised over the representatives' hall. The cases in the supreme court will probably be favorable to the republicans, for the court is a solid republican body. The disobedient officers of the militia will be court-martialed and probably punished, and their conduct will prove a lasting injury to the once splendid military of Kansas.

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

1869.

The dark clouds of 1868 appeared less gloomy when the spring of 1869 dawned with bright and hopeful prospects of a rapid and healthy growth for Auburn. As if the life of the community lay in success the poor vied in liberality with the richer in pledging their resources for the railroad and the battle for this boon was fought with a self-denying courage that redounds with honor to the entire population irrespective of persons, uncalculating upon future profit but solely influenced by local pride in the welfare of the incorporation.

We have seen the town authorities offering commissions for subscription to the Jackson, Ft. Wayne & Saganaw railroad and by their substantial activity inviting the company to proceed with its construction.

The zeal of T. D. Gross was acknowledged and rewarded by his election to the office of assistant treasurer of the road. Auburn had indeed responded liberally by subscriptions amounting to $40,000 with promise of $10,000 more but the strife was not ended and victory was not assured.

It was said in the Legrange Democrat: "Is it possible citizens of Auburn are so dead to their interests as to let the road go around them and forever lose the only opportunity of securing a railroad to their village?"

Had the editor visited Auburn he would have seen no want of vitality among the townspeople but rather a deep, determination to win at all hazards. He would have seen them, calling meetings to discuss the prospects, reporting progress and encouraging further efforts and he would have learned that the all-absorbing topic of conversation on the street and in business places was the railroad and its assumed advantages to town and country.

At a special session of the Board of County Commissioners, held Feb. 4, 1869 a strong effort was made to get aid from the county. The columns of the existing newspapers in Auburn and Waterloo City contained long letters presenting arguments in favor of the movement and calling for a popular vote and there were answering letters from those opposing an appropriation; while a remonstrance was presented from Fairfield township bearing 147 signatures. The plea for help was ably presented by Messrs Smith, Cary Evans, G. W. McConnell, T. R Dickinson, W. H. Dills and others, but unsuccessfully.

The county was known to be in debt; there was urgent need of new bridges and of a home for the indigent, and these among other considerations influenced the officials who found the people restive under the losses from the robbery and consequent futile, expensive litigation, to leave the matter of subscriptions to individual enterprise that those who expected to profit should be the first to pay.

In no ways disheartened by failure to obtain aid from the county, although in taxation alone, the money would have been eventually repaid, the people of the two towns working together for a common object raised their subscriptions to the sum of $112,000. This large amount was contributed not alone by the townspeople but material aid was given by farmers residing along and near the line of the road. A marked feature of the donations was the public spirit of the poorer class who in some instances signed more than they were able to pay in money or labor and met their installments at considerable personal self-denial.

The writer vividly remembers that owing to the loss by the failure of the Hales, of the slow savings of years, he was without means to pay his installments when due and suit was averted only by his wife taking two tie contractors named George and Jacobs to board, and applying the money on the subscription.

On Feb 24th, the stockholders of the railroad held a meeting to vote upon terms of consolidation with the Michigan company. Following this action, was the location of the road through Auburn and Waterloo. At one time the line was expected to pass along the east side of Auburn, perhaps occupying Cedar street, and thereby establishing the junction at the present Wabash grounds, instead of a mile westward, but this was not to be. The line approaching the town from the north was deflected westward and the depot was located at the present freight house on the western terminus of Sixth street. In this vicinity, a tract was platted as Gross & Dills' addition, and the lots long since sold are fully occupied by neat, new buildings, the homes of our townsmen.

All difficulties were surmounted prospects brightened and ground was broken for the railroad with appropriate ceremonies on March 29th, 1869, in the city park, Ft. Wayne.

Speeches of the kind usual to such occasions were made by officials and soon contractors were at work, clearing the roadway and preparing the grade. Messrs. Gross & Gloyd contractors for sections in DeKalb county began work in June and by the middle of August had a large force upon the line between Auburn and Waterloo. At a point on this section was found one of those singular localities known as "sink holes." Several such were found to exist in the county, one on the Lake Shore east of Sedan proved a formidable obstacle in constructing that road. Much labor was required and a vast amount of filling before track could be laid and on one occasion the morning light disclosed the absence of any track, ties and rails had sunk during the night and it was long before the spot was so filled as to stand firm and secure. The old track on which trains ran around the "sink" is still plainly visible on the south side of the right of way.

Just such a sink hole on a much smaller scale, the contractors came upon and as earth was dumped in, it gradually sunk away as though dissolving below and the soil black and rank with the odor of the swamp rolled up at some distance on either side. The grade was constantly renewed by persistent labor till a permanent base was established and the trouble overcome.

Various theories have prevailed over these curious sink holes, one of the most plausible being that they are the remains of former lakes, in time encrusted by vegetation and consequent root-bound soil.

Most remember the great drift in the Red river of Arkansas, marked upon Mitchells' good, old atlas and there are considerable areas in southern Wisconsin where only the tough, root-woven sod of centuries covers and conceals the imprisoned waters of the lakes.

CORRESPONDENCE

WATERLOO.

There will be a dance Friday evening at the opera house.

Mrs. Juliette Dickinson goes during the week, to Angola and perhaps Orland to visit friends.

Mrs. Barnhart will serve a fine supper Friday evening, at Abbey's hall, for her own benefit. Charge 15 cents.

Earl Abbey has resigned his position in the broom factory and accepted a position as brakeman on the L. S. & M. S., road.

Mrs. Tillie Morrell came over from Auburn Thursday, with Mrs. Wilson to attend the L. A. S. of the Disciple church.

Mrs. Rosenberry has had a relapse, and it is considered impossible for her to recover. Her family who are not here now, have been sent for.

Several of our people went up to attend the theater opening at Angola last Thursday. Among them were J. F. Shuman and Miss Rose Blair.

Mrs. Fields, vice-president of the W. C. T. U., of Indiana will lecture Wednesday and Thursday evenings of this week, in the Presbyterian church.

Mrs. Hattie Ettinger after visiting her mother and other friends in Waterloo a few days, returned to her home in Angola the early part of last week.

William Capp of the firm, of Strow & Capp, (butchers) in this place, has been at his home in Butler, for two weeks, very sick with some kind of fever.

Tuesday there was a pleasant little company at the home of Gen. Blair, for a visit with Mrs Ida Daniels, who was at home then. Among the guests were Mrs. Barns and Mrs. Richards of Auburn, and Mrs. C. H. Jackson and Mrs. Work of Angola.

The L. M. C. held their session last week Tuesday evening with Mrs. Ida Daniels. After the usual exercises, the class were invited to remain for a time, when Mrs. D., and Miss Blair served excellent coffee, cakes and fruit, of course it was enjoyed the more for being unexpected.

William Miller, who has lived in Auburn twice, Waterloo once, Angola once and last at Kendallville, left there last week Tuesday, telling his wife, he was going to seek a new location; that she would hear from him Thursday. No letter reached her, but very soon after, persons living in Kendallville, told her of his elopement with Mrs. Jennie Young. Since then Mrs. Miller has come to Waterloo to consult Attorney Shuman. Any respectable woman is far better off without, than with such a man.

ST. JOE.

J. R. Culbertson has in his possession an old newspaper dated Saturday, Jan. 4, 1800. It has been in the family for many years, so long that it had almost become forgotten. J. R's aged mother while looking over some old relics came across this, and now J. R. is the happy possessor of one of the oldest newspapers in the country. It is printed under the name of the Ulster County Gazette, published at Kingston (Ulster county) by Samuel Freer and son, Saturday, Jan. 3, 1800, Vol. 2, Number 88. The date of the paper being so shortly after the death of the father of his country, is partly filled up with letters and other document pertaining to that memorable event. One of them we copy, giving the same just as it appears:

WASHINGTON ENTOMBED.

GEORGETOWN, Dec. 20, 1799.

On Wednesday last, the mortal part of Washington, the greate, the Father of his country and the friend of man, was consigned to the tomb with solemn honors and funeral pomp.

A multitude of persons assembled, from many miles around, at Mt. Vernon, the choice abode and last residence of the illustrious chief. There were the groves, the spacious avenues, the beautiful and sublime scenes, the noble manifestation, but alas! the august inhabitant was now no more. That greate sole was gone. His mortal part was there indeed; but ah! how affecting, how awful the spectacle of such worth and true greatness, thus, to mortal eyes. Fallen! Yes, fallen! fallen!

In the long and lofty portico where oft the hero walked in all his glory, now lay the shrouded corpse. The countenance still composed and serene, to depress the dignity of the spirit which lately dwelt in that lifeless form. There those who paid their last sad rites to the benefactor of his country, took an impressive farewell view. On the ornament at the head of the coffin, was inscribed (Surge ad Judicium) about the middle of the coffin (Gloria Deo—) and on the silver plate (General George Washington departed this life, on the 14th December 1799 ÆT 68.)

Between three and four o'clock the sound of artillery from a vessel in the river firing minute guns, awoke afresh our solemn sorrow—the corpse was removed—a band of music with mournful melody melted the soul into all the tenderness of woe. The procession was formed and moved on in the following order:

Cavalry }
Infantry } With arms reversed.
Guard }
Music.
Clergy.

Cols.				Cols.
Sims,	Pall Bearers,	CORPSE,	Pall Bearers,	Gilpin,
Ramsay,				Marsteller,
Payne,				Little.

Mourners.
Masonic Brethren.
Citizens.

When the procession had arrived at the bottom of the elevated lawn on the bank of the Potomac, where the family vault was placed, the Cavalry halted, the Infantry marched towards the mount and formed their lines—the Clergy, the Masonic Brethren, and the citizens, decended to the vault, and the funeral service of the church was performed—the firing was repeated from the vessel in the river, and the sounds echoed from the woods and hills around.

Three general discharges by the infantry, the cavalry and 11 peices of artillery, which lined the banks of the Potomac back of the vault, paid the last tribute to the entombed Commander in chief of the armies of the United States and to the departed hero! the son of Glory was set forever. No—the name of Washington the American President and General—will triumph over death! The unclouded brightness of his glory will illuminate the future ages.

BUTLER.

J. M. Lingenfelter filled the M. E. pulpit Sunday to the agreeable surprise of many.

Some of the heirs of the late Peter Jennings of Troy township, are inclined to try to break his will.

The Butler manufacturing company, under its new management, is pushing things lively and seems to have all the work it can do.

Isaac Helwig of Fairfield township, brother of our townsman, Peter Helwig, is in very critical health, and his recovery seems uncertain.

A new barn owned by a Mr. Gloye five miles southwest of Butler burned Wednesday night. Cause not known. Insured in Ohio Farmers.

The M. E. revival continues with fair success. The U. B and Lutheran friends are also having revivals. Possibly some of the meanness of the Butlerites may be eliminated.

A wedding is expected to take place between two recently separated parties on East North street this week. Their friends are preparing to celebrate the event with the music of bells and horns.

John Shull living two miles east of town died last week and was buried from the Gunsenhouser church Sunday. Rev Mr. Stone of the M. E. church officiating. Mr. Shull though known as a very profane man, was a good neighbor, honest and reliable in all his business relations.

Our people were startled again last Wednesday evening by the alarming scream of the fire whistle, and in just four minutes from its alarm, the company run the hose cart nearly two blocks, made connections and were throwing water on the building which proved to be the residence owned by Eugene Ackley of Detroit occupied by Geo Sewell, and a Mr. Brooks. Mrs. Brooks had gone to church and locked her children children in the house, and the building caught fire in her absence. Her cries were heard above all the other din, upon her return, fearing that her children were perishing in the burning building. They had been safely removed from the burning building before she got home. The fire proved a very stubborn one but was soon under control, and proved that our appliances for extinguishing fire are superior to any town in our vicinity and that the force of the stream is such as to strip the shingles from the roof or burst the doors or windows. The parties were all fully insured in J. A. Campbell's agency, except Mr. Brooks, who we believe had no insurance.

SUMMIT.

Al. McDowel of Hudson was in town Monday.

Joseph Rohm has been on the sick list the past week.

Lena Schiffli of Angola, visited her parents over Sunday.

Mrs. Sophia Beard of Auburn, took dinner with Mrs. Emma Lawson last Wednesday.

Cy. Brandaberry and wife from near Waterloo were the guests of A. Forney and wife, Sunday.

Thaddeus Thomas of Hamilton, came to town Wednesday with a smile all over his face. We guessed the reason and found out afterwards that it was true, he took to himself a wife, Olevie Grambling being the fortunate one. Rev Mr. McKee of Hamilton performed the ceremony and on Thursday they went up to Summerset, Mich., to visit F. N. Rose and wife. May success and happiness go with them through life is the sincere wish of their many friends.

Fine Weather—Easy Money.

When the combined advantages of a charming climate and opportunities for profitable investment are offered now a-days, sufficient inducement is presented to capitalists, or even small investors, to investigate the subject. The wonderful success of the North Galveston Association has been due very largely to this combination which they have been able to offer. Whether the investment is made with a view to settlement in that section of the country, or a speculative profit, the opportunities are equally good. The local agents for this company are Bickel & Sprott. The address of the General Office: The North Galveston Ass'n, Box 963, Minneapolis, Minn.

SIX SPASMS A DAY.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

GENTLEMEN: I never lose an opportunity to recommend Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine to any one afflicted with nervous complaints with the assurance that it will not disappoint them. When our boy was eighteen months old he was attacked with violent spasms. Sometimes he would have five or six spasms in a single day. WE TRIED MANY PHYSICIANS WITHOUT BENEFIT; finally our druggist recommended Dr. Miles' Restorative Nervine. We tried a bottle, and could see that he WAS BENEFITED FROM THE FIRST DOSE. We used three bottles, and I am happy to say the child was ENTIRELY CURED. We used no other remedy, and his cure is complete. He is now three years old and perfectly healthy. You are at liberty to use my name in SOUNDING THE PRAISE OF THIS WONDERFUL REMEDY.

The Girl With Many Brothers.

Brother (from the country)—How is this, Liesel? You are afraid of asking leave to go out this afternoon, when I, your only brother, have come to pay you a visit.

Servant Girl—Well, you see, Hans, I have had so many brothers calling to see me lately.

Many New Cases.

Our patrons are delighted with Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup, and they say that nothing equals this medicine for Coughs, Colds and all throat and lung troubles. Several new cases have been added to the list that have been cured, where other medicines have failed to do the work. Dr. Marshall's Lung Syrup is taking the lead for a genuine Cough Medicine, it never fails to cure, the first dose gives relief, and guaranteed to give satisfaction. Sold everywhere. Price .25, .50 and $1. 1

A Matter of Taste.

A Surprise.

Bjones—I heard your friend married a western girl.

Giles—Yes. He went to Colorado to save his lungs and succeeded only in losing his heart.

Don't get Imposed Upon.

Is a good motto to follow in buying a medicine as well as in everything else. By the universal satisfaction it has given and by the many remarkeble cures it has accomplished, Dullam's Great German blood, liver, stomach and kidney cure has proven itself unequaled for building up and cleansing your system and for all diseases arising from impure blood. Do not experiment with an unheard of or untried article which you are told is as good, but be sure to get Dullam's. All druggists keep it. $1 a bottle. For sale by Casebeer & Matheny.

Physicians Outdone.

My wife has been suffering with female trouble of the severest kind for over three years. I have paid twenty-five dollars during the last three months, and she had no relief. She had doctored continually with the best of physicians. I bought three bottles each of Dullam's Great German Female Uterine Tonic and Dullam's Great German blood, liver, stomach and kidney cure, and can say to day that she is entirely cured.

The New Great South American Kidney Cure.

The acknowledged superior care and immediate relief for all derangements, painfulness and decay of the kidneys or bladder, Bright's disease, diabetes or any complaint that hurts or despoils either of these delicate organs. This new remedy has been thoroughly tested by learned physicians and found far superior to any medicine yet discovered for quickly relieving all weaknesses, aches, pains and distresses arising from disease of any part of the urinary passages. It is a great relief for the old, middle aged and children, male or female. It relieves at once retention and pain in passing water, and it is very effective in relieving prostatic troubles in the old, and for nightly incontinence of water in children, or others, caused by weakness of the bladder. It may be worth to many a hundred times its cost. This is a remedy of great value to ladies, because they are very liable to weakness and pain peculiar to their sex. Sold by Robbins & McCord, druggists, Auburn, Ind.

What is

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Mothers' Recommendation.

We are acquainted with many mothers in Centerville who would not be without Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house for a good many times its cost, and are recommending it every day. From personal experience we can say that it has broken up bad colds for our children.—Centerville, South Dakota, Citizen. 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord.

Lawyer—Weren't you indicted once for breaking a man's skull with an ax-handle?

Witness—I wasn't convicted though. My lawyer proved that as the stick had never been in an ax, it wasn't an ax-handle.

The Hoosiers Want the Best.

"The people of this vicinity insist on having Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and do not want any other," says John V. Bishop, of Portland Mills, Indiana. That is right. They know it to be superior to any other for colds, and as a preventive and cure for croup, and why should they not insist upon having it? 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord.

"Call up my wife," said the absent-minded Chicago man.

"What number, please," was the telephone girl's reply.

Don't Grunt.

About losing sleep last night on account of that hacking cough, when Cubeb Cough Cure will relieve it in one minute. It is not a cure for consumption but affords relief, and will prevent it. Thousands of testimonials could be furnished, but you are only asked to give it a trial to be convinced, nothing will take the place of it; druggists unite in saying it gives better satisfaction than all others. F. E Davenport.

Sad, but Too True.

Many a man has gone on a moonlight sleighride expecting to get a wife before the ride was over, and has come back home sorrowful with nothing more romantic than a frozen nose.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

A Dilemma.

Mistress—Come, Anna, have you found the ribbon for my hair?

Maid—Yes, please, mum, but I have mislaid the hair.

One Minute.

One minutes time often makes a great difference—a one minute remedy for Bronchitis, choking up of the throat, lungs etc., of course is a great blessing. Cubeb Cough Cure is such a remedy. F. E. Davenport.

CORRESPONDENCE

WATERLOO.

Mrs. Ab. Kelley is visiting friends in Ohio.

The schools are having a vacation this week.

Several of our local democrats are off to the inauguration: Charles and Ab Kelley, Alfred Kepler, M. P. Barker, and C. H. Triplet.

Mrs. B. F. Kennedy went to Mt. Vernon, Ohio, Monday to meet her son George, and from there they will return together, as he has finished his course in dentistry.

Mrs. Barnhart was well patronized Friday evening. She took in forty dollars. Supper only fifteen cents. Those who attended the dance that evening took their supper with her.

The members of the L. M. C. held their regular session Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs J. U. Winslow. It was the first pleasant Tuesday for many a week. As a rule it has rained or snowed on that day for a long time.

M. Kiplinger has bought a fine building spot consisting of four lots on Maple Street next to and west of Dr. Chamberlain's property. It is said he will build a fine residence there during the summer. He was wise to purchase before the boom is fully on.

Tuesday was a regular March day. The wind blew all night. Mrs. Winslow was awakened by the smoke stack on her sitting room chimney tumbling down. It was only put up last Friday, and is the second one that has blown down within three weeks.

An agent of some of the World's fair hotels was at Waterloo this week to secure young ladies, teachers and others, to act as waiters, etc., at those hotels, and have one day each week to themselves, thus enabling them to visit the fair many days during the summer and at no extra expense.

We are glad to be able to make a correction of an erroneous statement made in these items last week relative to Mrs. Jennie Young who has been for some time attending the finishing department of one of the two certified "Pitmanic Reporting Schools" in the State. Mrs. Young has been visiting her home and family for several days, but returned on Monday to Indianapolis to continue her studies there.

Miss Katie Braun entertained a company of about a dozen to a six o'clock tea very delightfully Saturday p. m. The guests were young ladies, with the sole exception of one who was married recently. The rooms were made attractive in various ways known to womankind and brilliantly illuminated. The small tables were covered with dainty lunch cloths, and a lovely corsage boquet provided for each guest. The supper was served in courses, and in a perfect manner. The eye was feasted, as well as the taste gratified, with the luxuries, and variety and each so perfectly prepared, which made up the menu.

ST. JOE.

Willis Brown of the Hub, was in town Saturday eve.

John Springer of Payne Ohio was in town last Sunday.

Mrs. Stephen Likens was visiting at Waterloo the fore part of the week.

George W. Woodcox was at Auburn Junction last Friday visiting his son Clyde and family.

Frank Barney is quite sick owning to a hard cold and a severe attack of what is generally termed the blues.

The last township institute of this season was held at the high school room Saturday, Prof. Kœppe chairman.

Charley Koch went to Michigan about ten days ago, to stay all summer. He came back last Thursday and of course Arline was the cause of it.

The Liberal wing of the U. B. church, are having a revival at their church near Newville. Several sled loads attend from here and report large congregations.

John Furgeson and Charlie Kinsey moved last week to South Milford, John will engage in carpenter work and Charlie will work behind the counter in a grocery.

Two sled loads of young people one from Maysville and one from Hicksville together with a select few from St. Joe, had a social party at the Culbertson Hall Friday night last.

C. A. Jenkins will move this week onto the Hugh Maxwell farm five miles north of St. Joe. Mervin Widney will move on the one vacated by him, he having purchased the same from his father, O. H. Widney.

Kirk Perry of Coburn's Corners who has been sick for two or three years with consumption, died Thursday and was buried Sunday in the Cheesetown cemetery. The burial was by the G. A. R., of which he was a member.

A party of old friends from Maysville came over and stopped over at Rich Culbertson's last Wednesday night to have a good time and from accounts given by Sol. Barney they must all have enjoyed themselves right royally.

SUMMIT.

R. T, Duncan went to Waterloo Tuesday.

Ed. Hoffman's expect to move to Hudson next week.

John Baxter and wife went to Waterloo Wednesday.

Mr. Lotzenheiser from near Hamilton was in town Saturday.

Hattie Grambling visited friends in Pleasant Lake over Sunday.

Our agent Mr. Rhinefrank visited friends in Hudson last week.

Mrs. Callie Penick of Waterloo visited friends near this place Sunday.

Verren Thrasher moved on Ed. Erwin's farm two miles south of here last week.

The S. S. institute Saturday and Sunday at Barker's church, was well attended.

Mrs. Henry Lawson visited Dr. O. F. Rudolph and family in Corunna Tuesday and Wednesday.

Mort Sharp and Thaddeus Thomas with their wives, of Hamilton, were the guests of P. H. Grambling's Sunday.

Mrs. Joseph Rohm has been under the doctor's care the past week with diptheria. Mr. Rohm is also poorly.

Iowa Letter.

KNOXVILLE, Iowa, Feb. 25, 1893.

EDITOR COURIER: After having been a wanderer from home for the past six months, I would like to say to my many friends of DeKalb county, that I have returned to my home in Knoxville. Although I have had many enjoyable visits with my friends during my travels in Indiana and Arkansas, there is no place like home. After enjoying a visit of nine weeks with friends in Indiana, I returned to Knoxville, on Nov. 4, and helped elect Grover Cleveland. Although we did not carry Iowa, I did my part just the same. After our jollification we took the train for Arkansas where we spent a pleasant winter with my wife's people, where we had what I would term a mild winter, although the natives of that state, say it was the severest winter of thirty years. On the morning of Dec. 26, it was ten degrees below zero; and once in January it was six below, a thing uncommon for that country. Arkansas is a fine country to winter in. The climate is mild, and there is plenty of pure spring water and plenty of fuel, timber of all kinds and and rock in abundance. Arkansas is getting to be the orchard of the world. Fruit of all kinds does well there. We saw apple orchards that were simply immense. Taking all in all Arkansas is a fine country. We took train February 17, at 5:20 p. m., at Avoca, Ark., 327 miles southwest of St. Louis and arrived at St. Louis 7:30 a. m.; left at 9 oclock, arrived at Glenwood, Mo., at 6 p. m., making a ride of 557 miles with one and one-half hours rest, which caused us to be very tired. When we left Arkansas the frost was out of the ground and the blue birds and robins were singing their songs of springtime. We had some nice thunder showers and vegetation was starting up nicely. I will close my letter by saying we are all well. The weather for this climate is mild although the ground is considerably frozen. The general health here is good.

Yours,
S. A. SHAFFER.

Card of Thanks.

We desire to return our sincere thanks to the kind neighbors and friends who so kindly assisted us during the sickness and death of our beloved wife and mother. Yours Respectfully,

ABRAM DEPEW AND SON.

HONDURAS LETTER.

PORT BUCHARD, HONDURAS, C. A.
Jan. 16, 1893.

EDITOR COURIER:

This morning finds me well and happy writing on a box beneath the shade of a cocoanut grove. A gentle breeze is blowing in from the sea, rustling the long feathery leaves of the beautiful palms. Birds of gay plumage are warbling their morning songs. Happy contrast with the bleak cold winds that howl over your snow covered wintry land. I sympathize with you, with your coughs, colds and lagrippe, but can suggest no remedy. Yesterday Gene shot a lot of birds and we made bird soup that would delight an epicure. We have fish when we wish them. The lagoons and rivers teem with the choicest of table fish. We have rabbits that weigh 20 pounds; wild turkeys, wild hens, and many other wild fowl. Deer, warra, peccary and mountain cows are abundant. Ducks, snipe and many other water birds are plentiful. We landed here on Christmas day. We steamed direct from New Orleans to this place in five days. Had a pleasant voyage, and splendid weather since our arrival, neither too hot nor too cold, about 70 to 80 degrees most of the time. Rains quite frequently yet. Everyone is in good health and the prospect for a good crop of fruit is encouraging. The bananas I planted last June are about 18 to 20 ft. high will be ready to harvest about the first of May. About 115 men came here this time, all are now at work clearing more land to plant to fruit. This county is being much sought after by our people, and in the near future will be covered with pleasant homes of northern colonists, who find here the industrious man's opportunity: the lazy man's paradise. I send my kindest regards to all the readers of the COURIER.

Yours Truly,
JOSEPH A. SHADE.

Died.

Peter Raub was born near Delaware, York county Pennsylvania, Feb. 22, 1801, departed this life at Auburn Junction, Feb. 24, 1893, aged 92 years and 2 days.

He resided in Pennsylvania until a young man, from there he came to Stark county, Ohio, where he was united in marriage to Sophia Grim, in the year 1825. In the year of 1855 he moved to DeKalb county Ind. This union was blessed with thirteen children, nine sons and four daughters, his companion and eight children having preceded him to the future world. Four sons and one daughter and many others remain to mourn his loss. He embraced religion early in life and united with the U. B. church and lived a devoted Christian until death. The services were held at the U. B. church at Shower's Corners Sabbath at 3 o'clock p. m., conducted by Rev. A. F. McCloe assisted by Rev. Jas. Barton after which the remains were interred in the cemetery near by.

RICKEL & SPROTT, Props.

We present in this column a list which has been selected from our choicest properties, and are the best and cheapest.

TOWN PROPERTIES.

An elegant two-story frame dwelling with all necessary out buildings, small fruits and all the modern conveniences which go to make a beautiful and pleasant home. Will be sold cheap for cash, or will accept two-thirds cash; balance in one year.

A very desirable residence property on North Van Buren street. This property has good, almost new buildings, well, cistern and some fruits, and a price that will astonish you.

A vacant lot on West 7th street.

A nice residence on Seventh street right handy to schools and churches, and within a two-minutes' walk of the Court House.

A most desirable residence on south Jackson street, which we offer at a bargain, and will give the purchaser the privilege of paying out in monthly payments, if he so desires. Terms, $500 cash; balance in monthly payments.

FARMS.

We offer, first, a splendid Seventy acres in Union township, well tiled, good fences. Land that cannot be beat for gardening and for small fruits. Will sell cheap for cash, or on the most favorable terms on long time. Lays within three miles of Auburn.

Eighty acres of good land, within one mile of Newville. Good buildings, orchard, and, better soil cannot be found in DeKalb county. Easy prices, and terms to suit the purchaser.

We have a number of farms and town properties on our books, which we are not allowed to advertise, because of the simple fact, that they are offered so cheap that were it known the public would draw the conclusion that the owners are hard up for ready cash, which we all know would be a mistake.

We are agents for those lands in Kansas and Nebraska, which can be had on the most favorable terms ever offered, to-wit: The purchaser makes a small cash payment, just enough to show that he is in earnest, then yearly, thereafter, he pays (delivers at the nearest market) one-half of the crops raised on the land. If crops are unfavorable and he raises no crop, then he makes no payment that year, but is carried over until next year, and so on, until he pays out. Shall we have your application for one of these farms?

We shall be pleased to see you at any time and show, Free of Charge, any of the properties we have on our lists. Write or call on us for any information regarding rates, time of trains to any place on "God's green earth," and remember that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad pays the hack fare to all points in competition where the fare is $2. or more.

FINE PICKING OF NEWS,

AS FOUND IN ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

An Oil Pipe Line Torn Up and Set on Fire—Launch of the Great Coast Defense Ship Indiana—The Pope Angered at American Bishops.

THE INDIANA AFLOAT.

Launch of the Great Coast Defense Ship at Philadelphia.

The great battleship Indiana was successfully launched at the shipyard of Wm. Cramp & Sons Company, Philadelphia, in the presence of thousands of people, including the President of the United States, the Secretary of the Navy, and other members of the Cabinet and a large delegation of Congressmen and others. The huge coast defense ship slid down the well greased ways and struck the smooth waters of the Delaware River with a force that sent the waves high into the air. She was towed back to the wharves and in about a year will be ready for service and turned over to the Government. From early morning crowds began to gather around the works and as the day advanced the multitude increased. The river abounded with crafts of every description and almost every boat floated the national colors. The interior of the shipyard presented a scene of activity. Flags were flying from dozens of poles; the cruiser New York and cruiser No. 12, the Columbia, which was launched last July, and other ships were gaily bedecked with flags and bunting, while flags innumerable and other decorations were stretched from stem to stern of the Indiana.

Just as the 4,200 tons of steel started down the incline, Miss Jessie Miller, daughter of the Attorney General, broke the accustomed bottle of champagne, it being encased in a beautifully hand-painted and embroidered satin cover, across the bow and firmly said: "I christen thee Indiana." Whistles shrieked, bells rang and people cheered and waved handkerchiefs and flags. This demonstration continued until the ship reached mid-stream, where the anchors were dropped, but later were raised and the vessel was towed to the shipyard.

A Pipe Line Torn Up and Set on Fire.

Johnstown (Pa.) special: The pipes of the Crescent Pipe Line Company were torn up at Mowry's Mills, thirty miles from here, and 4,000 barrels of oil poured out into the creek. The depredators chopped down a number of telephone poles destroying communication, and set fire to the oil. The blazing oil destroyed a large number of bridges and much valuable timber. It is generally believed that persons living in the neighborhood who have done work for the company and claim were not paid, are responsible. These people have frequently threatened to destroy the company's property.

Secretary Noble Makes a Recommendation.

Secretary Noble, on receipt of reliable information that a large number of people are gathered on the borders of the Cherokee strip with the avowed intention of invading that territory unless it is speedily opened for settlement, has sent a communication to the President recommending that a sufficient military force be sent to prevent the threatened invasion. The Secretary has also ordered Inspector Cisney to proceed at once to the strip and report upon the situation in detail.

Carter Harrison.

The Democratic Municipal Convention of Chicago, nominated Carter H. Harrison for Mayor by an overwhelming majority. The first ballot stood: Harrison, 531; Creiger, 93; Hessing, 57. The ticket was completed by the nomination of M. J. Bransfield, for Treasurer, Charles Gastfield, for City Clerk, and George A. Trade, for City Attorney.

Flouring Mills Burned.

The Thread Flouring Mills at Flint, Mich., were totally destroyed by fire, together with a small frame house occupied by Myron Cole, which was set on fire by the shower of burning embers. The mills were among the best equipped mills in the State. Loss, $75,000; insurance, $25,000.

The Pope Angered at American Bishops.

Rome special: The Pope has been greatly displeased by the abandonment of the American pilgrimage. He attributes the abandonment of the undertaking to the disputes between Archbishop Satolli and the American bishops and has ordered an inquiry.

Aid for Governor McKinley.

Trustee Kohlsaat has decided to stop opposing the wishes of Major McKinley's friends and to receive whatever funds they may decide to send towards paying the $95,000 liabilities of the unfortunate Governor of Ohio. The money is coming in rapidly.

League Season Opens in April.

The National Base Ball League schedule this year has been arranged by N. E. Young, President of the League. The season will open between April 24, and May 1, and end between October 1, and 15.

Florida's Senator.

Gov. Mitchell has appointed Samuel Pasco to be United States Senator for Florida ad interim, beginning March 4, and ending with the election of Pasco's successor by the Legislature, which meets in April.

Buck Ewing Signs with Cleveland.

"Buck" Ewing, the well-kdown New York base ball catcher has signed a contract to play with the Cleveland club for the ensuing year.

JUDGE HANCHETT.

He Succeeds Judge Jackson On the Circuit Bench.

The President has nominated Benton Hanchett of Michigan, to succeed Judge Jackson in the Sixth Judicial District. Mr. Hanchett lives in Saginaw, Mich., and has long been recognized as one of the leading attorneys of the State. He was known to the President and the Attorney-General by reputation but neither of them enjoyed his personal acquaintance. Although he has frequently been named in connection with offices of various character, Mr. Hanchett has steadily declined political preferment, his only position of this sort being that of a Republican presidential elector in 1876. When Mr. Stockbridge was making a campaign for renomination to the Senate, Mr. Hanchett was brought forward by the opposition, but withdrew by the time Mr. Stockbridge's case began to grow doubtful. He also declined a proffered appointment to the Supreme Court of Michigan, which was tendered him by Governor Luce.

A CRANK.

Attempts to Assassinate Millionaire John W. Mackay.

San Francisco special: The life of John W. Mackay, the millionaire mine owner, was attempted by W. C. Rippley, an old man who was undoubtedly insane, and who, after attempting Mr. Mackay's assassination, turned the weapon upon himself and inflicted a mortal wound.

Dr. August A. Drossel called at the receiving hospital and fully identified the would-be assassin as W. C. Rippley. He said: "I knew Rippley very well. He used to come to my place every day to read the papers before going down town. He did not come in this morning as usual, and he seemed very much depressed over something as he passed, about 9 o'clock. He was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, and leaves a wife and family there. At one time he was worth over $100,000 and made about $50,000 on the Comstock. He came to San Francisco and began gambling in stocks. His money soon began to go and then he opened a cash grocery store. That venture failed and about four years ago he was running a bar and dining room on a steamer, which plies between San Francisco and Stockton."

Rippley was unquestionably crazy and as dangerous a crank as the fellow who tried to blow up Russell Sage.

It is said Rippley haunted old Millionaire Flood about ten years ago and made desperate attempts to get an interview with Flood, but failed.

HONORS TO MORTON.

The Vice President Honored by Senators.

Washington special: Vice President Levi P. Morton was honored as none of his predecessors have been. The entire Senate, without distinction of party, united in rendering a complimentary dinner and in bearing testimony to the honorable manner in which he has presided over the deliberations of the upper chamber of Congress for the past four years.

The banquet, which was held in the beautiful dining hall of the Arlington, was the best that skill and taste could supply, the decorations most effective and the company as distinguished as could well be, inasmuch as scarcely one senator of prominence was absent. Among the other guests who participated in the proceedings were ex-Senators Wm. M. Evarts and T. W. Palmer, General Alger, Mr. Frank Hatton, Mr. P. V. Degraw, Mr. H. L. West, and Mr. H. C. Clarke.

Senator Manderson, president pro tem of the Senate, was chairman and toastmaster, and his ready wit and graceful rhetoric never once permitted the proceedings to flag. Messrs. Hale, Cockrell, Evarts, Vilas, and other orators were fully equal to the occasion.

HARPER'S SENTENCE COMMUTED.

The President Says He May Leave the Prison May 1.

The President has granted a commutation of sentence to Edward L. Harper, ex-President of the Fidelity National Bank, of Cincinnati, who was convicted of a violation of the federal banking laws and sentenced Dec. 12, 1887, to ten years imprisonment in the Ohio penitentiary at Columbus. The commutation provides for Harper's release May 1, 1893. The President has twice refused to take action in Harper's case for the reason that reports showed him to be less dangerously ill than it was claimed by those who sought to have him released. Recently, however, physicians who attended Harper have filed statements that he is very ill and is gradually losing strength and flesh. His indorsement on Harper's application is as follows: "I have felt that no reason for clemency was shown in the case except the serious health of the prisoner. Perhaps he is entitled to some relief on that ground. His term would expire in April, 1894, and he has now been six months in jail and six years in the penitentiary. Commuted to expire May 1. 1893."

DEATH IN DARKNESS.

An Early Morning Horror in Chicago—Ten Lives Lost.

Chicago special: The north wall of John York's old building at No. 777 South Halstead street, was blown down early the other morning in a sudden gale of wind which arose about 1:45 o'clock. A frame house which stood next to the building was buried beneath a mass of bricks and timbers. Ten people were buried in the ruins and all were killed. Following is the list of killed:

At No. 761 South Halstead street was the two-story brick building occupied on the first floor by John Smith as a saloon, while his wife, three children and two servants lived in the rooms above.

The next building to the north, a two-story frame structure was occupied by A. Kunze and family. Mr. Kunze had a jewelry store on the first floor.

A Woman Fined.

Miss Alice Atkinson of Converse, Ind., was fined $10 by Judge Baker of the Federal Court at Indianapolis, for alleged violation of the postal laws. It is said that she mailed copies of a pamphlet entitled "Her Flower," on which was written the words: "Who killed old Wanamaker, Hazen, Holden, and Lasche? 'I helped,' said little Flower Journal." These words are said to reflect on the characters of John Wanamaker, Postmaster General; A. D. Hazen, Third Assistant Postmaster General; George Holden, Chief Inspector, and A. L. Lasche, Postmaster at Converse.

The Cocaine Habit.

Jackson (Mich.) special: A local physician, himself a confirmed taker of cocaine, has brought many of his patients under its influence. Reputable medical men have determined that the practice must stop, and the practitioner himself be put under treatment or be debarred from practice. Some of the best classes of citizens are addicted to the habit and the local press publishes a list of hundreds. The majority of the victims became addicted to the habit before knowing what they were taking, it having been administered for throat troubles, hay fever and many minor ills.

A Fatal Blow.

At San Francisco, William Miller, the pugilist, died from concussion of the brain, caused by a blow received during the fight with D. Hawkins, at the Pacific Club, the night before. Both feather-weights were 21 years old. The fight lasted fifteen rounds, and Miller was severely punished throughout. All the men interested in the fight are under arrest.

An Embezzler.

Grayling (Mich.) special: Charles M. Jackson, ex-Treasurer of Crawford County, has been arrested on the complaint of the supervisors, charged with the embezzlement of county funds during his term of office. It is said the shortage will amount to over $13,000. Jackson had a preliminary hearing, and was remanded until March 8.

Swept Overboard.

Providence (R. I.) special: The schooner Isaac T. Campbell of Boston, with coal for this port, from Baltimore, has arrived here. The captain reports that while off Hogg Island, a squall struck the vessel with terrible force and it was found necessary to shorten sail and lay to. While in furling the jib, Mate Charles Olsen, aged 29, of Boston, and Seaman George Lawrence, a native of Bangor, Me., and two other seamen, were swept overboard, and Olsen and Lawrence were drowned, the other seamen being thrown back on the vessel by a heavy sea.

Navies of the World.

Norfolk (Va.) special: The rendezvous of the navies of the world in Hampton Roads in April and May has stirred the people of this vicinity deeper than any event since the war. They appreciate the act of Congress giving them such a display as the assemblage of so many ships of war will make. Regettas, balls, pyrotechnic displays, trades parades, and numerous other attractions are being arranged for. The transportation companies throughout the country will make reduced rates and ample accommodations will be made for hundreds of thousands of visitors.

Want to Annex!

Ottawa (Ont.) special: Mr. Tarte caused a stir in parliament by declaring that two-thirds of the counties of Quebec would declare in favor of political union with the United States if the vote was taken now. This sentiment is attributed to the unsatisfactory condition of the country, and he said it is not confined to the French speaking population, but is widespread among the English population, in the eastern towwships. He denied that he is anxious himself, but said his ears are not closed to the demands for a change.

Brave Men Lost.

New Bedford (Mass.) special: News was received of a terrible disaster off Cuttyhunk, one of the Elizabeth Islands, separating Buzzard's Bay from Vineyard Sound. A volunteer crew of six men went to the rescue of a disabled steamer and five were drowned. They were Captain Timothy Aiken, Jr., L. H. B. Tilton, Hiram Jackson, William Bright, and Fred Aiken. A rope was thrown to Captain Aiken, which he caught and tied around himself three times, but it slipped off and he was lost. All men leave families.

Burned by Vitriol.

Jack Cavanaugh, dispatcher at the Wabash office, Peru, Ind., was dangerously burned about the face and eyes by vitriol, which was thrown by Miss Sadie Bachman of Delphi. The girl alleges mistreatment at Cavanaugh's hands nine years ago, and it was her intention to blind him for it. She was arrested and is now in jail. Cavanaugh is in the hospital and he will probably recover his sight, as very little of the vitriol struck him in the eyes. He denies the charge which the young woman makes against him.

Will Have Music at the Fair.

Chicago special: The Eastern piano manufacturers, who recently announced they would make no exhibit at the World's Fair, have asked to have their space restored to them. "Some of the firms that went out have been given space again," said Director General Davis. "Others have applied for space again and have been told that we would give it to them if we thought there was nothing more worthy to exhibit. We do not have to look for exhibits in pianos or anything else."

Victory for the Republican House in Kansas.

The Kansas State Supreme Court has decided the Gunn habeas corpus case in favor of the Republican House. The opinion is filed by Justice Horton, Justice Johnson, Republican, assenting. Chief Justice Allen, Populist, dissents, and has filed an independent decision. The effect of the decision is to legalize the Republican House of Representatives and to leave the Populist body without any standing in law whatever.

A Keely Graduate Dies.

Mansfield (Wis.) special: Dr. Lyman J. Hills, a young physician of Sperry, a little town near here, died from an over dose of chloral and laudanum. He had been addicted to drink and took the Keely cure which, however, proved ineffectual. He then tried the anti-gold dipsomania cure at Fond du Lac, this State, which cured him of his love for drink but resulted in the constant use of chloral.

Fire on the Rail.

A special from Paris, Ky., says: The passenger train on the Kentucky Central branch of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, caught fire when near Talbot station, three miles from this city. The smoking car was destroyed and several passengers badly burned. The fire was caused by the igniting of a can of gasoline.

A Misplaced Switch.

The misplacement of a switch on the Baltimore and Potomac Railroad at Long Bridge, in Washington, resulted in an accident that caused the death of one man and the injury of three others, all employes of the railroad.

CLEVELAND'S CABINET.

SKETCHES OF MEN WHO WILL HOLD PORTFOLIOS.

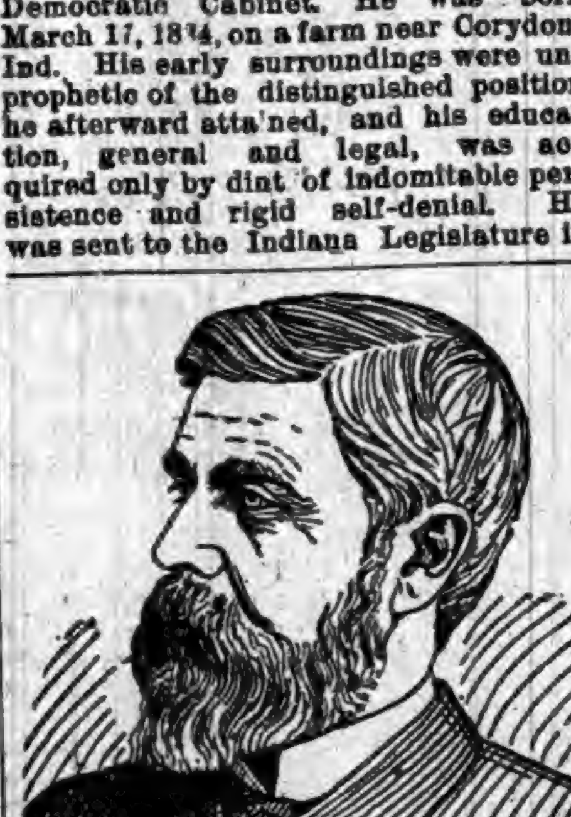
Cabinet Make-Up Curiously at Variance with Precedent—The President-Elect Has Relied Solely on His Own Personal Judgment.

The President's Advisers.

Mr. Cleveland's Cabinet is now complete. In making his appointments Mr. Cleveland has evidently been governed entirely by his own personal judgment, and neither outside influences nor established precedents have had any hand in his selections.

The Secretary of State.

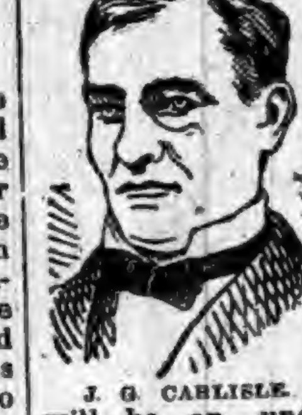
Judge Walter Q. Gresham has the unique distinction of having acted successively as Postmaster General and Secretary of the Treasury under a Republican administration, of having been courted by the Populists in connection with the Presidency in 1892, and, finally, of being installed at the head of a Democratic Cabinet. He was born March 17, 1834, on a farm near Corydon, Ind. His early surroundings were unprophetic of the distinguished position he afterward attained, and his education, general and legal, was acquired only by dint of indomitable persistence and rigid self-denial. He was sent to the Indiana Legislature in 1860, where he framed the Indiana Legion measure and saw it pass into a law. He commanded a volunteer company at the outbreak of the war, and was disabled at the battle of Peach Tree Creek in 1865, after which he resumed the practice of law. He was appointed District Judge by Grant in 1869, in which capacity he served with ability for twelve years. Under President Arthur he acted first as Postmaster General and later as Secretary of the Treasury, graduating thence to the Circuit bench, which he leaves now to take the premiership in Cleveland's Cabinet.



WALTER Q. GRESHAM.

The Treasury Portfolio.

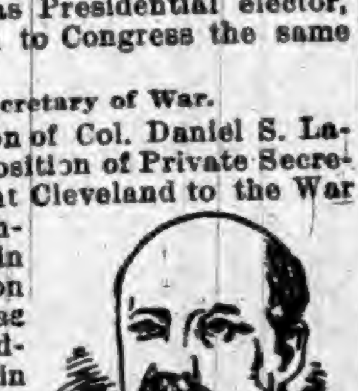
John G. Carlisle, who will act as Secretary of the Treasury, has filled the public eye for many years, and before the President-elect appeared on the stage of national politics Carlisle championed in Congress the anti-protection principles with which Cleveland's name is now so distinctly associated. Strong in debate, with the courage of his convictions and power of leadership, he will be an undoubted element of strength in the coming Cabinet. He was born in Kentucky 58 years ago, and after a brief experience as a pedagogue at Covington, Ky., he engaged in the practice of law. He served several terms in the Legislature of his native State, and from 1871 to 1875 he was Lieutenant Governor of Kentucky. In 1876 he acted as Presidential elector, and was elected to Congress the same year.



J. G. CARLISLE.

The Secretary of War.

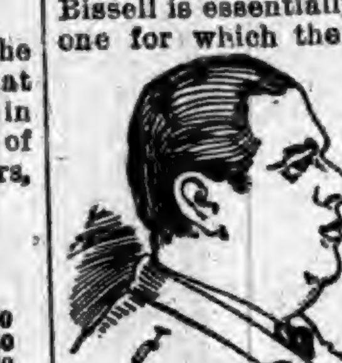
The graduation of Col. Daniel S. Lamont from the position of Private Secretary to President Cleveland to the War portfolio is without a parallel in the Washington records. He was born in Cortlandville, N. Y., in 1852, and enters the Cabinet at an exceptionally early age. Educated at Union College, he was early initiated into the mysteries of New York politics by Samuel J. Tilden. When but 20 years of age he was a delegate at the convention at which Tweed was defeated by Tilden. He held an interest in the Albany Argus and was connected with that paper when Governor Cleveland appointed him his Private Secretary.



DANIEL S. LAMONT.

The Postmaster General.

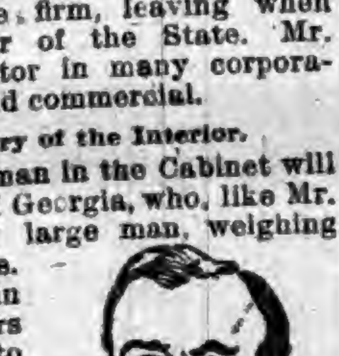
The appointment of Wilson Shannon Bissell is essentially a personal one, and one for which the great friendship existing between the appointee and the President-elect is responsible. Mr. Bissell has no political record whatever, and his reputation, which is a high one and more than local, is based entirely on his prominence as a corporation lawyer and on his general business ability. He was born in Oneida County, New York, in 1847, being taken when six years old to Buffalo, of which city he has been a resident ever since. In 1872 he entered into a partnership with Lyman K. Bass, and a few months later Grover Cleveland entered the firm, leaving when elected Governor of the State. Mr. Bissell is a director in many corporations, railroad and commercial.



WILSON S. BISSELL.

The Secretary of the Interior.

The youngest man in the Cabinet will be Hoke Smith of Georgia, who, like Mr. Bissell, is a very large man, weighing nearly 250 pounds. A young lawyer in Atlanta six years ago, he leaped to the front by his energetic and successful championing of tariff reform principles in Georgia. He bought the Atlanta Journal for a small sum and waged relentless war on the opponents of Cleveland's tariff views in Georgia. He finally worked the defeat of the anti-Cleveland forces in his State. He is a very successful lawyer, railroad cases being his specialty.



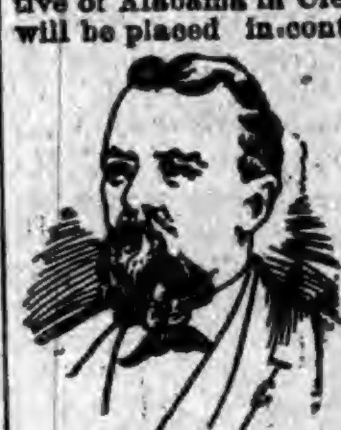
HOKE SMITH.

The Attorney General.

Richard Olney, who has been chosen for Attorney General, graduated from Brown University in 1856 and Harvard law school two years later. Twice he has been offered a Massachusetts justiceship, but declined, having the last offer from Governor Russell. Mr. Olney was born in Oxford, Mass., in 1835. His only political venture was when he represented the Second Norfolk District in the Legislature in 1874. This was the year when there was a great overturn in State politics, William Gaston defeating Governor Talbot by nearly 8,000 votes. In Mr. Olney's district there was a close contest. On the face of the returns he was only five behind. A recount made it a tie, and on a new election he won the seat. It has been supposed by many that Mr. Olney was a mugwump, but his fealty to his party has never been questioned.

Secretary of the Navy.

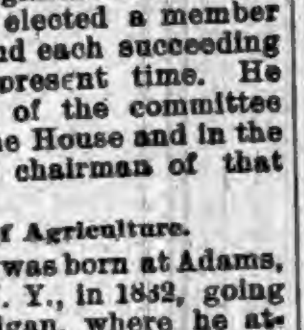
Hilary A. Herbert, the representative of Alabama in Cleveland's Cabinet, will be placed in control of the Navy Department. He is now a resident of Montgomery, Ala., but was born at Laurensville, S. C. When he was a child his father removed to Alabama, settling in Greeneville. He received his education at the University of Alabama and the University of Virginia, studied law and was admitted to practice. At the outbreak of the civil war he entered the Confederate service as a Captain and was promoted to Colonel of the Eighth regiment of Alabama volunteers. He was elected a member of the Forty-fifth and each succeeding Congress up to the present time. He was twice a member of the committee on naval affairs of the House and in the present Congress is chairman of that committee.



H. A. HERBERT.

The Portfolio of Agriculture.

J. Sterling Morton was born at Adams, Jefferson County, N. Y., in 1832, going when a boy to Michigan, where he attended school at Ann Arbor, later attending classes at Union College, New York. From New York he went to Nebraska, where he acted as editor of the Nebraska City News. After being twice elected to the Territorial Legislature, he made an unsuccessful run for the Governorship. Three times thereafter he was a candidate for the same position, each time without success. Mr. Morton's orchards at Arbor Lodge are the finest in the State.



J. S. MORTON.

MURDER AND ARSON.

A Most Serious Charge Made Against Adolph Niese, of Ottumwa, Iowa.

Ottuma (Iowa) special: There is now little doubt that Ottumwa was the scene, Tuesday night, of an atrocious crime, it being the murder of a woman and her babe by the unnatural husband and father, who sought to conceal the crime by burning the house and cremating the bodies. The alleged murderer is a German, 39 years of age, named Adolph Niese. Pending the verdict of the coroner's jury he was arrested. Niese's house was discovered on fire, and burned to the ground with all its contents. Niese and three children, aged 9, 7, and 5, got safely out, but his wife and 9-months-old baby were burned to death. Much sympathy was felt for the afflicted husband until ugly rumors got afloat, which were confirmed by evidence taken by the coroner. It was alleged that Niese had been untrue to his wife, that he had quarreled with her, that her life was insured for $5,000 in his favor, that the household goods were fully insured, and that Niese had killed his wife and child and then set fire to the house. The testimony of Niese's own children before the coroner's jury and others is exceedingly damaging. Niese took the three children out of the house to the home of Mrs. Pease, a neighbor. The oldest little girl told Mrs. Pease that her father had told her that morning that if the house burned and her mamma was burned up they would have money to build a new house, they would have nice clothes, and would have a new mamma. The sister of the dead woman, who is implicated in the dreadful affair, is unmarried and came from Germany three months ago. She has been arrested and is now in the city jail. Her name is Hattie Volz. The post-mortem of the charred remains of Mrs. Niese shows that the skull had been crushed, and there was a large clot of blood on one side of the head. It is not known whether the infant was killed before being cremated or not. The woman's life was insured for $5,000 in the Covenant Mutual Benefit Association of Illinois. One of the most suspicious circumstances is that Niese was fully dressed, even to overshoes, before arousing his neighbors, and that among the first effects rescued from the burning building were his insurance policies.

STOLE OVER A MILLION.

Another Lot of Forged Paper to the Amount of $200,000 at Lincoln, Neb.

The Omaha Bee's special from Lincoln, Neb., says that another lot of forged paper, aggregating $200,000, has been brought to light in the Capitol National Bank case. One batch of notes now in the hands of attorneys for collection for Eastern banks, amounting to $173,000, signed by an ex-employe of Mosher named Hurlbut and indorsed by Mosher as president of the Capitol National Bank, were floated by Mosher and the money sequestered by him. Mosher admits that he got the cash, but refuses to say where any of it went. The bank was opened Thursday for the purpose of admitting creditors to file their claims and wind up its business. It is now stated by conservative men who are intimate with the affairs of the institution that the bank's liabilities will exceed $1,200,000, with assets practically nothing. Mosher admits that his efforts to raise money to settle his shortage have failed. It is not expected that the bank will pay to exceed 10 cents on the dollar. Lincoln's business men, who have had faith in the statements that a full settlement would be made, are greatly excited. In the Senate a resolution ordering immediate steps to be taken to protect the State was passed.

BERING SEA COMMISSION.

Arbitrators Meet at Paris and Adjourn to March 23.

The Commission of Arbitration on the Bering Sea controversy between the United States and Great Britain met in Paris Thursday in the foreign office to open formally the proceedings. There were present Justice Harlan of the United States Supreme Court, American arbitrator; Lord Hannen, British arbitrator; Marquis Visconti Venosta, Italian arbitrator; Baron Alfonse de Courcel, French arbitrator; C. H. Tupper, Canadian Minister of Marine and Fisheries, there as British agent; J. T. Williams, council for the United States; Sir Richard Webster and Sir Charles Russell, counsel for Great Britain. Judge Gram, of the Christiania Supreme Court, the Swedish arbitrator, will not go to Paris until the next meeting. Baron de Courcel was elected to preside. The proceedings, which lasted but half an hour, were purely formal and the commission adjourned until March 23.

B. F. JOHNSON, an employe of the Star woolen mills, Wabash, was caught while attempting to throw a belt on a rapidly revolving wheel, and carried up against the ceiling and around a shaft several times. Every stitch of clothing save his shoes was stripped from his body, and when he fell to the floor he was delirious. Strange to say, he was not dangerously hurt. His vest, containing a gold watch, was wrapped tightly around the shaft.

INDIANA LEGISLATURE.

THE following bills passed the Senate Monday: Authorizing the Governor to spend as much as $50,000 for the suppression or prevention of the coming or the spread of the cholera during his term of office; providing that the County Commissioners shall open to competition all bridge contracts; for the incorporation of loan fund and savings associations; permitting cities to take stock in water companies established by private individuals, with the power to issue bonds to fund their indebtedness; compelling gravel-road superintendents to make quarterly reports to the Board of County Commissioners; establishing boards of childrens' guardians in the counties of Vigo, Allen, and Vanderburg; concerning the duties of clerks of the Circuit Courts of the State in regard to registering fees, etc., paid out and taken in; to allow watchers, appointed by the campaign commitees of Populists and Prohibitionists on election boards.

The House got into a wrangle over the patronage bill and spent most of the day debating it. It finally passed by a vote of 63 to 37. The bill to legalize Ashley, DeKalb County, passed.

The joint convention of the House and Senate went through the formality of electing Miss Ahern State Librarian.

DURING the House session, Tuesday, a number of minor bills were passed, and some progress was made in considering the various appropriations as reported by the Ways and Means Committee. Among the bills passed was one providing for the general sale of school books. Two important bills were approved by the Senate, to-wit: Providing that wardens of State Prisons shall not accept bids for contract prison labor at less than 95 cents per day, and providing for the incorporation of loan, trust and safety deposit companies, and when so incorporated, with a capital of not less than $100,000, permitting them to act as guardians of minors, lunatics, habitual drunkards, and the estates of deceased persons.

The Speaker sprung the Patronage bill, which has caused so many heartaches, on the House Wednesday. Representative Adler, who has opposed it from the start, moved the previous question on the passage and the roll call resulted in sixty-two affirmative and twenty-nine negatives. The Democratic members divided evenly, and Republicans voted solidly for the measure. The bill will go back to the Senate for concurrence in an immaterial amendment which has been made, and it will then become a law. This bill gives the Governor the appointment of the boards of penal and benevolent institutions, each board consisting of three members.

The house voted down the Erwin amendment to the general tax law and ordered the bill engrossed as recommended by the State tax commissioners. Much time was spent in consideration of the general appropriation bill. The Senate accomplished a good deal of routine work, and rushed through a number of House bills. At 4 o'clock both houses adjourned in recognition of Washington's birthday.

THE Erwin anti-insurance bill to prohibit the employes' insurance operated by the Pennsylvania and Baltimore and Ohio railroad companies was handed down on third reading in the House, Thursday, and passed without debate.

The bill by Johnson of Dearborn, limiting the number of days county assessors may be employed and grading them according to population, passed.

Dailey's bill to put a Democrat on the Monument Commission to succeed Gen. Bennett was read the third time and passed without debate by a party vote. Ader's celebrated bill for licensing drummers, brokers, circuses, and wire dancers was read the third time and passed. Dr. Passage's road bill, requiring owners of toll roads to have eight inches of gravel on them came up on third reading and passed without debate.

The House legalized the incorporations of Cayuga, Crothersville, and West Shoals in a bunch.

THE following bills passed the House, Friday: The administrative tax bill; providing for the taxation of sleeping-car, telegraph, telephone, express, and freight dispatch companies; for handling school supplies just as school books are now handled under the law of 1889; prohibiting the collection of 10 cents premium on cash railway fares; providing for the incorporation of voluntary live-stock insurance companies. The balance of the day was consumed in considering the appropriation bills.

Senate—Bills passed: Providing a new charter for Evansville; changing the name of Circle Park to "Monumental Place," providing for the punishment of trespassers or demolishments of the property, and to allow the completion of the monument without any additional appropriations; abolishing the printing of sample ballots; providing for a metropolitan police force system in all cities between 10,000 and 35,000 inhabitants; to amend an act concerning the weight of coal; allowing people who have an open ditch to convert the same into a tile drain; authorizing the county commissioners of the different counties to increase the salaries of circuit and superior judges to as much as $4,000, including their salaries received from the State.

An Innocent Little Cherub.

In a certain aristocratic family in Austin there is a young lady, and she has a beau, and the presumption is he is not particularly bashful when he and the apple-barrel of his affections are alone, or think they are. What strengthens this view of the case is the fact that the young lady has a small brother named Jimmy, and the other night there was a tea-party at the family mansion, and the supper-table was very much crowded—so much so that Jimmy's younger sister was crowded up very close to him, whereupon he made the remark out loud: "Mamma, sis trowds me so close I can't breeve. I ain't her beau, am I?" If Jimmy should become unwell, that beau would not be the proper person to send for a doctor in a hurry.—Texas Siftings.

The Testimony of an Expert.

In discharging a boy who was acquitted of shooting a companion, on the ground that, though he handled a loaded revolver carelessly, the shooting was accidental, Judge Gildersleeve, ex-Captain of the American rifle-team, said: "You should not have a loaded pistol upon your person or about you. I may claim that I have had an extensive experience in handling fire-arms, yet I would as soon have a rattlesnake near me as a loaded gun, and one is likely to be as dangerous as the other."

MR. J. L. WEAVER.

LIVURA M'F'G. Co.,

DEAR SIRS:—"Last winter I had La Grippe in its worst form, leaving me in a terrible condition, my Brain was confused, my Heart weak, and my legs refused to hold me up, and the muscles were so sore that it was painful to lie down. I had continual Headache, and everything I ate distressed me. I could not work, sleep, or eat, and my right side became numb. Several doctors told me I had Incipient Paralysis, and that I could get no better. I grew so weak that I could not leave the house. Hearing of PITCHER'S LIVURA I got a bottle and it helped me from the first. I took 4 bottles in all, and am PERFECTLY WELL in every way, and now work all day. I know that PITCHER'S LIVURA CURED ME."

ROASTER AND BAKER

IMPROVED
FOR MEATS, FOWL, FISH, ETC., AND FOR BAKING BREAD, CAKES AND PUDDINGS.
ROASTER & BAKER
BEST SIMPLEST AND CHEAPEST

THE STEAM produced by the process of cooking cannot escape, is absorbed by the article in the roaster, and acts as a basting. There is no evaporation, no drying up or burning, hence no shrinkage or loss of weight, and all the flavor and nutritious qualities of the food are retained. Tough meats are made tender, and any article roasted or baked will be sweeter, healthier and more digestible. Put the food in the roaster, place the roaster in a well heated oven; the roaster will do the cooking. It requires no attention. Can only be bought from dealers, the trade supplied by:

WHEN I MEAN TO MARRY.

When do I mean to marry?—Well—
'Tis idle to dispute with fate;
But if you choose to hear me tell,
Pray listen while I fix the date.

When daughters haste with eager feet
A mother's daily toil to share;
Can make the puddings which they eat,
And mend the stockings which they wear.

When maidens look upon a man
As in himself what they would marry,
And not as army soldiers scan
A sutler or a commissary;

When gentle ladies who have got
The offer for a lover's hand,
Consent to share his "earthly lot,"
And do not mean his lot of land;

When young mechanics are allowed
To find and wed the farmers' girls,
Who don't expect to be endowed
With rubies, diamonds, and pearls;

When wives, in short, shall freely give
Their hearts and hands to aid their spouses,
And live as they were wont to live,
Within their sire's one-story houses.

Then, madam—if I'm not too old—
Rejoiced to quit this lonely life,
I'll brush my beaver, cease to scold,
And look about me for a wife!

THE AUNT'S EARRINGS.

Dectective stories have always been my favorite form of literature. I have read many, and have gained from them a thorough contempt for probability and the police. The first thing you should do when a crime has been committed, as I often said to Uncle Poffkins, is to suspicion the most unlikely man as being the criminal. That was the course I adopted when Aunt Poffkins' earrings were stolen. It was in the morning when the theft was discovered. Aunt came down late and ran into the room where Uncle Poffkins, Dora, and I were breakfasting. My aunt bore traces of strong agitation, and she had forgotten her cap.

"My earrings," she cried. "They are gone—they are stolen!"

"God bless my soul!" exclaimed Uncle Poffkins, dropping his teacup as if he had been shot, and leaping up with a yell of pain. He said the yell was attributable to the heat of the tea, which was trickling down his legs.

My aunt explained. The earrings were kept wrapped in cotton wool in a jewel-box on her dressing-table. The box was never locked, and the housemaid had access to the room. The girl had only been in the house a week, and was known to have a beau. My aunt and cousin at once concluded she was the thief, and sent for a policeman, who searched her trunk and found nothing, of course. I could have told them that.

Meanwhile I kept my eye on Uncle Poffkins. He was the one person who could have no motive whatever in stealing the earrings. He was very rich, most respectable and extremely slow and noisy in his movements; moreover, my aunt would have given him the earrings at any moment if he had asked for them. Evidently he was the last man to attract suspicion. Accordingly I watched Uncle Poffkins closely.

We passed a week of excitement. The police were running in and out. Dora cross-examined the housemaid incessantly. Aunt Poffkins went about weeping and reminding every one she met that the earrings were a present from Uncle Poffkins on the occasion of their engagement. My uncle himself affected to make light of the matter and went so far as to loudly and ostentatiously curse the earrings. He was wrong if he thought I could be put off the scent by that clumsy muneuver. I never left him alone; I tracked him to the city, hung about all the morning, shadowed him when he went to lunch, when he returned, when he crossed over to the exchange. Unknown to him I was on his bus, inside if he rode on the top, and on the top when it rained and he stowed himself away inside. He never escaped me, except while he was in his office.

At last, after ten days' weary chasing, I was rewarded. I need not say that the police had discovered nothing. The house was still topsy-turvy, and my aunt subject to intermittent hysterics. That wronged creature, the housemaid, did her work with a mop in one hand and in the other a handkerchief wet with innocent tears. But to return to Uncle Poffkins. The tenth day after the earrings had disappeared, as he was brushing his hat before leaving the house and looking at my aunt's tear-bedewed visage, his conscience smote him and he so far forgot himself as to exclaim audibly: "I'm blamed if I can stand this any longer!" The folly of the man was incredible. I had him now. In an instant I was after him. He took a bus, I took a cab, and started for the city. Now came the odd thing—Uncle Poffkins disappeared. How it happened I do not know, but when the bus pulled up at the bank Uncle Poffkins was not to be seen. I questioned the conducter, but he had evidently been bribed, and told me very rudely that he had something better to do than answer my riddles. He drove on, and I was left for the first time at fault.

It was evening before I saw Uncle Poffkins. I was going home in a very disconsolate state, when, about two hundred yards from our gate, I espied him ahead of me. Quickening my pace I stealthily approached him. He opened the gate and passed in; noiselessly I followed. A little further on, sheltered by the shrubbery, he stopped, and after a stealthy glance toward the house took from his overcoat pocket a small morocco case. I stood on tiptoe just behind, and, with mingled horror and satisfaction as I looked over his shoulder. I saw the earrings! I was right! Uncle Poffkins sighed. "Shall I give 'em to her or not!" he said to himself. "It's waste, Still it will keep her quiet." I watched the struggle between his good and evil angel. Clearly his good angel had triumphed so far as to bring the earrings within fifty yards of Aunt Poffkins; but now came the tug of war. It was severe, and it ended in the victory of evil. Uncle Poffkins, shutting the case with a snap, exclaimed:

"It's all blamed nonsense. I'll take 'em back to Abraham's to-morrow."

Abraham no doubt was the receiver, for my uncle went on, in a satisfied tone:

"He'll make no trouble about taking 'em."

He was putting the case in his pocket when my feelings overcame me. Respect for one's elderly relatives is a praiseworthy feeling, but it must not be allowed to override higher duties. I flung myself on Uncle Poffkins, crying:

"Surrender! You cannot escape me!"

My uncle fell heavily on the gravel path. I fell heavily on top of him and pinioned his arms to the ground.

"Tom!" he exclaimed, "what the mischief—are you drunk?"

"It is useless, sir," I began, "to affect ig——"

I had reached this point when I was violently collared from behind, lifted bodily off my uncle's chest, where I had been sitting, and was deposited on a grass plat, while a deep voice said in my ear:

"Now, then, young man, turn it up. You're a lively 'un, you are. Fust your aunt and now your uncle."

The new comer was a policeman. From his pocket he produced a pair of handcuffs and put them on my unresisting wrists. Then I found my voice.

"What are you handcuffing me for?" I demanded. "There's the thief."

"Gammon!" said he, grinning.

"Why, you fool, there's the property," said I.

He looked and saw the earrings lying on the ground by Uncle Poffkins. An expression of bewilderment overspread the officer's face as groping again in his pocket he brought forth a pair of earrings. Then gazing from the pair in his hand to the other pair on the ground, he ejaculated softly, and, to my ears at least, mysteriously:

"These earrings in my 'and was found in your drawer, young man, wrapped in cotton wool. 'Ow do you account for that?"

"These on the ground," I retorted, "were found in Mr. Poffkins' pocket. How do you account for that?"

He shook his head sadly. Then he suddenly brightened up. He had an idea. He produced another pair of handcuffs, clapped them on my uncle's hands and cried cheerfully:

"We can't be wrong now, can we? March!"

So Uncle Poffkins and I marched, the policeman between us, with a hold on each of our collars, and in this predicament we were presented to Aunt Poffkins, to Dora, and to the housemaid.

The housemaid giggled consumedly, for which under the circumstances one could hardly blame her. Aunt Poffkins experienced a relapse, and Dora alone was equal to the situation. She made us sit down and gave us each a glass of sherry. Then the recrimination began. Uncle Poffkins declared his earrings were not the stolen pair. Distressed at my aunt's sorrow, he had gone to the jeweler's and bought her a similar pair. They cost 80 guineas. The struggle I had witnessed was between love and economy, not honesty and crime.

I swore that the earrings found in my bureau had not been placed there by me.

"And you are both quite right," said Dora. "Uncle's earrings are not the stolen ones. Tom, do you remember having the toothache?"

It was clear to me in a moment. I had asked for cotton wool, had been directed to my aunt's jewel box, and from it I grabbed a large handful and carried it to my room. Then, on reflection, I had tried brandy instead of laudanum, and the cotton wool was thrust in the drawer out of the way. The earrings had been buried in the cotton wool.

"So you were the thief yourself!" laughed Dora.

It was true. If only I had strictly followed what my reading had taught me! For, improbable as it was that I should think Uncle Poffkins guilty, it would have been still more improbable had I fixed the crime on myself. I lacked the full courage of my principles, and the result is Uncle Poffkins and I do not speak.—Chicago Post.

Whaling.

Whaling is a glorious sport, superior to your fox hunting, to bobbing for gudgeons, or chasing rats with a terrior. The ideas suggested to a landsman by the description of an attack on a whale, are those of extreme peril to all engaged in it, a peril from which the chances against their escaping alive is about ten to one. A few hardy fellows pull up to a creature that looks like a small island on the surface of the sea, and one sweep of whose tail or flukes is sufficient to knock their frail bark into splinters; they dash their harpoons into the large flank, and submit to be towed through the waves by the maddened monster at a rate that makes the water boil around their bows. Such is the power of the fish, that if he came in contact with a ship during his headlong course his weight and impetus would stave in her sides. Sometimes he runs straight forward; at others in circles, with irregular rapidity, still the boat sticks to him, until the smart of his hurt subsiding, or through fatigue, he slackens his speed, enabling his enemies to approach him with fresh wounds. At last, when the waters are reddened with his blood, then comes the death flurry—stern all! The boat stands clear and the fish disappears in a cloud of spray that he dashes up in his dying agonies. His flukes quiver, he plunges heavily and all is over.

Entertaining the Butcher.

Do you remember the Irishwoman who told her consumptive son to "Cough for the lady, Jimmy?" One of my nursemaids gave me a yarn to match that. Baby Bob had been ailing, fretful, and wakeful for a few days, and it occurred to me that perhaps, if his carriage was wheeled up and down the path, the sunshine and sweet summer air might be the best anodynes for the poor little chap. Sure enough when I looked out at the end of half an hour Baby Bob was rosily sound asleep; and my heart rejoiced. A little later the butcher's boy, coming in at the side gate, stopped to gossip with Kathleen. "A fine baby you have there!" said he. "And if you think that when he's asleep, it's awake and laughing you should see him!" said she; and to my horror she bent to give the baby a brisk shake, crying joyfully, "Bobby, dear! Wake up and laugh for the butcher, Bobby!"—Boston Commonwealth.

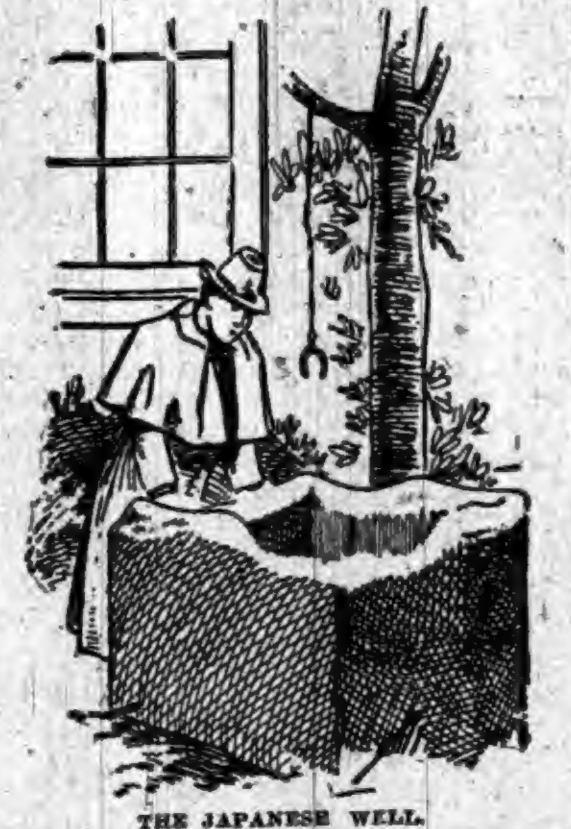
HOW IT WILL BE KEPT AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

A Big Cold Storage Warehouse on the Exposition Grounds—Interior Arrangements of the Place—Where Ice Cream Will Be Made.

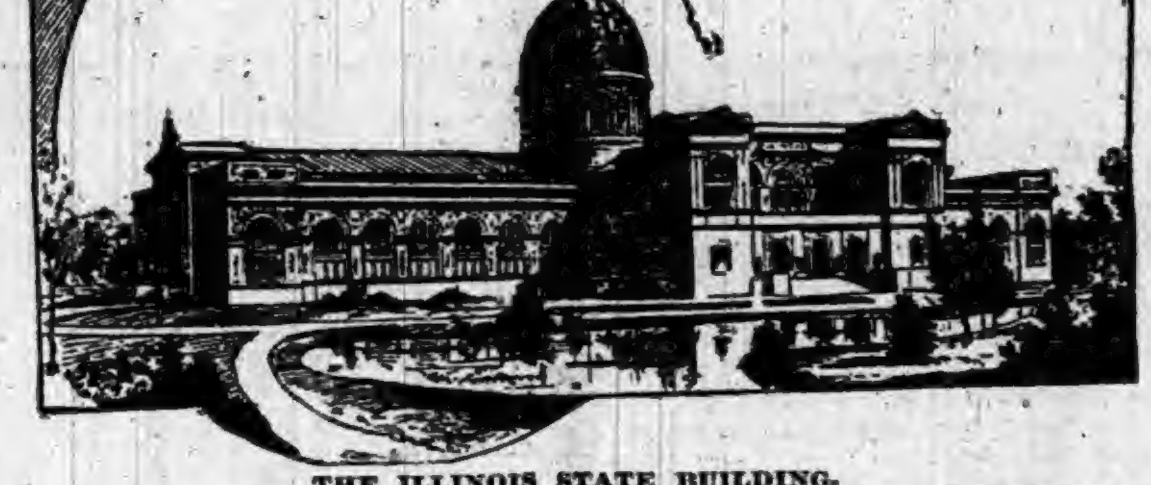
The Week at Jackson Park.

Chicago correspondence:

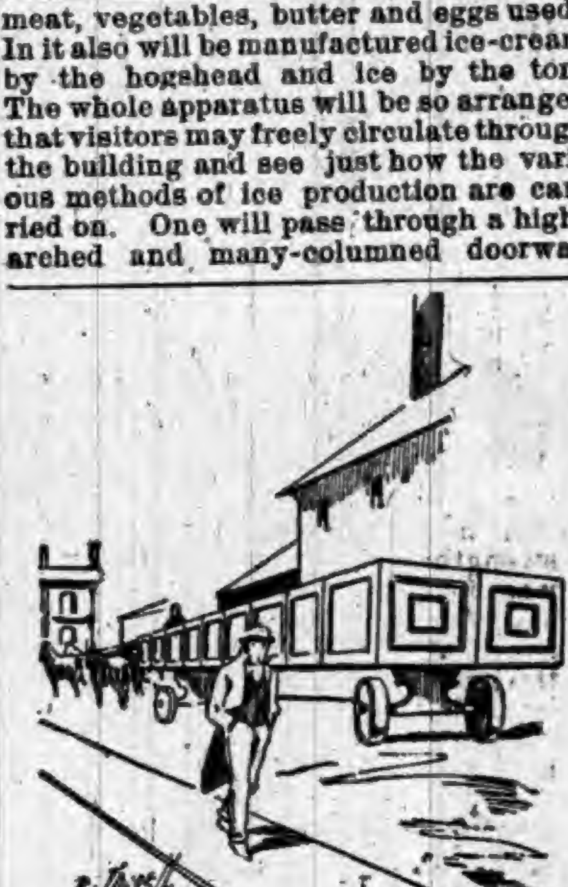
Directly south of the Transportation Building annex and close to the Stony Island avenue boundary of the Fair grounds stands a spacious five-story building covering an area of 130 by 255 feet deep. It is solidly built and with ornaments. It forms the cold-storage and ice-making plant of the Exposition, and will be a very necessary adjunct during the hot summer months of the great show. There will be numerous restaurants, cafes, ice-cream and soft-drink stands on the grounds, and these places will depend on the cold-storage warehouse for the preservation of their edibles. In it will be stored the tons of meat, vegetables, butter and eggs used. In it also will be manufactured ice-cream by the hogshead and ice by the ton. The whole apparatus will be so arranged that visitors may freely circulate through the building and see just how the various methods of ice production are carried on. One will pass through a high-arched and many-columned doorway into a circular gallery looking down upon a 900-horse power steam plant—the only steam plant on the grounds. It will furnish the power for the large elevators placed in each end of the building, for the ice-hoisting apparatus and the dynamos for the arc and incandescent lights. A door leading to the ice-machines opens to the left. Here may be seen the full workings of an ice-plant with a capacity of 105 tons a day. On the opposite side of the building are the storage-rooms. Provision will be made for the storage of 3,000 tons of ice. The walls separating the rooms are what are technically known as "insulated." They are composed of alternate layers of heavy paper and cleated boards, with a double air space intervening. Around each room run the coils of pipe by means of which the rooms are cooled. Each room is supplied with an automatically acting thermostat, which keeps up a thorough ventilation and preserves a uniform temperature of any degree required. In the rooms practical tests will be made with a view of ascertaining what the proper temperatures are for the storage of different kinds of produce. On the fifth floor will be placed the ice-cream plant, where all the ice-cream used on the grounds will be manufactured. The freezers will be immense concerns, operated by steam and cooled by ammonia vapors. The roof will be surrounded by a heavy balustrade, inclosing a promenade, and at each corner will be placed a tower 100 feet high.



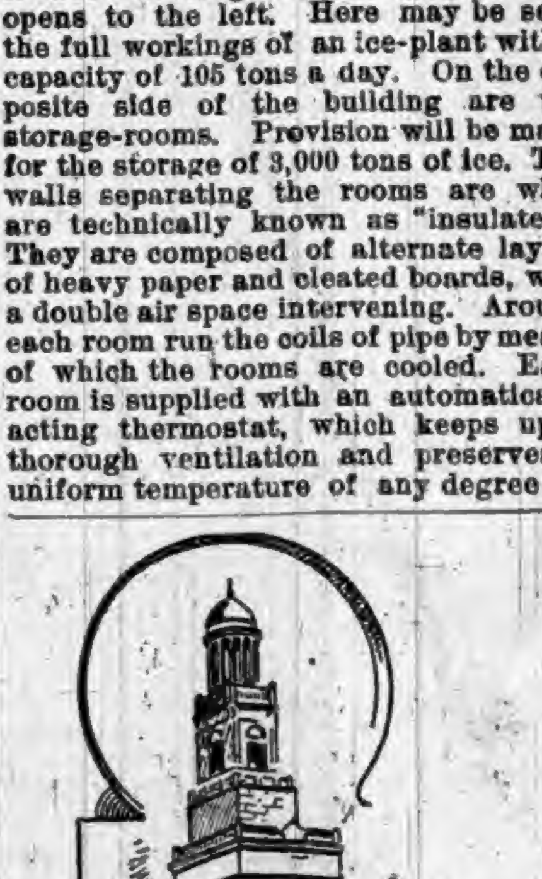
THE JAPANESE WELL.



THE ILLINOIS STATE BUILDING.



MONSTER TRUCK WAGON AT THE GROUNDS.



THE COLD STORAGE BUILDING.

The Illinois Building.

The work of construction on the Illinois building is complete, and the closely following decorators will soon have finished their task. The building presents a very handsome appearance both within and without.

The main floor is once more strewn with shavings and bits of wood left by the several score of carpenters who have moved in to begin the work of erecting pavilions. The State Agricultural Department has opened up offices in the building close to where its pavilion is being erected and a large pile of samples from the forestry division await the completion of a set of shelves before their complete installation. Each variety of wood is to be shown, with the bark covering one side. The other side will be cut and planed in such a way as to show the longitudinal, cross and oblique sections.

In the south end of the building, in what will be used as the kindergarten, may be found a rosy-cheeked Wisconsin girl absorbed in a creation entirely her own, which she calls the "Genius" of her state. The fair sculptor is Miss Nellie Farnsworth Mears, whose peculiar talent was fortunately brought to the recognition of the State Fair Commission, who immediately gave the Oshkosh maiden her first order. Her figure stands in repose, lightly leaning on a mass of rock symbolizing firm foundation. The figure affectionately rests her left arm on the neck of an eagle perched on the rock, and from under the protecting outspread wing, gazes upward with a trustful air. The right hand gathers up the folds of an American flag.

The Japanese Exhibit.

The Japs have begun work on their pavilion in the Liberal Arts Building. The structure now being unpacked in sections promises to be a very neat and handsome affair. It is constructed of hand-carved native hardwoods, with metal ornaments in the way of figured nail-heads, chairs and a bronze image of the sacred phœnix. On the wooded island their ho-o-den begins to assume the palatial aspect intended. Over at the Horticultural Building the Japanese gardeners are putting in a stone well top near their rustic bridge. The well-casing used is from one of the oldest Japanese wells, and shows the primitive method there of drawing water. The stone used is a sort of red sandstone, neatly mortised together at the four corners.

Led by a Canine Pilot.

A blind man, piloted about the center of the city the other day by a dog, attracted a good deal of attention. The man was deatly dressed, and carried a sachel containing articles to sell swung over his shoulder. He carried a stick in order to enable him to feel his way up or down a step. The dog, a plump, well-fed, brown animal, had on a sort of harness, to which a stout cord was attached from his back. He was, apparently, in a hurry to do business, for he tugged at the cord vigorously as he went along. Every few steps he would look around at his master in the most intelligent way, as if to discover whether he was coming along safely.

As soon as he got to a door he stopped and looked up at his master. If the door was one on which was posted the sign, "The other door," the man would try the knob, and as soon as the dog saw that his master could not go in he would immediately move on to the next door. When a door was opened the dog appeared to understand exactly how to transact business. He would pilot his master straight to the office, in the back or front part of the house, stop, and look up. When anybody bought anything and "Good-day" was said, the animal would lead the way out again, often looking around at his companion, and, when the street was reached, he would be sure to start exactly where he left off and try the next door. If the animal was not fond of that man, the looks and actions of a dog go for nothing.—Baltimore American.

Appearances Were Deceptive.

He was a very shabby person indeed. His clothes were of that much-worn character that precludes any attempt at description. He had cotton in his ears, and he wore a most disreputable hat, yet there he was in one of our large city dry goods stores, as much out of place as a stoker in a drawing-room.

No one paid any attention to him, every one having come to the conclusion evidently that he was a workman or some porter looking for a job; anything, in fact, but a purchaser.

At last, after he had figeted about for some time, he started off toward the cloak department and presently came back with an obsequious floorwalker, who called out: "Show this gentleman your finest sealskin wraps."

Every one looked in astonishment at the seedy figure, and one young woman had the grace to remark:

"Excuse me, sir, I thought you were looking for a cloth garment."

"No, miss, seal skin ain't good enough for my little gal, and I guess if there was anything more expensive her pap 'ud buy it for her."

Only a little every-day happening; but it teaches the lesson that fine clothes do not always mean the fattest pocket books.

In Ancient Egypt.

M. Philip has discovered near the site of Heliopolis, in Egypt, the necropolis used by the Pharaohs, at least so says M. Grebout, until recently director of the museum of Ghizeh, and now professor at the Sorbonne. Heliopolis was as ancient as Memphis, and formed with it a twin city, with the Nile between. Memphis was the royal abode, Heliopolis was the priestly capital.

Pointer for Preachers.

A writer says "that the average limit of sustained attention in an audience is about twenty minutes, and that it is very difficult for a speaker to interest his hearers thirty minutes. It was not so in the old days when we had great orators and it is not so now when an eloquent speaker has a speech to deliver. But, for the average talker, twenty minutes is long enough."

Tendencies and Effects.

Each phase of a man's mind and life, says L. G. Wunder in Leisure Hours, is fraught with pleasure or pain, and worthy of praise or blame, according to the motives or principle by which he is actuated and guided, for its result, and "the thread of our life is of a mingled yarn." Sir Walter Scott writes, "There's aye gude and ill i' the chief."

If a man follows the bent of his own inclinations, he must keep his passions and desires under the control of reason, or he may do many things amiss which will cause him regret. Peace chooses for her home the breast in which she finds harmony. To every earnest heart, life will seem richer and brighter in companionship with toil, disappointment and reverses, if fortified with strength, resolution and endurance, than when passed away in elegant ease and the pride of profusion. Men who would take the world by storm rather than silently, work for their own welfare and the public good; men who will allow the efforts of their souls to be wasted in useless pursuit after chimerical objects, without a fixed purpose to gain what is best and most reliable, will never attain any beneficial results for themselves or others. Beneath the mantle of conventionalism the human heart is still seen throbbing, filled with hope and desire for improvement, though selfishness, prejudice and vanity may have dominated our lives and caused our own actions to degenerate. The man who wanders from right and duty is sure to go adrift and be at the mercy of contending elements. Honor and integrity are thereby sure safeguards of home.

THE DAILY, WEEKLY and SUNDAY ISSUES.

THE SENTINEL in its several editions reaches more readers in Indiana than any other newspaper published within or without the state.

It is read in every city, town and hamlet.

The daily is an eight to twelve-page paper of 56 to 84 columns and contains the very latest market reports, in addition to all the important news of the day. It has a special news service from New York, Washington and Chicago.

The weekly is a mammoth issue of 12 pages and 84 columns, and in addition to the cream of the news or the week includes an invaluable farm and home department, with a variety of special features for all classes of readers.

The Sunday issue contains regularly 20 pages or 140 columns of reading matter, and frequently 24 pages or 268 columns. This issue is much like the daily, but political topics except as items of news are allowed but little space and the additional columns are used to meet the tastes of those who desire clean, wholesome and entertaining miscellany.

THE PRIOR MEDICINE CO.,

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y.

To Protect the Trees.

Communication on the subject by P J. Lockwood, Washington, D. C:

Commissioners of DeKalb Co., Sirs:

While at Auburn I was requested to give specifications of the manner of protecting shade trees from injury of horses etc., in vogue here. There has been much expense in this behalf incurred which may serve as a valuable lesson to others. The plan is now to procure wire screening of about two inch mesh, and wire of 14 gauge and about six feet wide. The tree is then measured at about one foot above the ground and four inches allowed for future growth, this multiplied by three and four inches again allowed for lap, this strip is then cut off and rolled up so as to form a cylinder then it is placed around the tree and with a pair of pliers the ends are wraped and twisted around the wire so as to form a cylinder encircling the tree, and in diameter about 4 inches larger than the tree. This is then raised up about one foot from the ground and with two wires attached to the top a staple driven into the tree this cylinder is held in place. These wire shields were introduced here about six years ago and were first made of light wire and were because of this ineffectual. These light wire wraps as shields have been replaced with heavy wire of about 14 gauge. The wooden protectors have all been replaced with wire when the trees are of a sufficient size to afford stiffness. Care should be taken to fasten the ends well when they meet around the tree so that should horses rub against them they will not disengage the wire. Sometimes these screens or wraps were stapled or fastened down at the bottom, but the use of the heavy wire it is believed will obviate this requirement. Trees thus protected present a very neat appearance as contrasted with the old wooden box and are proof against the gnawing or injury by horses.

Respectfully,
P. J. LOCKWOOD.

Shrewd Settlers—Big Profits.

A large number of our new settlers on the lands of the North Galveston Association are farmers from the northern latitudes who have previously eked out a bare existence on poor lands, with the additional adverse condition of rigorous climates. What was considered a fair profit to them is as nothing compared to the profits derived from the cultivation of the various fruits and vegetables which are grown so profusely in Galveston county. It is not at all unusual for farmers in this county to make from $225 to $1,000 a year per acre, in the raising of pears, plums, strawberries, etc., with about half the labor and inconvenience that attended their former efforts. The North Galveston Association, through their local agents, Rickel & Sprott, are offering splendid inducement at present, and by taking advantage of them the investor or settler in Galveston county cannot fail to reap abundant reward. The address of the General Office is Box 963, Minneapolis, Minn.

THURSDAY..........MARCH 2, 1893.

LEGISLATURE closes next week.

HOUSE at Washington passed a bill to put pig tin and ore the free list,

THE governor has signed the bill that gives back to him the appointing power.

CLEVELAND has completed his cabinet. See their pictures and sketches on our second page.

GOV. GRAY may be minister to Mexico, and S. P. Sheerin, of Logansport, may be minister to Berlin.

COL. McDONALD of Columbia City will be one of the marshals in the inaugural parade Saturday.

CARTER HARRISON nominated for Mayor of Chicago over Hesing, by a large majority. Both democrats.

THE legislature may yet kill the bill they passed to extend the terms of city officers. It ought to be killed.

POPULIST House in Kansas has obeyed the supreme court, and joined the republican House of representatives.

CHICAGO has carted out of her streets nearly 50,000 loads of ice and snow during the winter just past.

JUDGE JOHN BAKER, of the U. S. district court, last week gave a decision that paupers have no right to vote.

MAHOMMEDANS have arranged to send missionaries to this country to convert christians to their faith. Queer, isn't it, now when we stop and think it over?

GEORGE S. WALSH, speaker of the House of representatives of North Dakota has left the republican party. Got tired of the old party, and likes the democrat ideas best.

LEGISLATURE has re-apportioned the State. DeKalb is put into a senatorial district with Allen, and Noble with Whitley. DeKalb county will not be very well pleased with this change.

KANSAS supreme court has decided against the populists. That ends the matter, and the two Houses must meet as one or quit. It may require that a new U. S. senator be chosen instead of John A. Martin.

THERE have been introduced into the legislature this session, about 600 bills by the House and 400 by the senate. Seventy-two had passed Saturday, 69 became laws, one vetoed, and two became laws without being signed.

FT. WAYNE capitalists want to build an electric car line to connect the city with New Haven, about four miles east. They say such a line would pay. There are two such lines between South Bend and Mishawaka, one on each side of the river.

REPUBLICAN editors of Indiana, met at Indianapolis last week, when a prominent member, their secretary, resigned and left the organization. He did not believe in McKinley, and gave that as a reason. He will make his paper, the Richmond Item, somewhat independent.

WYOMING now furnishes another democratic U. S. senator. As the legislature adjourned without electing one, the democrat governor, Osborne, has appointed A. C. Beckwith to serve for two years until another legislature meets. He is quite wealthy, and has been in the state thirty years.

SCIENTIFIC men say we first had the "stone age," then the "bronze age," then the present or "iron age," which has extended about 3,000 years, and that now we are about to enter on the "aluminum age," as they believe the new metal from clay will become the most common and the cheapest.

VICE-PRESIDENT STEVENSON'S special train went East over the B. & O. Monday afternoon, about five o'clock. There were several fine coaches, though no decorations except on one car was "Illinois democrats, Bloomington," and on another, "Stevenson Escort." Several of our people happened there at the time.

Our Two Congressmen.

The following items about our congressmen, we clip from the Ft. Wayne Journal of Feb. 26:

Congressman-elect McNagny, of the Ft. Wayne district, has arrived and is at the Willard hotel.

This is Mr. McNagny's first appearance in public life and his dignity, his very agreeable personal appearance, coupled with the ability he is known to possess, have won for him an unusually favorable impression and the Twelfth district is warmly complimented on the excellent choice it made, by the Indianians at the capital, who have known the new congressman by reputation only.

Since his arrival Mr. McNagny has been the recipient of distinguished consideration from old and new friends. He expects to remain in Washington a month or more.

Congressman McClellan, of the Twelfth district, will give his attention to his banking interests at Auburn after this congress adjourns. He has served two consecutive terms and had been on the bench previous to his election as congressman. There is a precedent in the Twelfth district in favor of rotation in office, which concedes only two terms consecutively to one man, and Mr. McClellan gave way before this tradition. He was chairman of the committee on expenditures in the navy department, and was also a member of the committee on election of president and vice-president. He has a pleasing manner that has made him popular with his colleagues and retires with the best wishes of all. Being president of the First National bank at Auburn and the DeKalb bank at Waterloo, besides having a law practice that is extensive, his private business will be quite sufficient to engross his whole attention, and Mr. McClellan is one of the few retiring congressmen who are not candidates for some appointment under the new administration.

Right From Honduras.

Was it a Central American ghost that we saw walking into our office last Friday? Hardly. It was real, live flesh and blood, and the name thereof was R. O. Talbert of Richland. It fairly took away one's breath, for we had supposed he was at that very moment exercising a fan under the palm trees of Honduras, and looking up at the hot winter sky, and thinking of the long, long voyages between him and his DeKalb county home. But here he was, as alive as ever and as much as ever in love with the land of his birth. He found quite a marked change from that climate to the severe cold weather he struck at Chicago, and which nearly paralyzed two fine parrots he brought home with him. He thinks Honduras a strange country. No trees there resemble ours, animals all different. Instead of being awakened in the morning by the crowing of chickens, it is the chattering of monkeys. There are many venemous snakes though they do but little harm. He came away the last week in January, and their boat was wrecked on a reef by the carelessness of a drunken captain. Then they took a small boat for Belize, 80 miles distant and from there took steamer for New Orleans. He had planted his land to bananas, etc., and it will be cared for by those who remain. He does not know just when he will return there.

Judge McClellan's Return.

Judge McClellan will be at home again, and to stay, early next week, as his duties as member of congress for this district will cease on Saturday. On his return he will at once re-enter on the active practice of the law, the profession of his life, and in which he has been eminently successful. His four years in congress have, we do not doubt, added greatly to his ability to cope successfully with the difficult questions that continually arise in the courts, and will make the services of the Judge even more valuable than before. Our people will always look with pride on the career of one of their number, who by his own efforts rose to the highest rank in his chosen profession, the law, and then stepped from that to one of the most honorable positions in the gift of the people—a positirn he has filled with credit to himself and to the honor of his constituents. Now, fresh from a four years' contact with the brightest and ablest legal minds of the country, his former large clientage will no doubt again seek his legal advice and assistance, and the Judge will be found as ever, in the front rank whenever there is a hard legal fight to engage the attention of the court, and the bar.

A Grand Surprise.

February 27, was the 64th birthday of A. H. Deetz, of Fairfield, but he didn't seem to think of it, and his friends planned to give him a surprise. So in the morning he was decoyed from home on some plausible excuse, till about 11 a. m., and in his absence, his friends, brothers, children, grandchildren and other relatives came in. Teams and rigs were carefully put out of sight, and they waited his coming. As he very innocently opened his door a blanket was thrown over his head, and he was carried bodily in—no easy job for he is no spring chicken. He was taken into the parlor and at once seated in a nice rocking chair which was presented to him. Then his wife gave him a pair of gold eyeglasses, and set them astraddle of his nose, and so he was a prisoner in his own home Then came the speeches followed by a nice reply of thanks by Mr. Deetz. Then came dinner. And right here was when the spring chickens did come in, and everything the heart could wish or that would make the mouth water. Then followed oranges and candies for the ladies, cigars for the gentlemen, and a good time generally. And were all happy? Well I should say so, and all went home wishing many such happy meetings to one of Fairfield's most respected pioneer farmers.

When you are looking for a bargain don't forget that your money's worth and more is obtained when you buy Brant's Balsam, acknowledged the best cough remedy to be had. A glance shows it is the largest bottle for the money on the market. Common sense teaches to buy the best and get all possible for the money, and the Brant Co. cater to this common sense instinct in combining quality and quantity, as they do in their large 25 and 50 cent bottles. They think it advertising the public will appreciate Sold by F. E. Davenport. 1

The "God bless you, Dr. Wheeler," of Geo. W. Cooper, 15 Lawn St., Cleveland, Ohio, is genuine and from the heart. He writes, July 28, 1892: "My son commenced to have fits when 10 years old. He had them three or four times a month, and as high as 19 in three days. I had him treated at the hospital and by different doctors, but it did him no good. Sixteen months ago he commenced to take Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer, and he has had only one fit since. I think him entirely cured. Will gladly answer any questions about your great medicine." The makers offer $50 reward for an incurable case of Nerve Disease. Large $1 bottles at F. E. Davenport. 1

Clifton will retire from his meat market, leaving the uptown business in the hands of the other two.

Young America is the cigar to smoke now-a-days.

Miss Young, daughter of Geo. E. Young, of Angola, was here last week, a guest of Miss Mary Young.

We can use two or three loads of wood now. Those who are waiting to hear from us can now bring it in.

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Beadle, have a fine 8-lb girl baby, born on Friday. They live only the second street from Seventh.

A little ill, then a little pill. The ill is gone the pill has won. DeWitt's Little Early Risers the little pills that cure great ills. Robbins & McCord.

G. M. Reincehl and Oron Bair of Fairfield let the light of two good-natured faces shine in on our sanctum Saturday. Always glad to meet the boys.

The Ladies Nickel Social of the Lutheran church will meet at the home of Mrs. L. Bowers next Friday, March 3, at 3 p. m. All are invited to attend.

Joe Beugnot died this week and is buried to-day. Joe has seen a great many ups and downs in life and latterly has suffered a good deal from poor health.

Miss Wildred Kline spent Saturday and Sunday in Indianapolis, having been sent for by her step father, Hon. M. F. Franks, who is there as a member of the House.

Rev. J. N. Wilson moves back to Auburn this week, and will locate in Mrs. Silver's very desirable residence on North Main street. We welcome him back to Auburn.

We feel pleased at the number and character of the new subscribers we got last month, and all the more so because they were volunteers. We shall work hard to deserve their kindness.

The Busy Bee society will meet in the basement of the M. E. church next Saturday at 2:30 p. m. A large attendance is desired as it is thanks offering. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

MARRIED: On Saturday, Feb. 25, '93, at the residence of the officiating minister, Rev. W. L. Meese, Mr. Marion Osbun to Miss Rickey Kruger, daughter of Frederick Kruger, both of this county.

The nickel social of the M. E. church will meet in the basement next Friday afternoon. A good attendance is greatly desired as the ladies want to make arrangements for the Easter Market.

Israel Ringler of Fairfield called up to renew old time acquaintance Tuesday. He is now living on the home farm, while his brother John is a postal clerk in the west, with headquarters at Lincoln, Neb.

Bad complexion indicates an unhealthy state of the system. DeWitt's Little Early Risers are pills that will correct this condition. They act on the liver, they act on the stomach, they act on the bowels. Robbins & McCord.

Several mad dogs are reported in town this week, and a number have been killed. Dr. Adams killed one for Mrs. Hodge this week. It seem rather early for this sort of thing, but it would be well to keep a watch on the animals.

MARRIED: At the residence of the officiating minister, Rev. W. L. Meese, of Auburn, Feb. 23 1893, Mr. M. J. Myers, of Ashland, Ohio, to Miss Ada Miller, daughter of Wesley Miller, of Jackson township. The young couple went back to Ohio, where they will make their home.

Dr. Swarts last week received another letter on the subject of putting down a gas well. This time it was from Boyer Brothers, at Fostoria, Ohio. They are in the business of putting down gas wells and say they want a chance if we put down any more. Everybody concedes that we have the gas.

Hon. Benjamin Patton, of Hicksville, will attend the inauguration of Cleveland on Saturday of this week, and this will make sixteen of these ceremonies he has witnessed. We doubt if any other American outside of Washington, can show such a record. It is also reported he is the only man living who was appointed to a responsible office by President Andrew Jackson.

I. N. Ackley, a former Newville boy, visited his mother and sister in this place over Sunday. He was for some years a teachers in the schools in the southeast part of the county, though in recent years has been a citizen of Oakwood, Ohio. We believe he is now working a part of the time for the Union Central Life Ins. Co. His mother has resided in Auburn for a time, his sister, Mrs. Moody, being a typewriter, and at present employed by Mr. Penfield in his law office.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Townsend of Jackson, Mich., were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Healy over Sunday. The ladies are sisters. This reminds us of a funny misunderstanding that grew out of this friendly visit. It was reported on Saturday evening that they were all playing cards, and a friend telling this to Mr. Healy, the truth came out that they were playing the new Geography game which is printed on card board. It is a very instructive game and of course a perfectly unobjectionable one.

Wm. Treace one of our Allen county friends was up here this week for a day or so to see his relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Spitler, the latter being sick. Mr. T. is one of the most intelligent and enterprising farmers in his part of the county, and is prominently mentioned as a candidate for county commissioner at the next turn of the wheel. He would make an officer better than the average, and our democratic friends over in Allen county will make no mistake if they select him for this important place.

Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills, 50 doses 25 cts.

Among the sick reported last week were Mrs J. R. Steves and old Mr. Sherlock.

Everybody calls for Kessler Bros' popular cigars, the Young America and Bill Head.

Mrs. Geo. Lanning, and daughter Bertha, spent Sunday with friends at Reading, Mich.

Do you know we are head quarters for best cabinets at lowest prices. Try us Rice, photographer. 9 11

R. H. Murch, of Butler, was over Monday to make final report as administrator of the Peter Noragon estate.

Smoke the Little Salesman, the nobbiest brand out.

The nickel social of the Presbyterian church will meet with Mrs Dr. Nusbaum on Friday afternoon of this week,

Dr. Ford has been very sick, but we believe is in a fair way to recover. Dr. Spooner, of Peru, is here with him.

Do you see Yesbera's new ad? Well that is about the new goods he got in Detroit when he was up there lately.

Leila Baker was at home over Sunday and was accompanied by two young lady friends, the Misses Eakins, of Angola.

Ev. Watson came home last week and was taken sick here. Mrs. Swarts pronounces it catarrhal fever. We believe he is now better.

Cook Ford west of the Baptist church keeps a full stock of baled hay, corn, mill feed, straw, and everything in that line. Call on him.

Mrs. Penfield returned last week from Columbus, Ohio, where she had been for treatment. We believe she is encouraged by the treatment so far.

The ladies of the Presbyterian church will give a social in the basement on Wednesday evening, March 8th. Supper from 5 to 7. Mite, 15 cents.

MARRIED: February 23, at the home of the bride in Richland township, Samuel H. Barton to Amy E. Patterson, Elder James Barton, officiating.

Henry Ford has been lying critically ill for several days, and as we close our paper Wednesday afternoon there seems to be no hope for his recovery.

Ex-Commissioner Joseph Sewell was here Monday, and insisted on paying up the COURIER way into 94. He is in fair health, but not like the old days.

J. H. Kling, of Newville, township, is the latest young man to subscribe for the COURIER. A young man who appreciates a good paper, is always appreciated.

Rev. J. A. Krum reports the most interesting meetings he ever saw, are those at Dillon Chapel near Wilmington Center. Great crowds came each evening.

James Campbell has sold his house and lot to Mrs. Alonzo Lockwook, and will move to Nappanee to make their home. They are good citizens and we hate to see them go.

Mabel Hartman and Dave Hodge were invited to take dinner out at John Shugers' Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Leedy, the latter, better known as Della Shugers, were at home for a day or two.

Eggs may be scarce and the tariff unable to produce them, but Ira Brandon can furnish you with groceries and general supplies on conditions properly fitted to the contents of your pocket book.

A. F. Clark had the luck to draw an 8-lb. package of the Butler tobacco a few days ago, as a prize, having secured several numbers in packages he had purchased. He has enough now to last awhile.

Our readers will be pleased to read once more a letter from Joseph Shade, now in Honduras, Central America, as well as the notes we make of the home coming of one of the colonists, R. O. Talbert.

"There is a salve for every wound." We refer to DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve, cures burns, bruises, cuts, indolent sores, as a local application in the nostrils it cures catarrh, and always cures piles. Robbins & McCord.

Mrs. Rebecca Stonestreet and Mrs. Anna Simon, of Butler township accompanied by Mrs. D. T. Smith of this place, made the COURIER a friendly call on Tuesday. We are pleased to count them among our list of friends and patrons.

Dr. Johnston dentist, wishing to give his whole time to his Auburn office has discontinued his Waterloo office. All records and accounts will be found at the Auburn office, where he has made arrangements to do all styles of dental work. He will use no material except such as he knows to be good.

J. L. Grubb, the popular music teacher is having a primary singing class at the Lutheran church. They meet regularly each Thursday afternoon after school closes. This week, to-day at 4, and on Saturday of this week, at 2.30, the instruction will be free, and all are invited to come. He also has a large class at Rehoboth, near S. J. Tarney,s.

W. S. Dancer had a dream the other night, that as Byron says, "was not all a dream." His interview with Saint Peter was very pleasant, and all that the most ardent friends could desire. The saint proved very obliging and polite, and all that and still Bro. Dancer was not happy. All this we can prove by Lafe Miller, but Wils don't want that dream to come around again for fear some careless saint will again "turn on the hose."

$500 REWARD is offered by the J. W. Brant Co., for a case of Nerve Debility, Sleeplessness, Headache, Nervousness, Fits, Epilepsy, Sexual Weakness and all diseases of nervous origin which cannot be cured by Dr. Wheeler's Nerve Vitalizer, the great new discovery for nervous diseases. Chas. Kelley, Chas. Triplett, M. P. Barker and Alfred Kepler, came through Auburn Tuesday on their way to take in the big inauguration at Washington. Of course the boys will have a great time.

G. W. Lewis has been staying a day or two with his daughter, Mrs. Cook Ford. He started for Washington last night, we believe to witness the inauguration of Grover Cleveland, who is Mr. Lewis' cousin.

The Jackson township Sunday School convention, will be held at the Junction next Sunday, March 5, to begin at 9:30 a. m. A good program has been prepared and there will no doubt be an interesting meeting. All are earnestly invited.

As will be seen by a notice elsewhere, Prof. Harrison is building a second residence near the World's fair grounds in Chicago. The rooms in the one already finished were taken quite rapidly, and hence the need of putting up another.

WANTED: Your wheat, oats, corn and buckwheat at the flouring mills, south of Wabash R. R., for which I will pay the top price. Also your custom work, guaranteeing quantity and quality. Give the mill a trial and be convinced.

G. L. Hilt, proprietor.

Miss Jessie Weaver one of our most popular young ladies was married last Thursday evening to Hovey Hanna, for some time employed in the Auburn Foundry. They went to Ft. Wayne the same evening, where they will make their home. We wish them all possible happiness.

Ashley Times: Herman Groscop, of Auburn, moved Monday into rooms in the Gonser & Hood block Mr. Groscop is one of the firm of Groscop & Liberenz, who are putting in the large brick manufacturing plant at this place. He is a practical brick-maker and a good man for us. Thus they come.

F. J. Yesbera, Auburn's popular jeweler, is going to give away a gold watch on May 1st, 1893, to the person guessing closest to the exact time a certain watch will run after being fully wound up. For each and every dollar you spend with him you will have a chance to guess, so do all your trading with him and get lots of guesses.

Mr. C. F. Davis, editor of the Bloomfield, Iowa Farmer, says: I can recommend Chamberlain's Cough remedy to all sufferers with colds and croup. I have used it in my family for the past two years and have found it the best I ever used for the purpose for which it is intended. 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord.

J. E. Rose was at Indianapolis this week to attend to a case in the United States court. The case was that of Theodore Robbins on trial for having in his possession a lot of counterfeiting tools. He was given thirty days which Mr. Rose thinks quite reasonable for one charged with such an offense, for Uncle Sam is a pretty strong man to deal with.

Our readers will be interested to learn that T. C. Mays will soon be married again. We this week received a nicely printed invitation to attend the nuptials of "Col. T. C. Mays, of Arkansas, to Mrs. Cecil S. Page, of N. Y., at Washington, D. C., March 5. At home at Paragould, Arkansas, after March 15." This will be Tom's third venture on the sea of matrimony. His first wife, a sister to Mrs Tom Gross, both well known here, was divorced from him, and is again married and living, we believe, in Dakota. Some years after, Mr. Mays was married in Arkansas, we believe, but we suppose this lady is dead, though we have not heard of it. We hope Mr. Mays will be successful this time and enjoy a long and happy married life.

That Beef Problem.

L. J. Miller, who was one of the early teachers of this county, takes delight in putting before the younger people, now and then, one of the old "test problems" that used to puzzle the student in arithmetic. He took the breath away from some of the boys a week or so ago by firing this one at them: "A and B together bought half of a beef which weighed 200 pounds and for which they paid $6 apiece, or $12 in all, being at the rate of 6 cents a pound. When they divided it, one agreed to take the hind quarter at 6½ cents and the other the fore quarter at 5½ cents a pound. The question is, how many pounds should each receive if each gets $6,00 worth."

Back From Texas.

T. H. Sprott returned Tuesday from his trip to North Galveston, Texas, full of interesting information about the new town. The town is a short distance north of the City of Galveston, and is being settled up by immigrants who are swarming in that direction. It is a great fruit country and the lands are laid off into plats of a few acres, and on these, will be put the orchards, etc., from which fruit will be raised equal to any in the world. In some regards, it is like southern California. Oranges, etc., were growing ripe on the trees, the weather was warm and mild and the climate healthful and delightful. Mr. Sprott is enthusiastic in his praises of the new place. It is likely there will be another excursion there soon, and a chance for some of our readers to go and see for themselves.

MOST people think they should pay a good deal of attention to love as a sort of sacred thing. Bacon dismisses it with half a page, and says it is a weak passion which no man of sense can afford to acknowledge; and one of the most successful family magazines in the world will not allow the subject to be mentioned in its columns.

EVERY breach of faith, every broken promise, every mean advantage taken, however small and trifling each may appear, helps to build up the dishonesty which at some time, and by some one, wrecks the happiness of multitudes and drags down the sinning one to degradation and sin. The honor of the country and the integrity of the nation are in the hands of every citizen; each is responsible for his share in making or in marring them.

IN 1892 the raisin crop of California amounted to 42,000,000 pounds, which was about equal to the consumption of the United States four or five years ago. The first 1,000 carloads sent East realized the raisers 4½ cents per pound. But, says the San Francisco Examiner, owing to an overstock of the market and "insane competition" in November several hundred carloads of the remainder were consigned to Eastern brokers, who in many cases loaned money thereon, and were sold at prices that would bring the grower about 1 cent per pound.

A POLICE JUDGE of San Francisco has stipulated that in his court a woman must always be spoken of as a lady. A point in etiquette, backed by the dignity of the bench, can only be ignored by those willing to run the risk of being in contempt. The saleslady has already won her place, with the kitchen lady a good second and the scrublady a likely candidate. To demand that a policeman shall say, "Yer honer, I arrested this lady in Tar Flat howling drunk," and the court responds, "The lady is fined $6," does seem at first to be stretching politeness, but doubtless the public can be educated up to it.

WHAT in the mischief are we to eat nowadays? After listening to the vegetarians, who say we shouldn't eat meats, and to the sun ripeners, who warn us against eating underground growths like potatoes and turnips, we hear the voice of another food reformer who says we mustn't eat anything made of grain, such as wheat bread, corn dodgers, flapjacks, oat cakes, peas-meal bannocks, or macaroni, all of which are hard of digestion and bad for the health. Go to grass, ye humbugs all, and herd with Nebuchadnezzar. Give us all things that are good, wholesome, nourishing, tasteful, and high-toned—such things as make a person feel happy and brave. Give us a show. Let folks loose in the animal, vegetable, graminivorous, cocoanut, chestnut, and apple-sass kingdoms.

POOR old De Lesseps. That will be the verdict of the world. The feeble octogenarian was sentenced to be imprisoned five years and pay a fine of $1,000. His son was sentenced for the same term and his fine placed at $750. M. Fontaine and M. Cotter received the same penalties as the younger De Lesseps, and M. Eiffel, of Eiffel tower fame, two years and a fine of $4,000. It is almost to be hoped that M. de Lesseps' mental condition is as feeble as has been reported, that he may not realize the disgrace that has clouded his brilliant career. Few will believe that he was criminally guilty in the Panama scandal and all generous persons will hope that the President of the republic may see his way to the exercise of executive clemency. As to the others, they have made their beds and must lie in them.

A MICHIGAN young woman was about to elope with a man whose family could not afford to lose him. The woman was the ward of a trust company, a dignified and responsible concern, that realized the necessity for prompt action. The woman would not listen to reason, so the trust company, with laudable zeal, hired a pugilist to waylay the man and beat into him a sense of his own unworth. The plan succeeded. The fellow got the best licking that muscular minion, anxious to earn his money, could devise. The scales fell from the woman's eyes. She refused to fly with a battered cripple whose optics were blackened and nose awry. A trust that makes a specialty of moral reform deserves frequent dividends.

THE passage of a law last year in Massachusetts restricting the working hours of women and minors in manufacturing establishments to fifty-eight hours a week would, it was feared, place the manufacturers of that State at a disadvantage with those of other States. The apprehension was increased when the same wages were given for fifty-eight as for sixty hours of labor. But as it turned out this move on the part of Massachusetts has been an incentive to other States to take like action. The New Hampshire Legislature has just passed a law exactly similar in its terms, and the large Lewiston Mills in Maine have increased wages to a point where the cost of production will be equal to the short hour production in Massachusetts. This result is encouraging, as it shows that efforts to improve the condition of the workingman in one State are pretty sure to be seconded elsewhere.

THE frequency with which the courts set aside the wills made by lawyers of repute disposing of their own property suggests to laymen the expediency of having their testaments drawn by those who are not members of the legal profession. Samuel J. Tilden was regarded in life as the most astute lawyer in New York, but he was unable to draw a will for himself that would stand the scrutiny of the courts. The late Senator McDonald was also one of the foremost men in his profession, but it seems from the pending contention that he too was incapable of framing a valid will. As a shoemaker's children are always the worst shod of their companions, so a lawyer's heirs are always most perplexed and in contention over his work. Wealthy lawyers will hereafter, if they are wise, hesitate to undertake the task of apportioning their property among their legal heirs. There will be less trouble in disposing of their possessions if they die intestate than if they leave a will lacking in the perspicuity which should characterize all testaments.

A FAVORITE drink in Hawaii is known as the "poi cocktail." It is made by stirring poi into a glass of milk. An American who has tried it says there is nothing like a poi cocktail for the "head" that follows a prolonged spree. "When the stomach absolutely refuses anything known to civilization," he writes, glowingly, "when the throat is dry and burning, the voice husky, the temple throbbing and the hands shaking," the cocktail is swallowed and is "almost instantly assimilated." "A delicious feeling of calm and rest steals over the patient. * * * The throat becomes once more of flesh instead of fire and the head ceases to ache. In fifteen minutes he is ready for another spree." With the aid of the poi cocktail, then, a man of average capacity, with free access to spree-producing beverages of the necessary strength and the disposition to imbibe them, can indulge in thirteen and one-third separate and distinct jags every working day of ten hours. This computation allows him thirty minutes for getting drunk and fifteen minutes for sobering off. An experienced rounder will testify that in many cases a quarter of an hour's indulgence in whisky and beer or whisky and hard cider will develop a full-grown drunk, but with a view to greater scientific exactness we have made half an hour the basis of calculation. The result is simply appalling. By devoting eight hours of the twenty-four to sleep a determined debauchee can crowd twenty-one sprees into one day and still have fifteen minutes left for indulging in free lunches. The poi cocktail is the worst enemy to sobriety ever discovered. It is the most potent jag-promoter yet devised by the ingenuity of man. Away with it!

A Dog Story.

John Christ, of Shamokin, Pa., owned a dog which was getting old and had outlived its usefulness. In order to rid the animal of its suffering without much pain he bethought himself of dynamite. He bound the dog to a tree in the yard, the dynamite was attached, and, after applying a match to the fuse, the owner made haste to get out of the way. He started for the kitchen, but the dog broke loose and started in pursuit. Both crossed the threshold of the door when an explosion occurred. The dog was blown to fragments, while Christ, strange to say, escaped without a scratch.

Mutton and Beef.

It has sometimes been argued that mutton is not as apt to induce flesh as beef, while it contributes equally toward making muscle, and for this reason some professional trainers prefer it for diet. Certain it is that the Scotch, who are a nation of mutton-eaters, are famous for their brawn and muscle, while the English, who are beef-eaters, are apt, while muscular, to be rotund in figure.

The Ruling Passion Strong in Death.

Governor McKinley in his first speech since the presidential election, at Columbus, Ohio, said:

"The great policy of protection is the true policy."

"The wool growers have had it their own way ever since 1867."

"You are entitled to the highest protection."

"I do not believe in free raw material."

Bravo, McKinley! you are a brick;
A regular fight down stunner!
You'll spike your guns and sink the ship,
But never turn a runner.

Whilst you your party represent,
We're sure to stand in winner.
You're just the sort as won't repent,
An unregenerate sinner.

There's no mistaking where you stand,
Nor what you're after neither,
Mulct every laborer in the land,
And wouldn't blush much either.

I thought as how you might have learnt
A little moderation,
Seeing your fingers you have burnt
In fooling with the nation.

But no! you're just the same old man,
And nothing will content ye,
But squeezing all you ever can,
To give to them with plenty.

"Nothing forget and nothing learn"
Is the motto of your party,
And that's what makes us chaps, what earn
Our living, hate you hearty.

Our Tribute to Sugar-Refiners.

It seems an easy and small thing to have protected the sugar-refiners to the extent of a duty of from three-fifths to-one-half cent per pound on refined sugar while admitting the raw sugar free—something no one but a refiner buys. In a short space of time the system enabled the refineries to pay enormous dividends on stock four times watered, and to concentrate seven-eighths of all the refineries in the United States under one head, the American Sugar-Refining Company. The company mentioned could not pay over 10 per cent. on its plant, intrinsically worth $18,000,000, for sugar-refining only were it not for this McKinley bill. As it is it pays 7 per cent. on $37,500,000 preferred stock, same on $10,000,000 bonds and 10 per cent. on about $36,000,000 of common stock, which stock is now selling at between 130 and 140. In short, stock that is selling at a value of $110,000,000 would be worth only $18,000,000 if Congress would at once take this half a cent off refined sugar. Granulated sugar, which is the sugar mostly used, would sell then for 4⅛ cents per pound, same as in Canada, instead of 4½ as in New York. Allow that they make three-eighths of one cent per pound only. They refine an average of 30,000 tons per week, or call it 1,500,000 tons per annum, which is at least 3,000,000,000 pounds. Now, what is three-eights cent per pound protection but $11,250,000? Therefore you can see why they can pay enormous dividends on fourfold-watered stock and have a handsome surplus left. The American people are contributing to this mammoth refinery and do not appreciate it, simply because sugar is cheap anyway. But if we are to contribute a premium of $11,000,000 annually it ought to go to the Government and not to the sugar refineries.—Reason, in New York World.

What Makes Wheat and Cotton Cheap.

I desire to express appreciation of the excellent work done by you during the recent electoral campaign, more particularly in the clearness with which you have seen and stated the most serious evil which is inflicted upon the people of the West by a protective tariff—the exclusion of their customers from their markets. It is the tariff, and nothing but the tariff, which has kept down the price of wheat, corn, and cotton. The tariff has shut out from us more than $800,000,000 of European products every year, for every dollar of which payment would have been made in Western farm products and Southern cotton and tobacco. That it has thus excluded imports to that amount admits of no doubt. Indeed, protectionists boast that it has done so, and bewail the terrible possibility of its abolition for the avowed reason that it would lead to a flood of foreign goods, to this or an even greater amount. And it admits of still less doubt that the admission of these goods would lead instantly to a demand for Western and Southern products to the full amount of $800,000,000 a year. This would raise the price of wheat by 30 cents, of corn 20 cents, and of cotton 3 cents.

Few advocates of tariff reform have perceived this fact, although it is conclusively proved by the history of all tariff reductions in the past. It is to your credit that you have persistently dwelt upon the effect of the tariff in closing the American farmer's markets; and I hope that you will continue the work of education along the same lines, until the farmer has an open market in which both to buy and to sell.—Thomas G. Shearman, in St. Louis Republic.

Wonders of Annexation.

This is already the greatest country the sun ever shone upon. But what will it be when Claus Spreckels annexes Hawaii to us; when Goldwin Smith has pulled down the commercial and political barriers between us and Canada; and when the American syndicate now in control of San Domingo's finances have hitched that miserable bankrupt island on to our then united kingdom? What great blessings will flow from the possession of these islands and countries, and the increased commerce do to unrestricted trade with them? For if all are a part of this United States the benefits of free trade will be undisputed. The most rock-ribbed professor in the McKinley school of economics does not advocate protective tariff walls between our States; and certainly there are more natural reasons for such a wall between New York and Virginia than between New York and Canada—that is, of course, if Canada were also a part of this country.

Now two tariff walls are necessary between each of these countries to keep them mutually prosperous. But let a few politicians and rich speculators put one name over all, and, like magic, everything is reversed; trade will then be wholesome and enrich each and all of the before separate nations. It will then be perfectly proper for a merchant or a manufacturer in New York to sell to a farmer in Canada and take his produce in exchange. A wonderful world this, with its common-sense ways of solving perplexing questions!

"We Are the People."

About 25,000 protected manufacturers have formed the habit, during the past thirty years, of calling themselves "the people," and of drawing no lines of distinction between their and our prosperity and country. It must be admitted that they have been encouraged in this delusion until it has become in part true. These few manufacturers have made this country their own, and have substituted themselves for the people to the extent that they have for years owned Congress and virtually dictated the policy of the country on matters affecting themselves differently from what it does the rest of the people. Thus they have made tariff laws that take dimes and dollars out of the pockets of millions and put millions into the pockets of thousands. This they call making the country prosperous; and, so far as they are concerned, it is so. But, as may be imagined, and as the people have decided by about 7,000,000 to 5,000,000, there is another side to this question.

Well, it could scarcely be expected that these habits could be broken at once. Hence it is not strange that we should find language like the following from the Manufacturer, of Philadelphia: "An extra session of Congress is much to be deprecated, and for many reasons. American industry now has high prosperity which cannot endure without the existence of the protective system. Under ordinary circumstances that system can hardly be overthrown for eighteen months to come. It is in every way desirable that the country should have all the advantage that is possible from its continuance, so that full preparation for the impending revolution shall be made. The Post and other radical journals are consistent in asking for prompt action, but, nevertheless, they will not obtain it."

This sounds as if the manufacturers consider that they still have a "cinch" on our law-making body, and intend to continue to pull the political and legislative strings. There will be an awakening and a realization for some of our pampered manufacturers soon after the 4th of March, when an extra session orders them to take their hands out of the people's pockets—not in eighteen months, but at once.

"Plunging Into Wild Disaster."

The Manufacturer of Dec. 3 says: "If the tariff permits the manufacturers to filch from the people their substance, it cannot be repealed a day too soon. If free trade is to bring higher wages to the workers and lower prices to everybody, then Mr. Cleveland's duty is to call Congress together in March and to insist that we shall have free trade before July. To defer for any reasons the precipitation of these blessings upon the nation would be a crime. To postpone the day of jubilee out of consideration for the feelings or the interests of the robber manufacturers would be to betray the people for the advantage of their enemies."

We find no fault with this logic or with these statements. Congress cannot stop the robbery any too soon to suit us. The Manufacturer, however, leaves us in doubt as to the sincerity of its opinions when it says: "The mass of the Democrats are well aware that the summary overthrow of protection would plunge the nation into wild disaster."

We confess the provocation was great, but we are unable to make ourselves believe that out of spite or for pure cussedness the mass of the Democrats—that is, the mass of the people—have decided to plunge into wild disaster. We incline to accept the first conclusion of the Manufacturer, and to insist that we shall have free trade, or as near to it as we can get, before July, and that the day of jubilee be no longer postponed because of the interests of the robber manufacturers.

Help! Quick!

The talk of Congress holding an extra session to reform the tariff has subsided considerably, but the necessity of an extra session exists as much if not more now than ever. If the McKinley bill was the monstrosity that the Democratic party made a majority of the voters believe, why not get it off the books at once? There is neither reason nor justice in making the people pay tribute to the beneficiaries of protection any longer than they should. The President and House of Representatives were elected upon the promise of the Democrats to revise the tariff, and the complexion of the Senate was changed by making that question the issue in electing a number of legislatures. No excuse whatever can be trumped up to call for postponement until December. The party should do its duty to those who placed it in power by proving its sincerity when the Chicago convention stated that "protection was a fraud."—Freeland (Pa.) Tribune.

We're Headed Right Again.

"As the member of an infant empire, as a philanthropist by character and, if I may be allowed the expression, as a citizen of the great republic of humanity at large, * * * I cannot avoid reflecting with pleasure on the probable influence that commerce may have on human manners and society in general. I consider how mankind may be connected like one great family in fraternal ties. I indulge a fond, perhaps an enthusiastic, idea, that as the world is evidently much less barbarous than it has been its melioration must still be progressive; that nations are becoming more humanized in their policy, and in fine that the period is not very remote when the benefits of a liberal and free commerce will pretty generally succeed to the devastations and horrors of war."

THE SENATE AND HOUSE.

WORK OF OUR NATIONAL LAWMAKERS.

Proceedings of the Senate and House of Representatives—Important Measures Discussed and Acted Upon—Gist of the Business.

The National Solons.

Senator Gorman in some remarks which he made in the Senate Monday in opposition to appropriation for public buildings spoke of the serious and alarming condition which confronted the country, expressed the belief that only the borders of the trouble had been touched, and said that extraordinary action would have to be taken by the Treasury Department, or else Congress would have to reassemble before next July to meet the condition. Mr. Quay moved amendments, which were agreed to, fixing the limit of cost of the public buildings at Allegheny, Pa., at $535,000; of the public building at San Francisco, Cal., at $2,000,000, and of the public building at Portland, Ore., at $1,000,000, and appropriating $5,000 for an additional story to the public building at Sheboygan, Wis. Mr. Allison offered amendments, which were agreed to, appropriating $25,000 for the completion of the postoffice building at Clarksville, Tenn., and $35,000 for the completion of the public building at Sioux Falls, N. D. After an executive session the Senate adjourned. Filibustering against the New York and New Jersey bridge bill proved ineffectual in the House. It was led by Messrs W. A. Stone and Dalzell, both of Pennsylvania, but they were never able to muster more than seven men to their support and the bill was passed practically without opposition.

In the House, Tuesday, the hours were mostly employed in filibustering against the car-coupler bill. Day and night were devoted to the consideration of the postoffice appropriation bill, the debate on which was confined to the special service provision. But the car-coupler measure was the one which met with determined opposition. Mr. Richardson led the opposing party and, by parliamentary maneuvers, prevented any action being taken on it.

The first of what is said to be a daily series of conflicts between the appropriation bills and the anti-options bill until the latter is acted on was the feature of Wednesday's session of the House. The members were worn out from Tuesday night's session, which lasted until morning, and the day passed tamely. Mr. Hatch had grown tired of the delay to which the anti-options bill is being subjected, and when it was moved to take up the postoffice appropriation bill he antagonized the motion with the measure of which he is champion. Being defeated he made the same fight also unsuccessfully when the postoffice bill was passed with the special mail facility appropriation included in it, and again when the Indian appropriation bill was called up. Members were thus put on record, and then the Indian question was discussed languidly for three hours. In the Senate Senator Chandler, from the Committee on Immigration, submitted a report on his bill establishing additional regulations concerning immigration in the United States by increasing by three the number of excluded classes of aliens. The consular and diplomatic appropriation was next brought before the Senate, but the consideration of executive business was resumed instead.

Good progress was made in the Senate Thursday in disposing of the absolutely necessary work of Congress. Within less than an hour two of the general appropriation bills—the diplomatic and consular and the military academy—were read, considered and passed. Then the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, which appropriates about $22,000,000, was taken up and considered up till the time of adjournment. Without disposing of the legislative bill, the Senate adjourned. On motion of Mr. Hitt in the House, a bill was passed for the relief of George W. Jones, late United States Minister to the United States of Colombia. Mr. Jones, who was the first United States Senator from the State of Iowa, was present, and when the Speaker announced that it had been agreed to he arose and returned his hearty thanks to Mr. Hitt for his successful effort. The sundry civil appropriation bill, with Senate amendments, was laid before the House and referred to the Committee on Appropriations. Mr. Peel (Ark.) moved that the House go into committee of the whole for the consideration of general appropriation bills. This motion was antagonized by Mr. Hatch (Mo.), who wished the consideration of the anti-option bill. Mr. Peel's motion prevailed—yeas, 152; nays, 75—and the consideration of the Indian appropriation bill was resumed. Without disposing of the bill the committee rose and the House adjourned.

Mr. Hatch received another reverse Friday in his efforts to secure consideration of the anti-option bill. It was his third reverse within twenty-four hours, and it caused much alarm in the anti-option ranks. There was a disposition to criticise Mr. Hatch for lack of judgment in bringing the bill forward in antagonism to the appropriation bill. Mr. Hatch, who was presiding over the committee of the whole, left the chair and addressing his successor said that for three legislative days the Indian bill had been under consideration. There was not, he continued, an intelligent member of the House who did not absolutely know that at this hour of the session the appropriation bill was being used as a means of obstructing the consideration of the anti-option bill, and that the opponents of the latter measure, the friends of the demonetization of silver and the friends of the Senate rider to an appropriation bill were in an absolute agreement and conspiracy, and no gentleman from this time until 12 o'clock March 4 could shield himself under any sort of subterfuge unless he was willing to go on record not only as opposed to the anti-option bill, but as the opponent of silver and the friend of the 3 per cent. amendment. The House was brought face to face with this issue, and he gave notice that he would continue this struggle in the interest of the people as against the interest of Lombard street and Wall street until the people's rights were preserved. The House then took a recess until the evening session, which was to be devoted to the consideration of private pension bills. The debate in the Senate was over the question presented in the legislative appropriation bill, whether the Utah Commission, which has been in existence for the last ten years, should be abolished, as proposed by the House, or continued in office, as recommended by the Senate Committee on Appropriations. The question was decided in favor of continuing the commission.

A fight was inaugurated in the House Saturday. It was over the sundry civil appropriation bill which contains the Sherman bond amendment. There are in all 207 amendments to the bill. Mr. Holman desired that all—except the Sherman amendment, upon which there was to be debate—be nonconcurred in. Mr. Bland, as leader of the opposition to the Sherman amendment, objected unless it was agreed that that amendment should be, after debate, also nonconcurred in. This suggestion of Mr. Bland's raised the antagonism of Mr. Cockran, and no agreement was arrived at. The silver men then resorted to filibustering tactics, which were effectual, and after a speech by Mr. Bland the bill went over without action. After four hours passed in discussing various amendments (of little importance) to the legislative appropriation bill the Senate passed the bill, insisted on its amendments, and requested a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes.

AT 200 feet only the best Spanish armor could resist the English arrow. Many museums have steel corselets pierced through by an arrow.

AT the coming of the Spaniards, 1492, the most effective weapon among the Caribbean Indians was a wooden lance, the point hardened in the fire.

IN the fourteenth century armor became so heavy that many soldiers only 30 years old were deformed or permanently disabled by its weight.

THE Gauls, to make handles for their stone axes, cleft the branch of a tree, placed the ax in it, and left it till the wound in the wood had been completely healed.

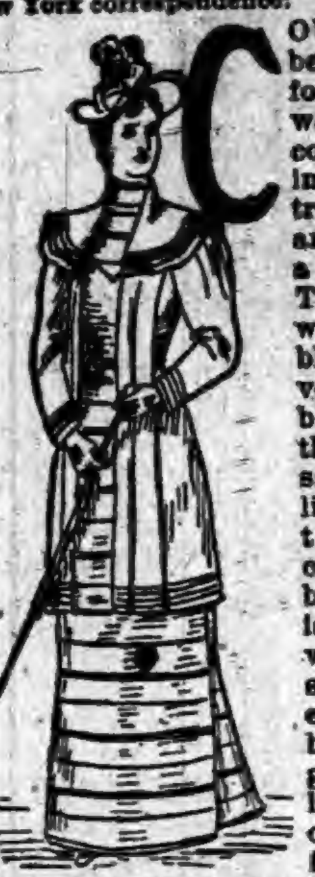
CRISP FASHION LETTER FROM THE METROPOLIS.

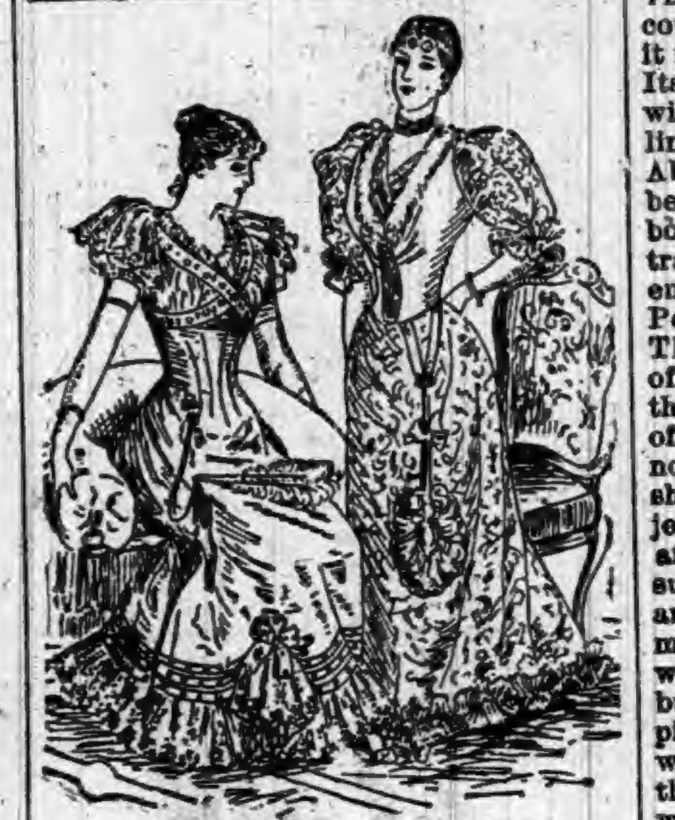
A Well-Informed Correspondent Tells of the Newest Costumes, New Ideas, a Nobby Walking Suit, an Embroidered Theater Wrap, and a Love of an Empire Gown.

Modes for the Month.

New York correspondence:

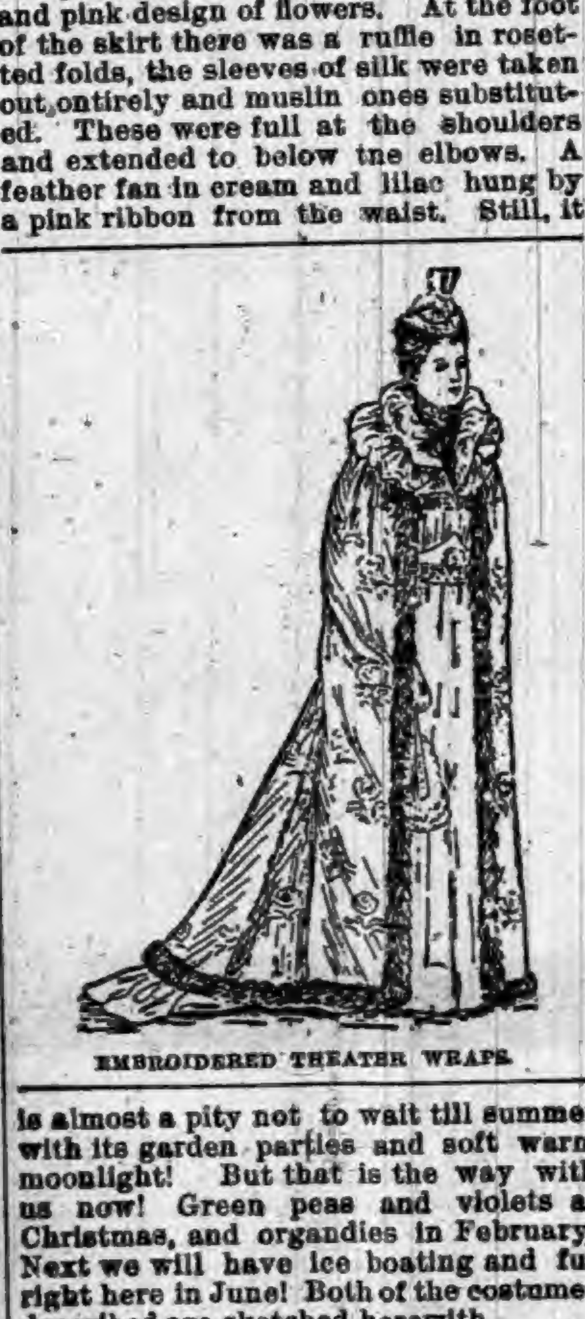


COULD anything be more suitable for brisk outdoor walking than the costume pictured in the initial illustration? It has an open cloak and a vest of velvet. The material is of wool in a gray-blue tint. The vest is of gray-blue velvet and the cloak of the same color, but of lighter cloth and trimmed with camel's hair braid. The skirt is taken in the width, so that no seam is needed except in the back, which is gored so that it looks like any other skirt. In front it needs some small pleats; in the back the folds turn toward the center. The skirt is lined with silk or satin and has a balayeuse. The waist is plain, and may be worn with or without the velvet vest. The long jacket can also have a vest which is buttoned to it directly. If the waist is worn without the vest, a velvet belt is used which crosses at the back. The dress material has no seam in front except the darts, and fastens at the shoulders, arm-hole, and under the arm, with very small hooks. If you do not want to cut the material the front of the bodice can be pleated. The sleeves are Russian in form, with deep cuffs. The velvet vest is low cut in front and in the back, as shown in the picture, and is kept in position by whalebones. It reaches only to the skirt band and hooks in front, carrying the side point to be hooked at the side of the belt. The skirt of the cloak crosses in the back by an added fold. In the front it is box pleated and sewed at the waist, so as to fall loosely. The jacket is silk-lined and has a little cape which is trimmed with braid. The sleeves are also trimmed with braid.



FESTOONED WITH ORGANDIES.

It seems a pity to begin to use organdies and silk muslins till summer comes in, but they are so pretty that it is hard not to. Besides they give an effect of vogue to the somewhat passe gowns of the season, at this time when one hardly wants to buy entirely new outfits. A very pretty Nile green silk that had grown a little soiled about the edge of the skirt, and marked about the arms as a party dress, was brightened into charming freshness by a deep ruffle of silk organdie set in festoons at the foot of the skirt. The top of the ruffle was headed by three rows of ribbon, pink, rich green and gold, these being the colors in the organdie. The ribbons were jeweled with amber, black jet and emerald beads. The upper part of the bodice was covered with the organdie, making a sort of yoke outlined by a band of the pink ribbon that crossed the breast and passed to the back under the arms. Big ruffles of the organdie fell over the shoulders. The dress was certainly a lovelier one than ever it had been when first made. Another afternoon gown of rose silk had the entire skirt covered with a delicate silk muslin, all misty with a combination of lilac cream and pink design of flowers. At the foot of the skirt there was a ruffle in rosetted folds, the sleeves of silk were taken out entirely and muslin ones substituted. These were full at the shoulders and extended to below the elbows. A feather fan in cream and lilac hung by a pink ribbon from the waist. Still, it is almost a pity not to wait till summer with its garden parties and soft warm moonlight! But that is the way with us now! Green peas and violets at Christmas, and organdies in February! Next we will have ice boating and fur right here in June! Both of the costumes described are sketched herewith.

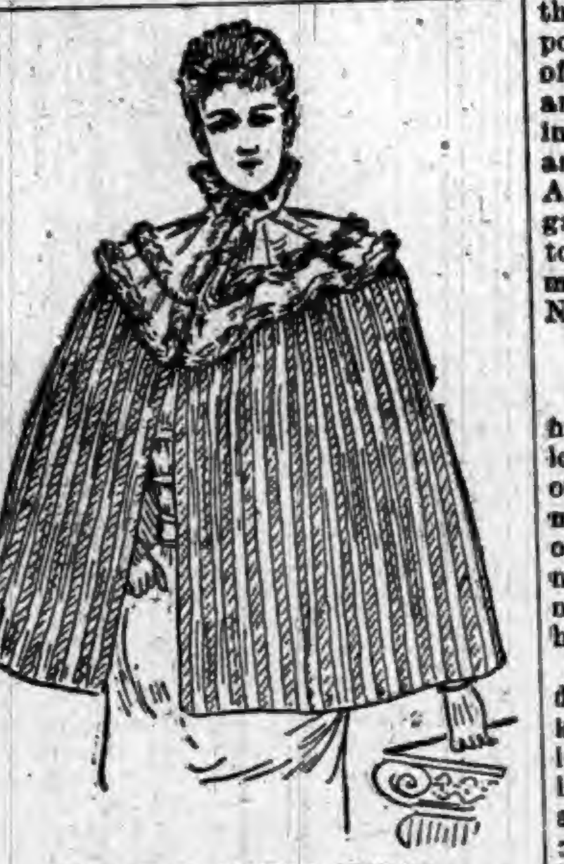


EMBROIDERED THEATER WRAPS.

The next picture shows an embroidered theater wrap. The fur plastron which comes down to a point in front is surrounded by a double-frilled collar, which fastens in front. Beneath the plastron the long front breadths begin. These are fastened on with large safety-hooks and held in position in front by a very broad girdle that is sewn on one side and hooked on the other. This belt or band is very stiffly lined and is adorned with bead work. It is straight on the lower edge and at the top is cone-shaped. The whole of the front breadths, lengthwise and around the edge, are bordered with fur. They are made of straight material and are slightly gathered in at the top under the yoke and collar. Where they join the back breadths they are very much sloped, so as to fit the figure in the fashion of an ordinary long cloak. Either changeable velvet or silk can be used as lining; for our model brown velvet with large yellow brocaded flowers on it was used. The double collar was of yellow velvet and so was the girdle, which was embroidered with brown beads. With the wrap was worn a very small turban-shaped cap of yellow velvet, trimmed with yellow ostrich plumes and an antique buckle.

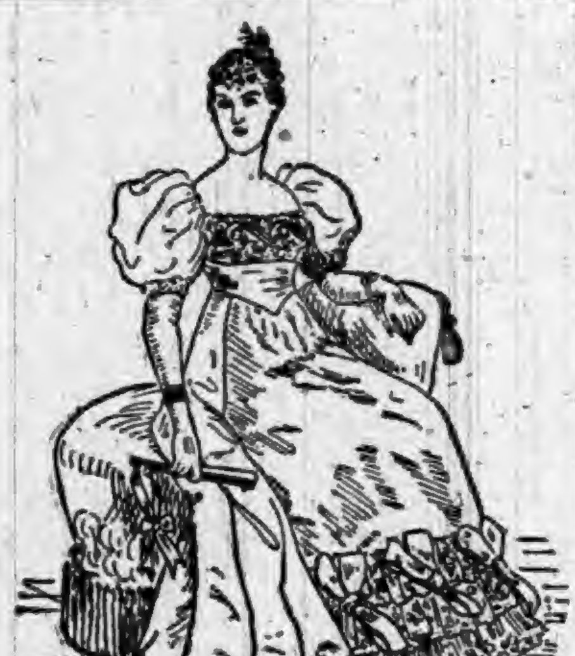
Another outer garment for evening wear is presented in the next picture. It is an opera cape with double velvet collar. The cape is made of striped mauve and pink lined with woolen material, which serves instead of the ordinary silken lining, and is also warmer. The mauve stripe of the lower part of this opera cloak merges into a greenish shade, and the pink stripes have narrow diagonal lines which give the impression of being raised or embossed. The velvet collar is cut round, so that it stands out on the shoulders, and is but little gathered at the neck. The lining of the changeable velvet collar must be cut out first and properly fitted. It is alike back and front, and is sewn in at the same time with the long cape.

The Empire gown, when modified by the train and petticoat effect, admits much elaboration, as in the example pictured. The petticoat part may have at the foot a border as costly and elegant as you like. It may be lace, knots of ribbon, flowers, or rich beading. The material may be of the richest, and may either match or contrast with the train. The train is of heavy stuff and, of course, lined with rich material, because it is entirely loose from the petticoat. Its edge may be embroidered heavily with rich jeweling and beading. The lining may contrast with the outside. About the waist, the waist, of course, being close under the arm, passes a bodice girdle of the material of the train. The bodice should be so heavily embroidered that it seems merely a Persian-like band of rich needle work. The big puffed sleeves, of the material of the train are furnished at the edge with a narrower band of the same embroidery. This must not be applique embroidery, and it should be of real metal thread, and of jewels as costly as you please, or can afford. If you fancy the Empire style suits only the simpler materials, you are making a big mistake. One thing may be said for the Empire: Maybe a woman may took a bit queer standing, but seated she can hardly help being a picture. If she will only hold her head well and try to do justice to her gown, the rest of her will be all right. The woman with a very long waist held in by a fearfully tight corset is not only miserable when she is seated, but she looks it, and she can neither sit down nor get up gracefully. The Empire-clad girl should be able to do both, if she is not dressed all wrong beneath the gown.



CAPE WITH DOUBLE COLLAR.

Be careful in selecting your purples, especially in cloth. Many purples seem to be an ugly brown at night. The right purple should only take a richer and deeper tone by gas light. Black in combination with purple brings out the latter color, by day as well as by night, into added brilliancy. Purple seems to suggest furs and velvet and richness. It is by all means a color for winter and cold weather. Also remember that the revived "royal purple" does not shade off into lighter colors and lavender as did our violet of a season or so ago. Purple is essentially a color by itself, and merges itself into no other color. It permits near it only such other shades as will lend themselves to its own regality. Just remember that when you contemplate putting a purple veil over your rosy cheeks and don't do it. As for green veils, what can one say? The woman who will wear one is beyond advice. As well leave her to her own destruction, and what is worse, let her disturb every one who looks at her. By the way, the purple we find in old brocades makes the modern purple seem harsh and garish. The modern purple has a stone-grayness of tone; the old purple has a soft, almost rosy shade. Let this be a word to the wise.



MODIFIED EMPIRE GOWN.

Oldest University.

The prevalent idea that the oldest university is in Europe is incorrect. In the tenth and eleventh centuries the university at Fez, Africa, was almost the only seat of Arabic and Christian learning in the world. Before universities existed in Paris, Oxford, Cambridge, Padua, or Bologna, students flocked to Fez from Andalusia, France, and even England, and Fez is to-day the principal western seat of Mohammedan theology.

Education in Georgia.

The constitution of Georgia limits public school education to "the elementary branches of an English education," and the Governor has vetoed a bill to afford instruction in physiology and the State and Federal constitutions, on the ground, among others, of its impolicy. His Excellency is himself a school teacher.

Is Blue Really Ireland's Color.

Blue, it is claimed, is really the national color of Ireland; certainly it was from the advent of Strongbow until quite recently. The late Sir B. Burke, Ulster king of arms and author of "Burke's Peerage," is quoted on this point thus: "Azure and azure alone has been the color of Ireland since the conquest. At the creation of the Knights of St. Patrick, when it was the object of George III. to gratify the national sensibility of Ireland, the color selected for the knights was blue. The royal Irish regiments have their facings generally blue, and never green; while the uniform of the Irish brigade in the service of France was red. About seventy years ago, when the peerage of Bantry was created, one of the supporters granted was a female figure, representing Ireland—namely, a lady robed in blue and standing in front of a harp."—New York Sun.

Thackeray on Happiness.

For my own part I know of nothing more contemptible, unmanly or unwomanly, and craven than the everlasting sighing for happiness. Those who have the most of it think the least about it. But in the thinking about and doing their duty happiness comes—because the heart and mind are occupied with earnest thought that touches at a thousand points the beautiful and sublime realities of the universe! The heart and mind are brought—and reverently be it said—in contact with the Creator and Ruler and Father of all the perfect bliss. Again, with leisure; it is a very pleasant garment to look at, but a very bad one to wear. The ruin of thousands—aye, millions—may be traced to it.—The Novelist.

A "Crank."

If this is an "old American word," it has been in common use in Derbyshire as long as I can remember, and it is still often heard. It is used to discribe a man who has fads, fancies, and notions outside the common run of those of his neighbors. A man with a bee in his bonnet is cranky, and so are those who ride hobbies of any kind.

It is good old English, and, having died away and gone out of here, has been kept alive and is now revivified in America. Burton used it nearly 300 years ago in his "Anatomy," and Wendell Holmes, after tacitly accepting it as of American coinage, discovered and pointed out that Burton had used it according to its accepted meaning in America.—Notes and Queries.

Swinging Around the Circle

Of the diseases to which it is adapted with the best results, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a family medicine, comprehensive in its scope, has never been thrust upon public attention in the guise of a universal panacea for bodily ills. This claim, daily arrogated in the columns of the daily press by the proprietors of medicines far inferior to it as specifics, has in a thousand instances disgusted the public in advance by its absurdity, and the prospects of other remedies of superior qualities have been handicapped by the pretensions of their worthless predecessors. But the American people know, because they have verified the fact by the most trying tests, that the Bitters possesses the virtues of a real specific in cases of malarial and liver disorder, constipation, nervous, rheumatic, stomach and kidney trouble. What it does it does thoroughly, and mainly for this reason it is indorsed and recommended by hosts of respectable medical men.

Telegraph Wires Under the Sea.

The world's submarine cables now measure about 143,011 nautical miles, in 1,168 sections. Different governments control 833 sections, or 13,382 miles, France claiming 3,269 miles; Great Britain, 1,599; Germany, 1,579, and Italy 1,027 miles. The remaining 335 cables, aggregating 129,628 miles, are owned by private companies. This great length of cable has been nearly all made on the banks of the Thames, but Italy now has a cable factory, and France will soon have two. To lay and repair the cables requires the constant service of a specially equipped fleet of thirty-seven vessels of 56,955 tons.—Great Divide.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury,

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co.

Marvelous, but True

Deaf and Blind, Caused by the Grip and an Abscess

Mrs. M. E. Wilson
Syracuse, N. Y.

What the Man in the Moon Sees.

"If you could stand on the moon," says an astronomer, "the earth would appear to you to be sixty-four times larger than the sun appears to the residents of this mundane sphere; this because the earth has eight times the diameter of the moon, therefore she must necessarily show the moonites sixty-four times as much surface as the moon shows us. The sun, on the other hand, would appear no larger to you from your observatory on the moon than it does from our globe. The earth's atmosphere being blue, it has been decided that the earth must appear as a blue ball to all outside onlookers. What a glorious sight it must be to our lunarian neighbors to look upon a bright blue, swift-revolving ball sixty-four times larger than the sun."

Not in the Country.

There are many places in Ireland to which are attached legends wherein his Satanic majesty figures. The Devil's Bowl and many others might be mentioned. A bright story of Irish wit is told in this connection by an exchange.

One day an English tourist was being shown the sights by a guide. The "Gap" and the "Bowl" had been visited, and the tourist remarked:

"What an amount of land the Devil possesses in Ireland! He must be an important personage in your country."

"Wisha, then," said the guide, promptly, "an' yer honor's right; but, like the rest iv the landlords, he's an absentee."

The Golden Rose.

The Golden Rose given by the Pope once a year, has a stem of solid gold, more than a yard long, while the blossom is in mosaic, with engraved on it the name of the reigning Pontiff, and the titles of the Royal recipient; the golden leaves of the flower are studded with diamond dust to simulate morning dew, and the price of the bauble is as much as £800 for its manufacture alone, it being always made at one special shop, close to St. Peter's at Rome.

Water Where Cork Cannot Float.

Cork is about the most buoyant substance there is, but there are points beyond which even cork cannot go. A cork sunk 200 feet deep in the ocean will not rise again to the surface, owing to the great pressure on the water. At any less distance from the surface, however, it will gradually work its way back to light once more.

"German Syrup"

Mr. Albert Hartley of Hudson, N. C., was taken with Pneumonia. His brother had just died from it. When he found his doctor could not rally him he took one bottle of German Syrup and came out sound and well. Mr. S. B. Gardiner, Clerk with Druggist J. E. Barr, Aurora, Texas, prevented a bad attack of pneumonia by taking German Syrup in time. He was in the business and knew the danger. He used the great remedy—Boschee's German Syrup—for lung diseases.

In Paint the best is the cheapest. Strictly Pure White Lead is best; properly applied it will not scale, chip, chalk, or rub off; it firmly adheres to the wood and forms a permanent base for repainting. Paints which peel or scale have to be removed by scraping or burning before satisfactory repainting can be done. When buying it is important to obtain properly made. Time has proven that white lead made by the "Old Dutch" process of slow corrosion possesses qualities that cannot be obtained by any other method of manufacture. This process consumes four to six months time, and produces the brands that have given White Lead its character as the standard paint.

"Armstrong & McKelvy"
"Beymer-Bauman" "Eckstein"
"Fahnestock" "Anchor"
"Kentucky" "Morley"
"Southern" "Shipman"
"Red Seal" "Collier"
"Davis-Chambers"

are standard brands of strictly pure Lead made by the "Old Dutch" process. You get the best in buying them. You can produce any desired color by tinting these brands of white lead with National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors.

For sale by the most reliable dealers in Paints everywhere.

AUBURN AND VICINITY.

Some Reminiscences of its Early Days and Pioneer Citizens.

Coincident with the fine progress being made on the northern road, came interest in the Detroit, Eel River & Illinois railroad which having slumbered so many years, again began to show signs of awakening to a new life under the stimulus of certain success in the former road.

Again, effort was put forth to obtain aid from the county and a petition was presented at the June session to the Board of Commissioners signed by John P. Widney and 124 others asking an appropriation to further the construction of this line, of $50,000 for which the county would be given a like amount of stock.

The board ordered a special election to be held on Aug. 7th, to vote upon the question of giving the aid asked for The vote was light but decisive. As was to have been expected, the ballots for and against were influenced by personal considerations. The strength of the affirmative was largely found in Wilmington township and Auburn precinct of Union township which together cast 589 of the 874 votes for the measure and but 13 of the 1294 which settled the matter adversely.

However, the building of the northern line went steadily forward so that by the last of October, the grading was well along, the iron was being laid, five or six train loads daily and H. H. Smith the energetic president was laying track as fast as the road bed could be prepared.

The immediate advantages thus far resulting to Auburn were the calling of public attention to the town and the steady employment at assured wages of all who chose to work, and as home labor was reinforced by others from abroad, those required homes or at least boarding, so that grocers and others felt the stimulus of increased demand. With the certainty of a railroad, sprang up a spirit of speculation. The addition of Wesley Park and John Ralston was annexed and the property with that of the existing corporation was ordered assessed for taxation at its actual cash value, as the so-called new law requires.

Stagnation had ceased and all had something to do, and, as always happens where men have invested their means in hopes of enhancing the value of their own holdings, they worked for and spoke with confidence of the immediate and prospective growth of the town, not alone in numbers but in area, business and buildings.

But with all the rush and push, the town in most regards remained as it had been and population did not increase to any marked degree.

The need of a home organ was imperative but publishers tought shy of a place in which so many of their craft had starved for want of patronage. The fault was not all in the people for the parties who essayed the role of editors and publishers were lacking in some of the most essential elements to successful journalism.

Along in June, Carrl of the DeKalb Democrat, losing heart and wanting patronage, decided to suspend and seek for some more congenial locality for carrying on printing where there were fewer newspapers and more patrons.

He was reputed honest and industrious but here he was unsuccessful and not a copy of his paper remains to base an opinion of his editorial ability. He packed his outfit and removed to Monroeville, Ind., and there published a "Democrat" of small proportions with what success is unknown.

Meanwhile, Emory Higley who had started a small paper at Butler which he had christened The Banner of Liberty concluded after a brief experience that Auburn presented a more attractive field and so removed thither. He was in hopes that his sheet would be adopted as the democratic organ but in this he was disappointed and The Auburn Times soon felt the vicissitudes common to the papers hitherto published at the county seat.

Mr. McGoingal had been induced to take an interest with Mr. Higley but the printer's road was so hard that by June he was satisfied to sever connection with the Times and return to his home in Newville.

Matters grew worse with Higley and although Radcliffe of the Air Line had bargained in the fall for his office material, he tenaciously held on with intermittent issues with a circulation of 300 or more.

There were few persons of Auburn dependent upon charity and in proportion to its population the town has been singularly exempt from the evils of pauperism but at this time the poor were without a home and humanity called for a place where the unfortunate could feel at rest.

At one time when J. Rummel was superintendent of the asylum, he was abruptly asked by Julia Lockamier an aged inmate, when he was going to take her home. He replied that this was the only home she would ever have while here. And this points to the fact that a certain abiding place despite drawbacks, is a solace to the destitute.

At a special session of the county commissioners held in Dec. '68 an appropriation was made for the purchase of land for a poor farm and when this fact became known, no less than twenty farmers offered their lands for sale Among these was the Amstutz farm situated about two miles west of Waterloo City. The officials finally selected and bought what was known as the Hostler farm, then owned by Moses Gonser. This farm is located about two miles westward of Auburn and constitutes the northeast quarter of section 25, then Richland township, now the northeast corner of Keyser township, formed in 1876 from Richland and Butler and composed of two tiers of sections from each.

The farm as purchased included 166 acres; the land is of good quality and on the premises was a new frame house. The price was $9,130 payable one third April 1 '69, '70, '71 and posession given on April 1, '69. The cost indicated a farm for the poor but not a poor farm, and as always happens where the public has to pay, additions of area, drainage, buildings, stock, utensils and improvements to say nothing of store accounts, have made an aggregate disbursement of formidable proportions.

The first in the long chain of outlays was a contract awarded in May to Thomas Baldock for an addition to the home involving an expense of $1450, and so it has continued down to the present when each grand jury makes its routine visit and reports the inadequacy of the accommodations and favors a new and costly asylum.

It is with regret that the writer found himself unable to find the first quarterly report of the superintendent filed in the office of the county auditor that the names of the first inmates might be recorded and the fact ascertained how many, if any, were still resident and something of their history.

The first superintendent of the new asylum was Conrad Miller a man well qualified in ability and disposition for the humane duty of caring for the helpless He was engaged dating from March 9, 1869 at a salary of $600 a year and remained several years. Much depends upon the woman who presides over such a household in securing neatness, order and comfort and the poor have been fortunate in finding genuine friends in Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Rummel and Mrs. Glazier, successive matrons.

The family of Mr. Miller consisting of a son Harley and two daughters Mattie and Frances, attended the Auburn schools and were valuable acquisitions in assiduity and scholarship, and Mattie became a teacher in one of the departments and honored her profession.

Provision for sickness was made by the appointment of Dr. J. H. Ford as county physician and it was ordered that thereafter no service should be rendered paupers except by him or by his direction and, mindful of religious needs, ministers of the Gospel were earnestly requested to visit the asylum at their convenience for the purpose of holding spiritual communions and public discourses.

As showing how one demand then as now was met only to give place for another, the grand jury reported in September in respect to a jail as follows: "The premises are in a dilapidated condition unsafe to keep and unfavorable to health, of inmates from dampness and want of ventilation and no remedy can be devised to alter its decayed state. A new one was urgently required but dilatory tactics prevailed on the strong ground of economy and the time for a new county jail at Auburn had not yet arrived.

Obituary.

Emeline Baily Depew was born in Ohio November 25, 1849, and died at her home in Auburn, Indiana, February 23, 1893, aged 45 years, 2 months, and 28 days.

She was united in marriage to Abram Depew December 28, 1873. To this union were born two loving children, one having passed on before, and the other left to mourn the sad departure of a loving mother. She was a faithful christian for twenty years and trusted in the Lord through all her years of affliction and suffering. She leaves a loving husband, one child, four sisters, five brothers and a host of friends to mourn her sad departure, but her crown is waiting for her and our loss is but her gain. A short service was held at the home, after which the funeral services were held at the M. E. church at Spencerville, Rev. J. J. Fred officiating.

Call not back the dear departed,
Anchored safe where storms are o'er:
On the border land we left them,
Soon to meet and part no more

When we leave this world's changes,
When we leave this world of care,
We shall find our missing loved one
In our Father's mansion fair.

BLOOD POISON

BODY COMPLETELY COVERED WITH A RASH AND RED BLOTCHES.

EVERYTHING ELSE FAILED BUT LIVURA CURED.

VITA CORBETT.

LIVURA M'F'G. Co.,

GENTLEMEN:—"My little girl had Blood Poison; her system was all run down, her body was completely covered with a rash and horrid red blotches, owing to the intense itching she could not sleep. Her digestive organs were in a very bad condition; she complained of pain in the limbs and we were very much alarmed about her. We tried everything we could think of but nothing had the desired effect until we found PITCHER'S LIVURA. She had not been taking LIVURA more than one week when her eyes looked natural again, her appetite improved, and before the second bottle had been used, the rash and blotches disappeared, the itching left, and she is now PERFECTLY WELL and has gained flesh. HEART DISEASE 30 YEARS.

GRAND ISLAND, NEB., April 8th, 1892.

Dr. Miles Medical Co., Elkhart, Ind.

GENTLEMEN: I had been troubled with HEART DISEASE FOR THE LAST 30 YEARS, and although I was treated by able physicians and tried many remedies, I grew steadily worse until I WAS COMPLETELY PROSTRATED AND CONFINED TO MY BED WITHOUT ANY HOPE OF RECOVERY. I would have very bad sinking spells, when my pulse would stop beating altogether, and it was with the greatest difficulty that my circulation could be started, which would bring me back to consciousness again. While in this condition I tried your NEW HEART CURE, and began to improve from the first, and now I am able to do a good day's work for a man 68 years of age. I give DR. MILES' NEW HEART CURE all the credit for my recovery. It is over six months since I have taken any, although I keep a bottle in the house in case I should need it. I have also used your NERVE AND LIVER PILLS, and think a great deal of them. Z. AVERY.

Out on the dumping grounds of time,
Far from abodes of taste,
Two gastly relics met and frowned
As each the other faced.

"And I the souvenir stamp."

Marvelous Work.

Many hopeless cases of lung trouble, that have been given up by physicians, have been cured by Dr Marshall's Lung Syrup. This medicine has done marvelous work that can not be surpassed. Never in the history of cough syrups has its equal been produced, a medicine that has been tested for years with unbounded results; you cannot afford to pass it by. Try it is all we ask. This medicine is guaranteed to cure, and it will satisfy you. By druggists, price .25 .50 and $1.

He asked the policeman his No.
When he woke from a much needed Slo.,
But the copper got hot
And clubbed him a lot,
Then hid on a big pile of Lo,

Far Famed.

There is no medicine that has given satisfaction equal to that of Dr Marshall's Lung Syrup. This Cough Syrup is hailed with delight from all parts of the world. There can be nothing that has so thoroughly established itself in the minds and hearts of the American people, every day we receive a hearty greeting and words of praise from some one that has been cured by this marvelous remedy. If you should need a medicine for your cough, all we ask is a trial and we are satisfied that you will use no other. It is guaranteed to cure. Price 25. 50. and $1. Sold by all dealers. 3

Cholerine in Pennsylvania.

Swickley, Penn.: We had an epidemic of cholerine, as our physicians called it, in this place lately and I made a great hit with Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy. I sold four dozen bottles of it in one week and have since sold nearly a gross. This Remedy did the work and was a big advertiser for me. Several persons who had been troubled with diarrhœa for two or three weeks were cured by a few doses of this medicine.

Rheumatism Quickly Cured.

Three days is a very short time in which to cure a bad case of rheumatism; but it can be done if the proper treatment is adopted, as will be seen by the following from James Lambert, of New Brunswick, Ill: "I was badly afflicted with rheumatism in the hips and legs, when I bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It cured me in three days. I am all right to-day: and would insist on every one who is afflicted with that terrible disease to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm and get well at once." 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord.

The New Great South American Kidney Cure.

The acknowledged superior cure and immediate relief for all derangements, painfulness and decay of the kidneys or bladder, Bright's disease, diabetes or any complaint that hurts or despoils either of these delicate organs. This new remedy has been thoroughly tested by learned physicians and found far superior to any medicine yet discovered for quickly relieving all weaknesses, aches, pains and distresses arising from disease of any part of the urinary passages. It is a great relief for the old, middle aged and children, male or female. It relieves at once retention and pain in passing water, and it is very effective in relieving prostatic troubles in the old, and for nightly incontinence of water in children, or others, caused by weakness of the bladder. It may be worth to many a hundred times its cost. This is a remedy of great value to ladies, because they are very liable to weakness and pain peculiar to their sex. Sold by Robbins & McCord, druggists, Auburn, Ind. tf

What is

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Mothers' Recommendation.

We are acquainted with many mothers in Centerville who would not be without Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house for a good many times its cost, and are recommending it every day. From personal experience we can say that it has broken up bad colds for our children.—Centerville, South Dakota, Citizen. 50 cent bottles for sale by Robbins & McCord.

CORRESPONDENCE

WATERLOO.

Our old friend Ed. R. Blattner has again gone to selling goods on the road.

Miss Ada Williamson visited her sister, Mrs McCord, at Auburn, the first of the week.

Mrs. Ida Daniels left for Fairmount, Minnesota, Saturday last, after a visit of several weeks in Waterloo.

Scott Lotzenheiser, who has been bedfast since August, is now very low at his home on Center street

The saloon war waxes hot up at the "crossing" and if no "hitch", drinks will soon be as plenty there as down town.

There is to be a test of spiritualism in Waterloo within a few days, between a zealous believer and disbeliever of modern spiritualism.

Judge McBride has moved his family to Indianapolis, or is about doing so. He has made arrangements to form a law partnership with a lawyer of that city.

Mrs. Dora Locke and daughter Lucille, arrived in Waterloo Saturday, to make a visit of some days. Last week Dell Locke and his son Leon, came back to their old home for several days.

Surveyors on the Lake Shore have been staking and platting the ground south west of the depot, the early part of this week and work is expected to begin as soon as the weather and ground are suitable.

Gideon Fisher an esteemed citizen of this place was taken to his father's home at Logansport last week and it is hoped that within a short time he will be admitted to the asylum and restored to his right mind again.

Friday evening, March 3, Artie Beidler and Blanche Hannas were married by Rev. Mr. Suman at the M. E. parsonage. The young couple are at present staying at Mr. Frank Beidler, are however, soon going to housekeeping.

Last week Friday all of John St. Clair's children, except the one living in Kansas assemblen to partake of a fine dinner with Mr. and Mrs St. Clair, the occasion being the birthday of their father. The children united in purchasing a large and handsome easy chair as their birthday gift.

Mrs. Dr. Carpenter has been quite sick for a number of days, but her fever has left her and she is now improving. Dr. Carpenter has been and is suffering yet, from some fever and a very severe cold, with tendency to pleurisy, and but little opportunity to take care of himself. Last night he intended to take a good sweat and did get into one, but was called up twice during the night, to visit patients, and is much worse to-day.

BUTLER.

Good health continues in all parts of our town.

Mrs John Crouse is still confined to her home by illness.

Addie Zeigler of Waterloo visited over Sunday with Edith Wilson.

Al. Gengnagle, Marshal Hose and O. H. Downey are are doing Washington this week.

J. A. Campbell's little daughter Florence spent spent her first day in school last week.

Mrs. Gorgar has returned from a protracted visit to Northeast Michigan with with a sister.

Father Gunsenhouser and Father Jacob Group, two of our oldest citizens are quite poorly.

Rev. Mr. Tedro has been conducting a series of meetings at the U. B. church with fair success.

John W. Boyle has been elected secretary of the Butler Manufactuaing Co., as Mr. Watts resigned.

Rev. Mr. Stone is confined to his home by illness, and as a consequence no service was held in the M. E. church last Sunday.

Rumor has it that the Butler Review is about to change hands. Brother Downey has his eye on a public position which he thinks his party will bestow him as a reward for being a good democrat.

The Press states that the uppertondom of Columbus, Ohio, is all torn up over the wholesale arrests of its leading members, for playing euchre for prizes. If our grand jury would cast an eye about them, they find that gambling is not confined to the tobacco and beer soaked realms of our saloons and slums but it is taking in the front parlors of many of our would be best families. If we have to endure the besmirking influence of gambling, let our good people unite in confining it to the slums and not contaminate our houses and our homes and our children with its pernicious influence.

SUMMIT.

Mrs. Joseph Rohm is slowly improving.

Frank Hilts moved to Smmit this week Monday.

James Clark of Ashley made our town a short call Friday

D. Shimpff from west of Hudson, was in town Wednesday.

The democrats think Hank Baker looks downhearted and blue. The people say that Rich Ervin's eyes shine like diamonds since the change in the administration.

Obituary.

John Frederick Lindorfer was born at Wauseon, Fulton county, Ohio, Jan. 26, 1863. and died at the home of his father, Henry Lindorfer, in Jackson township, DeKalb county, Ind., March 3, 1893, his age being 30 years 1 month and 6 days He was married to Miss Maggie Adams, of Kerms, Texas, who with one child survives him, as well as the father, mother and four brothers. Mr. Lindorfer was a machinist and a good workman, was a kind husband and a devoted son. He was baptized in infancy, and a few weeks before his death, he turned to Christ and so died in the faith of the Lord. He came home to visit his people, but consumption had obtained a hold on him and he was not able to return to his home in Texas, at which his wife was, and she was not able to be at his funeral. The funeral service was held at the German Lutheran church in Auburn on Sunday, March 5, and he was laid to rest in Woodlawn cemetery.

The McKaye Spectatorium.

A novel and colossal enterprise is that which bears the name of "The McKaye Spectatorium," which is being fostered and pushed to completion by the Columbian Celebration Company at Chicago. This comprises the erection of a building of massive proportions and picturesquely interesting design, in which shall be presented the many strange and daring ideas that Mr. Steele McKaye conceived as a part of the essentials for a grand and noble dramatic and lyric presentation of the great historic discovery which this exposition is to celebrate. A year ago Mr. McKaye explainen his ideas to a party of Chicago capitalists, among them being George M. Pullman, Lyman J. Gage, Murry Nelson, Benj. Butterwoath, E. D. Butler, Judge Leroy D. Thoman, Gen'l A. C. McClurg, Fred and Clarence Peck, H. E. Bucklen, E. W. Gillett, J. O. Hinkley, H. E. Weaver and others of like prominence. These men immediately grasped the feasibility of Mr. McKaye's plan and saw in it an opportunity to give the people of Chicago and the world a production that should surpass anything ever attempted, and they furnish the capital, about $2,000,000, to carry these plans to an end. That end is rapidly approaching and within a month or more the model, which cost $30,000 will be shown to the newspaper men. Those who have seen the model, even in its first stages of development, say that the presentment which will be given in "The McKaye Spectatorium" will surpass every other feature of the fair, both in its colossal proportions and its astonishing audacity. The largest traveling derrick ever raised for practical use or experimental purposes is the one which will be used in placing the great steel roof. This derrick is an immense affair, weighing nearly 70 tons and is necessary to place in position the 1,000 tons of steel which will be used in the roof of this building. This derrick is 180 feet high and it was raised only after the most strenuous exertion. The first four attempts made being failures on account of the tackle used not being strong enough. The feat, one of the most extraordinary ever known to modern engineering, was successfully accomplished on the fifth trial.

Pleasure and Profit,

The desire for residing in a climate possessing qualities alike adapted to the benefits of people of weak lungs, catarrh, delicate throats, etc., is growing stronger from year to year. The mere accumulation of money at the expense of health is not regarded in the same favor as formerly. The combination of pleasure profit is now regarded as most desirable. In no place in America is there a point where this combination exists to a greater degree than Galveston county, Texas. The wonderful growth of North Galveston and the handsome profits that are being steadily made there, both by capitalists and men of small means, has been attracting the attention of investors all over the United States. The literature of the North Galveston Ass'n giving fully detailed information on the subject can be obtained from Rickel & Sprott, local agents of the Association. The address of the General Office being The North Galveston Ass'n, Box 963, Minneapolis, Minn.

Popular School Music.

The Merry Melodies Series of School Music Books is now acknowledged to be not only the cheapest but also the best published At present there two books of the series, viz: Merry Melodies, No. 1, and Silvery Notes, No. 2. They contain some of the most beautiful songs of the age. These books contain 48 pages each, bound in strong manilla, and over forty songs each. The price is only 15 cents per copy, prepaid, or the two for 25 cents. Every person who sings and every teacher should have these books. They can be had by addressing (with the money) S. C. Hanson, Educational Publisher, Williamsport, Indiana.

We present in this column a list which has been selected from our choicest properties, and are the best and cheapest.

TOWN PROPERTIES.

An elegant two-story frame dwelling with all necessary out buildings, small fruits and all the modern conveniences which go to make a beautiful and pleasant home. Will be sold cheap for cash, or will accept two-thirds cash; balance in one year,

A very desirable residence property on North Van Buren street. This property has good, almost new buildings, well, cistern and some fruits, and a price that will astonish you.

A vacant lot on West 7th street.

A nice residence on Seventh street right handy to schools and churches, and within a two-minutes' walk of the Court House.

A most desirable residence on south Jackson street, which we offer at a bargain, and will give the purchaser the privilege of paying out in monthly payments, if he so desires. Terms, $500 cash; balance in monthly payments.

FARMS.

We offer, first, a splendid Seventy acres in Union township, well tiled, good fences. Land that cannot be beat for gardening and for small fruits. Will sell cheap for cash, or on the most favorable terms on long time. Lays within three miles of Auburn.

Eighty acres of good land, within one mile of Newville. Good buildings, orchard, and, better soil cannot be found in DeKalb county. Easy prices, and terms to suit the purchaser.

We have a number of farms and town properties on our books, which we are not allowed to advertise, because of the simple fact, that they are offered so cheap that were it known the public would draw the conclusion that the owners are hard up for ready cash, which we all know would be a mistake.

We are agents for those lands in Kansas and Nebraska, which can be had on the most favorable terms ever offered, to-wit: The purchaser makes a small cash payment, just enough to show that he is in earnest, then yearly, thereafter, he pays (delivers at the nearest market) one-half of the crops raised on the land. If crops are unfavorable and he raises no crop, then he makes no payment that year, but is carried over until next year, and so on, until he pays out. Shall we have your application for one of these farms?

We shall be pleased to see you at any time and show,
Free of Charge, any of the properties we have on our lists. Write or call on us for any information regarding rates, time of trains to any place on "God's green earth," and remember that the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad pays the hack fare to all points in competition where the fare is $2. or more.

A GOOD CROP OF NEWS

GATHERED FROM ALL PARTS OF THE WORLD.

The Strike on the Toledo, Ann Arbor and Northern Michigan a Sure Thing—Horrible Brutality in Alabama—Two Women Cremated—Gibbons Knocks Out Daly.

LOYAL TO DEMPSEY.

Pittsburgh Knights of Labor Stand by Their Chief in His Troubles.

Pittsburgh special: Although Hugh Dempsey, Master Workman of District Assembly No. 3, Knights of Labor, has been sentenced to seven years in the Western Penitentiary in connection with the Homestead poisoning cases, the fealty of the association has not swerved from him in the least. If all efforts fail and he is compelled to undergo the sentence of the Court he will still remain Master Workman of the Knights of Labor for the term for which he was elected. During his incarceration Mr. Vincent, the foreman of the district, will discharge Mr. Dempsey's duties jointly with his own, and no change in the official status of the organization will be made. The association is still hopeful that a new trial can be secured for Dempsey and every effort is being exerted in this direction.

Horrible Brutality Practiced in Alabama.

A horrible story of white capping comes from Cherokee County, Alabama. Wylie and Will Pruitt are two respectable farmers who, some time ago, informed revenue officers of the whereabouts of an illicit still. The other night twenty-six men went to their house, dragged them out of bed, stripped them and gave them seventy-eight lashes apiece, each of the white caps giving three strokes. The whipping was done with hickory switches and was horribly brutal. While it was progressing the women and children of their families were required to come out and view the spectacle. The victims recognized the whippers and have sworn out warrants for their arrest.

Want a Receiver.

An application has been made in Indianapolis for a receiver for the Louisville, New Albany and Chicago road. Attorney Trissal says the complaint is caused by the fear of the minority stockholders that they will be frozen out in the pending re-organization of the stock. The complaint charges that the total management of the company is in the hands of the directors while the actual managers are Samuel Thomas and C. S. Brice. The complaint further recites that the management is not conforming with the Indiana law in that they maintain an office in New York city, instead of within the State of Indiana.

Will Go Out.

Toledo special: All attempts to effect a settlement of the trouble between the Toledo, Ann Arbor & Northern Michigan Railroad and its engineers have failed and the engineers and firemen will go out. This was decided upon at a conference between Chiefs Arthur and Sargent. These gentlemen sought no further conference with the company, nor did the latter desire further audience with the heads of the engineers and firemen.

Horrible Cremation of the Living.

Several men working in a field near Mount Juliet, Tenn., were attracted by screams from two women working in an adjoining field. They found Mrs. John W. Jones and her 15-year-old daughter burning to death. Their clothing was set on fire from a burning brush heap. Despite all the efforts of the men the women received such injuries that they died within a few minutes.

The World's Fair.

The Department of State has received a dispatch from the American Minister at Athens stating that a law has been passed by the Greek Chamber of Deputies exempting all exhibits at the World's Fair from export duty and admitting all goods purchased at the Chicago fair, as samples, free of import duty.

General Rosecrans' Health.

Washington special: A private letter has been received here from General Rosecrans, Register of the Treasury now in California, stating that his health has improved very much of late. General Rosecrans also states that he does not contemplate resigning his position as Register of the Treasury.

Blaine's Biographer.

The announcement is publicly made by Gail Hamilton (Miss Abigail Dodge) that with the co-operation of Mr. Blaine's family she is preparing a biography of the late James G. Blaine, but cannot yet say when it will be completed and issued.

Won by Gibbons.

There was more than the usual interest taken in the fight between Austin Gibbons of Patterson, and Mike Daly of Bangor, Me., at New Orleans. After thirty-one hard fought rounds, Gibbons was declared the winner.

Dynamite Bombs.

Rome special: Two dynamite bombs were discovered in the house of Signor Brin, Minister of Foreign Affairs. Another bomb was found in front of a local prison.

Fire at Saginaw, Mich.

The large dry kiln of the Palmerton wooden ware works at Saginaw, Mich., burned, causing a loss of $17,000. Fireman Lange was seriously injured by a fall.

Through a Bridge.

Lima (Ohio) special: A Chicago & Erie freight train became derailed fifty feet from the Lima bridge. The train wobbled along until it struck the bridge, which was so badly wrecked that train and bridge dropped fifty feet to the bottom of the Ottawa River. Twenty-one cars are a complete wreck, and trains will have to be transferred around to the Pennsylvania road by way of Delphos and Forest until a new bridge is built. Strange to relate, the crew all escaped, as the engine got over the bridge before it went down. The wreckers report that two bodies are in the wreck, but as the trainmen have all been accounted for, the supposition is that they are tramps. The bridge is iron and wood, 110 feet long and fifty feet high.

A CYCLONE'S WORK.

Towns Wiped Entirely Out of Existence.

Atlanta (Ga.) special: The cyclone which struck the town of Greenville, left not a single building standing, but strange to say the only person killed was a colored man who had no house in which to live. It was about 8:30 o'clock, when most of the people in the isolated little town of 200 inhabitants had retired, that the crash of falling buildings awoke them. It was an hour of terror which followed the effort of the stricken people to find out where they were. Court-house, churches, and residences were all gone. A terrific rain followed, in which the houseless people were drenched. The reports which have been coming in give many instances of casualties involving loss of property and life.

The cyclone entered Georgia, south of Columbus, and followed two tracks throughout the State. In Piedmont Mrs. Ross was killed. The village of Rock reports five deaths in that neighborhood. In Troupe County the dead are James T. Hairston, Sam Henderson and wife, Cullin Fannin, and Mrs. Butts.

From Barnesville comes the news of the death of Miss Daisy Hawkins and two colored children. A telegraph message received in LaGrange from Odessa reports six deaths there from the storm. There is a long list of injured from various points. Many of the persons are seriously hurt.

The town of Toonisuba, Miss., was swept from the face of the earth. It is reported that ten people were killed. At Marion, Miss., every house was blown down. Among the killed are Mrs. Burton Meador and daughter Myra.

SAD ACCIDENT

A frightful accident occurred at the launching of a schooner at F. W. Wheeler & Co.'s ship yards at West Bay City, Mich. The steambarge Kittie M. Forbes lay frozen in the ice on the north side of the slip, in which the ice had been broken before the launch. Hundreds of boys and many men flocked to the steamer and climbed to her hurricane deck. They were warned of their danger and told that the swell from the schooner when launched would knock them off, but many remained, the view being very good from that point.
